SECRETARY RAPS OPPONENTS OF AAA IN ADDRESS HERE

"Shortsighted Foes" of Processing Tax Misleading People, Cabinet Member Tells Farmers and Cotton Dealers.

WARNING SOUNDED FOR TEXTILE MEN

Wallace Makes Jefferson Birthday Address Following Dinner in His Honor at Driving Club.

Defending the cotton processing tax, Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture and keyman in the administration's farm program, declared here yesterday that misrepresentation was being used in an effort to rally opposition to the tax.

The agricultural secretary discussed the cotton situation in an address at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Wesley Memorial auditorium, addressing a large group of farmers and cotton dealers, and spoke before the Jeffersonian Union last night at the same place. He arrived in Atlanta at 3:30 o'clock on the Piedmont Limited and went immediately to the church auditorium for the address.

More than 1,600 persons, the greater majority of them cotton farmers and agricultural agents, attended the late afternoon meeting. They represented half a dozen southern states. The afternoon session was held under the auspices of the cotton division of the AAA.

Is Guest at Dinner.

Secretary Wallace was the guest of honor at an informal dinner tendered him at the Piedmont Driving Club. At the close of the dinner, Major Clark Howell Jr., vice president and general manager of The Constitution, made a brief speech in which he welcomed the cabinet official to Georgia and expressed the desire that Mr. Wallace return at a time when he would have the time to become better acquainted with the state and its inhabitants.

In his night address Mr. Wallace said that Thomas Jefferson recognized that property rights are a shifting concept, and if living now he would be in the forefront fighting the battle against such organizations as the present-day Liberty League.

Introduced by Welton.

Secretary Wallace was introduced to his audience yesterday afternoon by Philip Welton, chairman of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia, who retires from

KERR-SMITH ACT IS HELD ILLEGAL

Measure Regulating Tobacco Production Ruled Unconstitutional.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 13.—(AP) Federal Judge Charles L. Dawson today held unconstitutional the Kerr-Smith act regulating tobacco production.

He acted in the suit of Penn brothers, Fayette county growers, to enjoin United States District Attorney Mac Swinford and Internal Revenue Collector Seldon R. Glenn from enforcing the law.

The test was the first of the law in any court.

Holding a temporary injunction was unnecessary, Dawson ordered $7,000 in taxes, impounded pending the litigation, returned to the Penns.

The law imposes a tax of 25 percent of the sale price of the 1934 crop on all tobacco grown without contracts with the secretary of agriculture, and 33-1/3 per cent on the uncontracted portion of the 1935 crop.

Last year the government collected $3,000,000 in Kerr-Smith taxes, half of which came from Kentucky.

To Keep Up With Huey, Gassaway Retains Guard

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(UP)—Peter L. Gassaway, Ohio's ex-convict congressman and No. 1 baiter of Huey Long, got himself some bodyguards today.

"I ain't gonna be outdone by Long," Gassaway explained as he strode down the steps of the capitol before a battery of newsreel cameras.

The bodyguards strode with him—four of them. Inquisitive reporters found they were Martin Sweeney Jr., 13, son of Representative Martin Sweeney, democrat, Ohio; Jack Harter, 14, son of Representative Dow Harter, democrat, Ohio; and Fred Johnson, 11, all house page boys, and Jim Gassaway, 7, seventh of eight little Gassaways.

The guards were armed with guns—cap pistols, especially purchased for the occasion.

Kline Bros. Lease Old Davison-Paxon Building for Total of $650,000.

The largest real estate transaction in the Whitehall street retail shopping district in more than a year and the second largest deal in several years was consummated yesterday with the leasing to Kline Brothers Department Stores of New York the building on Whitehall street, near Hunter street, once occupied by the Davison-Paxon-Stokes Company. The deal yesterday climaxed a week of real estate activities in Atlanta involving almost $1,000,000.

The building, leased effective March 1, 1936, for an estimated rental of approximately $650,000 over a period of years, has a 74-foot frontage on Whitehall street and extends through to Broad street, where there is a frontage of 100 feet. Part of the building is seven stories high, while the remaining portion has three floors. The total floor area of the building is estimated at 70,000 square feet.

Remodeling Planned.

The large property will be remodeled and reconstructed into a modern department store at a cost of between $40,000 and $50,000, and will include new fronts, fixtures and equipment, it was announced.

Negotiations were handled by E. A. Erwin, vice president of the Draper-Owens Company, who had been in New York several weeks previous to closing the deal.

The lease, local real estate men stated, marks the largest department store development in Atlanta since

THREAT OF STRIKE IN RUBBER ENDS

Management, Workers Make Concessions in Agreement at Capital.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP)—American Federation of Labor chiefs stick it out here Sunday.

They threatened strike in three large Akron (Ohio) rubber factories after obtaining concessions from the management.

The federation lost its fight, however, for immediate elections to determine whether employees in the Goodrich and Goodyear plants preferred the federation to company unions as their representative for collective bargaining.

William Green, federation president, and representatives of the Rubber Workers' Council, A. F. of L. unit in the rubber industry, agreed that the rubber workers should not strike until the company court appeals from labor board election orders were concluded. This may take months.

Tonight's agreement, signed after three days of negotiations with Secretary Perkins, are subject to ratification by the rubber workers at mass meetings in Akron tomorrow.

Speaking for himself and the local union presidents, Coleman Claherty, federation organizer in Akron, said: "As far as we are concerned we are inclined to favor the agreement."

The four-point agreement provides:

1.—That the management would keep representatives of any group of employees for collective bargaining.

2.—That the company would post on its bulletin boards any changes in hours, wages, or working condition arrived at in these negotiations.

3.—That the federation would recognize postponement of Labor Relations Board-ordered elections in the Firestone and Goodrich plants until the company's court appeals were concluded.

4.—That there should be no strike or lockout or discrimination pending the outcome of the appeal. Further, that any grievances not satisfactorily settled should be referred to a fact-finding board of three to be approved by the secretary of labor.

Representatives of the three companies signed the agreement. Green, Claherty and presidents of the three local unions in Akron also signed, but the agreement is subject to approval by federation members in the three plants. Mass meetings will be held tomorrow.

Japan May Slash Lint Buying If U. S. Continues Interference

TOKYO, April 12.—(AP)—Japan hinted plainly today that the United States' reported efforts to deprive her of her Latin American markets might cost the American cotton grower some of his big market in Japan.

A statement from the foreign office handed to the Japanese press said United States commercial interests were attempting to exclude Japanese products from Central and South America.

If Nippon's exports to those markets are restricted, the statement added, "it will affect our purchasing power, especially with reference to United States cotton, and will consequently react unfavorably upon America's export trade to Japan."

United States cotton sales to Japan average some $100,000,000 annually. They constitute the largest single item in America's agricultural export trade. Sales last year totaled slightly more than all Japan's exports to the United States—$401,000,000 yen, against $399,000,000 yen (the yen is currently quoted at about 28.5 United States cents).

$1,200,000 FUND SENT TO GOVERNOR FOR APRIL RELIEF

Funds Received From Washington Despite Announced Omission of State From April Rolls.

Checks totaling $1,200,000 were received Friday and yesterday by Governor Eugene Talmadge, presumably for April relief work in this state, despite the fact that April relief quotas were announced in Washington last night with Georgia's name omitted.

The omission was believed to be another step in the long-drawn out battle between Georgia's chief executive and Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator.

Relief funds are regularly sent to Talmadge to turn over to the Georgia Emergency Relief Administration but last night Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state administrator, could throw no light on the omission order or on the receipt of the checks by Talmadge.

"I haven't been informed as to Mr. Hopkins' plans," she told The Constitution.

Miss Shepperson said her administration had enough money on hand to carry on relief work in Georgia to May 1, and at present she will continue as usual.

Governor Talmadge has had many run-ins with Hopkins and the relief administrator has said that Georgia should do something for its school boys receiving federal aid.

Following the release of April relief quotas in Washington last night, Aubrey Williams, assistant administrator, said "It was assumed today that Georgia had enough to carry on for the present time," and declined to be quoted further. Hopkins had nothing to say at all.

Miss Shepperson asserted she did not know if the $1,200,000 Talmadge has received is for April relief here or not, and the chief executive could not be reached last night.

Since Administrator Hopkins removed the administration of relief from the governor's hands soon after he took over the federal relief setup, the checks have continued to come to the governor, who signs them and turns them over to Miss Shepperson.

Speculation was rife both in Washington and here.

Italian Ambassador Stops Here

The European situation in less-alarming now than it was before the World War. The author of this statement is Signor Augusto Rosso, Italian ambassador to the United States. The ambassador paused briefly in Atlanta yesterday en route from New Orleans to Washington by Eastern Airways plane.

"Europe still remembers the lessons of the last war," the ambassador declared. "There is but little good—even to the victors—in war."

Asked about his opinion of the value of peace negotiations, he said: "There has been a fair amount of good accomplished in the discussions. However, as Mussolini has said, we must not

15 ARRESTS BREAK BIG LIQUOR 'RING'

U. S. Agents Nab 12 of Prisoners in Raid on Walker Street Garage.

The arrest of 15 men by alcohol tax unit investigators yesterday "broke the back" of the largest wholesale liquor ring in Atlanta, the agents claimed, and climaxed several weeks of intensive investigation by the agents.

Twelve of the men were arrested when the agents raided a garage and Sam Johnson, of Haygood avenue; Willie Jackson, of Houston street; Ed Smith, of Trainer street, and Nick Evans, who gave no address.

Hearing on the charges against the 15 prisoners was set for 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon before Commissioner Griffith.

Bonds of $300 each were set for the following negroes who were taken in the raid: J. C. Sell, of Johnnie street; Sam Johnson, of Haygood avenue; Willie Jackson, of Houston street; Ed Smith, of Trainer street, and Nick Evans, who gave no address.

The foreign office statement, issued during the visit of American industrial leaders headed by W. Cameron Forbes, former American minister to Tokyo and now governor-general of the Philippines, said "interested concerns in the United States," which fear loss of their Latin American markets are "feverishly agitating for

CONFEREES CALL PARLEY TO DECIDE AUSTRIA QUESTION

United Support for France's Appeal to Geneva Against Germany's Treaty Violation in Rearmament Also Promised.

CONFERENCE ENDS AFTER 18 HOURS

Three Nations Propose Eastern Pact Linking Italy, Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia.

By the Associated Press.

In Europe's capitals, opinion of the outcome of the Stresa parley was mixed.

LONDON—Sunday newspapers expressed different degrees of disappointment at the outcome of the conference, one political writer declaring "every real problem was postponed."

BERLIN—An official communiqué taken to be an accusation that the powers at Stresa fear non-fulfillment of the proposed non-aggression pact, declared self-contradictory their apparent desire to strengthen it with military assistance provisions.

PARIS—Reliable sources said France would proceed with plans for an accord with Russia despite Adolf Hitler's offer to join an eastern pact.

NICE, France—Speakers before the Congress of the Republican Federation, rightists party, voiced new warnings of the "German peril" and gratification that Russia's army will be on the French side.

NANCY, France—Mobilized guards were assigned to help tighten control of the German border.

VIENNA—Austria, apparently saw little hope that the proposed Danubian non-interference pact would effectively protect her independence.

MOSCOW—Russian observers thought the Franco-soviet agreement and Germany's willingness to enter an eastern pact offered new hope for some final general agreement.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

STRESA, April 13.—Italy, France and England closed tonight their history-making conference, asserting they had reached full agreement on ways to save Europe from war.

The tri-power parley was called after Adolf Hitler's dramatic decision to rearm the reich, which France, in an appeal to the League of Nations, declared perilous to peace.

For the first time since the Paris peace conference the heads of the three great western European powers—Benito Mussolini of Italy, Pierre-Etienne Flandin of France, Ramsay MacDonald of England—met face-to-face to talk over Europe's prospects for peace.

After 18 busy hours at the conference table, these were the authoritative reported results:

1. A German offer to enter an eastern non-aggression pact provided she is exempt from any mutual military assistance clause.

2. Decision to call Danubian nations into conference at Rome May 20 to discuss ways of keeping little Austria independent.

3. Aited support for France's appeal to Geneva against Germany's treaty violation in rearming.

4. Approval of the principle of an air pact for immediate aerial assistance against an aggressor in western Europe.

5. Approval of Austrian, Hungarian and Bulgarian rearmament to some degree yet unspecified.

NEW HOP PLANNED IN STRATOSPHERE

Army Captain Will Seek New Altitude Record in June.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 12.—(UP)—Efforts to set a new world altitude record will be made at the forthcoming second flight into the stratosphere by the United States army corps National Geographic balloon, planned for June, Captain Albert W. Stevens, who will command the flight, disclosed.

"Every precaution has been taken for a successful flight," Captain Stevens said. "It is hoped that the flight will accomplish a new world's record for altitude while gathering the scientific information."

Inspected Instruments.
Captain Stevens was here to inspect new spectrographs, and optical glass windows being constructed for the balloon at the Bausch and Lomb laboratories, and several specially designed cameras under construction at the Folmer Graflex and Eastman Kodak plants.

In the June flight, Captain Stevens said, the non-explosive helium gas will be used to inflate the bag, eliminating the necessity of folding the bag fabric to exclude air when the balloon leaves the ground. It will be the first time that helium will be used for a stratosphere flight, the captain said.

Stronger Fabric.
The new balloon will have a top fabric 33 per cent stronger than last year's and a bottom 50 per cent stronger. Since helium has only nine-tenths the lifting capacity of hydrogen, the gas used in the last flight, the new balloon's capacity has been increased 3,700,000 cubic feet, which will give it a similar theoretical ceiling to last year's.

He said Russia also is planning a stratosphere flight this summer with a balloon called Osoaviachim II, now under construction at Leningrad. The Russian balloon, he said, is expected to rise 82,000 feet (more than 15 miles). The Russian bag, however, will be of 1,765,540 cubic feet capacity, much smaller than the American entry for stratosphere honors.

SMYTHE GAMBRELL IS NAMED MEMBER OF PHI BETA KAPPA

E. Smythe Gambrell, prominent Atlanta attorney, has been presented with the gold key of Phi Beta Kappa membership, highest scholastic award of American universities, in recognition of his record made 20 years ago at the University of South Carolina.

When the Atlanta attorney graduated with an A. B. degree at South Carolina in 1915 the university had no Phi Beta Kappa chapter, but the honorary fraternity later established one there.

Mr. Gambrell, a member of the Atlanta firm of Haas, Gambrell & Gardner, took his law degree at Harvard in 1922. An authority on aeronautical law, the American Bar Association has named him on the aeronautical law commission.

He is a member of the Phi Delta Phi national legal fraternity and of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity.

PROCESSING LEVY TO STAY—WALLACE

that post on June 30. Mr. Wallace said: "My friends, the world of animals resembles the world of men. You know, of course, that there are pigs and horses and dogs and cats and birds and the purebred winners of ribbons. As with pigs, so with horses. Contrast the ring-boned, spavined tatterdemalion of the ragman with a Man o' War, creature of mettle and spirit.

"As with horses and pigs, so with public officials. There are public officials and public officials. Some—God thank a few—are possessed of such colossal intolerance of the opinion of others, that knowledge is powerless to inform their ignorance. Others—God wot, too few—are so intelligent, so open-minded, so intelligent, that knowledge enlightens herself in endeavoring with wisdom and understanding.

"Ladies and gentlemen, it is my privilege to present to you a public servant of a latter sort and Mr. Secretary, in welcoming you here today, let me assure you that in entering upon Georgia soil, you enter the household of your friends. The Honorable Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace.

Foes of Program Warned.

After accusing foes of the processing tax of being shortsighted, Mr. Wallace warned processors and handlers of farm commodities they might face "something more extreme" if they succeed in destroying the agricultural adjustment program.

Reiterating that the cotton processing tax would be continued, the secretary charged that "the effort of certain textile manufacturers to get rid of the processing tax is the spearhead of the movement, against the cotton program."

"The current resistance to the pending amendments to the agricultural adjustment act is really an attack on the entire program," he said. "The forces that have been set in motion could become so intense and so powerful as to destroy the whole

NEUTRALITY BILL OKAY IS FORECAST

Pittman Certain of Speedy Passage of Nye, Clark Resolutions.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(UP)—Veering away from a proposal that he said might raise the "League" issue again, Chairman Pittman, of the senate foreign relations committee, today predicted speedy approval of two other measures intended to safeguard American neutrality.

Pittman's committee will take up next week the Nye and Clark resolutions, to impose a virtual embargo on private loans to warring nations and to keep American citizens out of war-affected zones by refusing them passports. Pittman, democrat, Nevada, saw little to prevent a quick and favorable report of both.

Other legislators were preparing measures that would empower the president to declare outright general embargoes on munitions shipments. Among them was a resolution to authorize such embargoes in agreement with other countries, directed at "aggressor nations."

Pittman said he saw little possibility that the latter proposal would be enacted. He predicted that it would raise once more the whole question of the League of Nations and of avoidance of foreign entanglements.

Despite direct pressure, Mr. Roosevelt was unable to obtain senate approval this session for American adherence to the World Court.

The senate munitions committee, of which Nye, republican, Ohio, is chairman, and Clark, democrat, Missouri, a member, today arranged to question Ben Smith, Wall Street operator, on Monday. The banking committee tried unsuccessfully for months to place Smith on its witness stand when it was investigating stock market practices.

Foes Short sighted.
"My own feeling is that the very groups who are fighting the agricultural adjustment act are shortsighted and perhaps unwittingly might force upon this nation drastic measures which would do much injury and accomplish no good.

"For the sake of temporary gain, the processors and handlers of farm commodities might find themselves faced with something more extreme if they succeed in overthrowing the agricultural adjustment act.

"I would sound a solemn warning to these groups and in the national interest appeal to them to take the longer view. While this nation is deciding whether it will take the lead in an effort to restore an international economic order, it is essential to permit these adjustments in this difficult period of transition.

"Farmers are poorly organized and it is difficult for them to make their protests articulate. For that reason, the government has a special duty to see that farmers get a fair break. But I sometimes wonder whether the few so-called leaders can be made to appear so powerful that the real interest of agriculture which is, of course, the interest of the public interest, may be sacrificed.

Asks Sectional Alliance.

"Farmers everywhere need to do something to express their point of view as to whether they want the mechanism of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to be broken or to be maintained.

"He told the farmers that the apparent alliance between the great agricultural sections of the south and the middle-west.

"If the cotton program goes by the board, the corn, wheat, tobacco and other programs will follow. The unity of the farmers will be broken."

"He told the farmers that the apparent alliance between the great agricultural sections of the south and the middle-west.

Basis for Textile Recovery.
He said the textile industry "would have nothing to gain but a great deal to lose if it contributed to dismantling of the cotton program."

"The cotton program is really an attack on the textile industry recovery through the population, including the city workers and the farmers.

"Sixteen cents a pound for cotton, which is about the present cost to the mill in price plus tax, has not in the past been regarded as an unfairly high price. It has been a system of distress in the textile industry but of prosperous business conditions in the country as a whole."

Turning to recent cotton, he said the cotton program was for the benefit of tenants and sharecroppers off the land, Wallace said:

Claim "Ridiculous."
"I have seen this claim published several times in forms so extreme as to be ridiculous. Showing on their face that they originated with people who know nothing about the south, its people or the cotton industry."

"What are the facts? One is that the number of people on farms in the south increased 1,250,000 from 1930 to 1934. In Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana the increase in that time was 440,000."

He said solution of the problems of tenantry and share-cropping was "not to be found in discarding a program which has meant substantially larger cotton income to divide among the farmers, but rather in agricultural and industrial recovery."

In discussing the situation in Arkansas, where serious unrest exists among share-croppers, the agricultural secretary charged that the vast interests were working in unison with communists to foment strife. "It is one of those occasions where the extreme right and the extreme left are working hand in hand, to the undoing of the middle class."

Tax Paid by Consumer.

Going back to the processing tax, Wallace said the levy was paid by the consumer, not by the mill, and that the increase in retail prices due to the tax was "so small as to be a minor burden on the consumer."

"It seems logical," he said, "to con-

Work on the new Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church auditorium at Peachtree road and Wesley avenue, will start within the next 10 days, it was announced yesterday by Fred W. Patterson, chairman, and J. M. Harrison, co-chairman of the building committee of the church. George Harwell Bond is the architect, with H. W. Beers in charge of construction.

The edifice, which will be constructed at a cost of approximately $150,000, will complete the church structure, of which the Sunday school auditorium and rooms, comprising the basement and sub-basement, have been complete since 1930. Since July, of that year, the congregation has occupied the Sunday school quarters.

The Sunday school section cost approximately $128,000, making the cost of the entire structure, when complete, $278,000.

The Sunday school auditorium has a capacity of 1,000, while the church auditorium to be built will accommodate 1,250 persons. The church has a membership of about 2,200.

Armand May Calls on Wallace To Eliminate Processing Tax

In an open letter to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Armand May, Atlanta industrialist and economist, yesterday called upon the secretary to take steps to eliminate the cotton processing tax and "doubt the wisdom" of pegging the price of cotton at 12 cents per pound because of the disastrous effect it has on the foreign marketing of the product.

In a lengthy summation of the situation, Mr. May, who is president of American Associated Companies of Atlanta, vice president of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, regional chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council and adviser to the executive committee of the Export-Import bank of Washington, declared he was not criticizing the policies of the federal government but pointed out that he was following the suggestion of President Roosevelt made several months ago in which he promised to retract steps as soon as mistakes were discovered.

As he made public the letter, Mr. May declared that under present conditions three separate burdens have been placed on cotton in competition with the world, asserting that "they are sure to be disastrous in the years to come." He listed these burdens as follows:

Curtailed crop. The cotton crop which has raised prices in the United States but which has been an encouragement to all other cotton growing nations to increase their acreage. In this connection he pointed out that while the United States decreased its production 45 per cent, India increased production 8 per cent, Egypt 22 per cent and Brazil 38 per cent.

Pegging the price at 12 cents. In this connection he pointed out that although the price of cotton was cluded that the best way to help the textile industry would be to increase general industrial production and labor pay rolls rather than eliminate the cotton tax.

Processing tax and benefit payments. The only effective tariff the cotton farmer has ever had. The farmer has not been making any drive to know of to knock off the textile tariff.

Charges Misrepresentation.
He said although the administration had decided against substitution of work relief funds for processing tax, the cotton farmer had been misled by the public.

He said that the cotton farmer had been misled by the public.

Cotton Interests Hit.
Calling attention to Jefferson's warnings against treacherous emissaries, Wallace declared "at this very moment on a topic in which the south is vitally interested we are witnessing an extraordinary drive to shake the prudence and self-possession of the people. I refer to the drive of certain cotton interests to wreck the cotton production control program."

"The effort is made to swing labor into line against the farmer, and, most amazing of all, to arouse the farmer against himself. It is my guess that neither labor nor agriculture will permit itself to be duped."

Wallace, who earlier today in another speech defended the cotton processing tax, declared, "If I thought for a moment that the cotton processing tax was unfair to labor, industry or to the consumer, I would take what action I could to correct that injustice. No such evidence has yet been presented."

DAVIS WARNS WHOLE AAA MAY BE SCRAPPED
WASHINGTON, April 13.—(UP)—A warning that the entire AAA may be scrapped if the proposed amendments to the adjustment act fail to pass in congress was voiced today by Chester C. Davis, farm administrator.

He said that "unless the act can be made fully effective as a national instrument, serving the 2,000,000 and Ernest F. Brown, treasurer. In addition to Mr. Patterson and Mr. Harrison, co-chairmen, the building committee includes H. W. Beers, Carlton W. Binns, Ernest F. Brown, H. S. Collingsworth, J. G. Dodson, Harrison Jones, George T. Marchmont, Mrs. George Matheson, P. C. McDuffie, Mrs. Spann W. Milner, Dean S. Paden, E. Clem Powers, John S. Spalding and L. A. Witherspoon.

Dr. Knight came to Atlanta in June, 1931, as pastor of the Second Baptist church. He formerly filled charges at First Baptist church, Ashland, Ky.; Calvary Baptist church, Richmond, Va.; First Baptist church, Clarksville, Tenn.; Immanuel Baptist church, Nashville, Tenn.; and Delmar Baptist church, St. Louis, Mo.

Church Formed by Merger.
The Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church was created by the merger of two churches, the Second Baptist and the Ponce de Leon Baptist, in 1932.

The Ponce de Leon Baptist was organized in 1904, and until its removal to the present edifice in 1930, occupied the church at Ponce de Leon and Piedmont avenues.

The Second Baptist was organized in 1854, being one of the oldest congregations in the city. Prior to the merger in 1932 it occupied the edifice at Washington and Mitchell streets.

The late Rev. Junius W. Millard was the first pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist, coming to Atlanta from Baltimore, where he was pastor of a leading Baptist church there. The Ponce de Leon congregation was formed in 1904 and, in a year and a half, had not only achieved a reputation it has since retained, of generous giving to all causes, but had raised sufficient money to erect a church that cost $35,000, an amount considered much larger in those days than it would be today.

Dedicated in 1906.
It was on May 6, 1906, that the church on Ponce de Leon was dedicated with a special program of exercises which included a number of important musical features.

The Second Baptist church, formed on September 1, 1854, had an initial membership of 19. None of them wealthy, they, nevertheless, were able to buy a lot at Washington and Mitchell streets and to build a church that cost $14,000.

This building was torn down in 1930 to make way for a new structure that was erected at a cost of $114,000. This building still stands. Many other churches have sprung from the old Second Baptist and its history reads like a history of Atlanta and Fulton county, with the many noted men and women who have belonged to its congregation and with the events of the past years which left their imprint upon the church and which had their effect on its growth and development.

farmers who grow special crops or milk, then, with support from that group missing, the whole act is in danger.

The amendments, which some critics have said would confer too much power on Secretary Wallace, were described by Mr. May as vital to carrying out the marketing agreement phase of the act among growers of special crops.

Attacking the group which he said has been fighting passage of the amendments, the speaker named as the leading organization in the fight the agricultural industries conference.

"They have exerted pressure to stop the amendments," he said. "They have flooded the country with exaggerated and misleading propaganda intended to confuse farmers and consumers and get them working against their own interest."

WHEAT FARMERS

DUST PERIL

Growers Refuse To Join Emigration For New Agricultural Areas.

GUYMON, Okla., April 13.—(AP)—Embattled wheat farmers of the Oklahoma panhandle choked amid dust clouds today, but few entertained even a passing idea of joining some 100 families who have left rented acreage for greener pastures.

"In one season, perhaps even before fall, this land can stage a comeback," declared H. C. Hyer, Texas county farm agent. "It has not been seriously harmed by dust and wind. With a little moisture the panhandle still can produce a good harvest of row crops."

With the dust still centered in this region of Oklahoma, there was little or none flying in the other sectors but hardest in the series of storms—the Texas panhandle, southeastern Colorado, northeastern New Mexico and western Kansas.

Dust Rolloff Stop Dust. Dust rolled westward in Arizona today, but reports from Los Angeles said Pacific cross winds stopped it 200 miles from the California border.

At Topeka, Kan., Governor Alf M. Landon announced plans to make a tour of the Kansas area suffering from dust and drought. He will study anti-soil erosion projects and the spring and summer crop prospects.

The spirit of the silt-blown plains generally was reflected by County Agent Hyer.

"The wheat, mostly, is gone," he said. "But with normal rain this fall and snow next winter the land can produce another bumper wheat crop next year. Perhaps not quite as good as in those years when a Texas county produced more wheat for its size than any similar area in the world—but a good crop."

"The land is not in danger. The health and the welfare of the people who till the land are. That's why some people have left, but all have said they would come back when the weather improves. Most of them feared the dust would ruin their health."

Relief In Sight. The storm in this region was abating tonight, and early relief was believed in sight. Employment of 137 engineers and aids, to institute a program of deep plowing in seven northwestern Oklahoma and panhandle counties, to prevent more blowing of dust, was approved recently by the created state conservation commission.

Governor E. W. Marland, of Oklahoma, has asked $500,000 in federal funds for the work.

"This is an emergency," said F. L. Vaughn, chairman of the new conservation commission. "The work must be started in 10 days."

Soil listing was described as the remedy and panhandle farmers themselves will do the work and receive the pay.

"We don't want to set up this emergency fund to pay persons from outside to do the work," Vaughn explained. "We'll pay the farmers affected 40 cents an acre for deep listing of their land."

Schools Get $503,694 Of New Appropriation

Georgia's common schools received yesterday $503,694 of their 1935 appropriations, bringing the total thus far from the general fund to $1,007,388. The funds distributed represent 24 per cent of the $4,231,000 appropriated by the 1935 legislature for this year.

Added to funds already distributed to the schools since January 1, yesterday's payment brings the total to $3,305,369.57 for common school education. This is the largest amount paid out for a similar period in any year, state officials declared.

Other sources of money appropriated for the schools include $678,601.57 from the gasoline tax and $1,529,300 diverted from highway department income.

Negotiations are still under way in Washington to obtain $2,500,000 to keep rural schools open this spring.

FRUIT DRINK MAKERS INTRODUCE NEW LINE

The Clyde Collins Chemical Company, makers of Oh-Boy beverages, announce the introduction of Oh-Boy Fruit Concentrate in powder form.

The success of Oh-Boy fruit drinks, which the Clyde Collins Chemical Company point to as the world's largest 10-cent seller, has been phenomenal. It is sold in practically every state in the Union and bought by jobbers throughout the United States in carload lots.

The success of this fruit concentrate and other Oh-Boy beverages necessitated the move to a new nine-story building in Memphis, home of the company.

Starting from one room in a downtown office building in 1918 the Clyde Collins Chemical Company grew until it occupied nine different buildings on both sides of Madison avenue east of Fourth, in Memphis. It was the necessity for getting all operations under one roof and also having facilities for still further expansion that brought about the acquisition of the new Collins building at McCall and Front streets.

Besides the Oh-Boy fruit drinks, gingerale, club soda, etc., the company markets extracts, other household products, and complete cosmetic and medicine lines. It is the only bonded winery in Tennessee.

LOCAL HAIR DRESSER INVITED TO NEW YORK

M. Mario, of Maison Adolphe et Paul in the Biltmore hotel, leaves Wednesday for New York, where he will be guest artist at a meeting of New York's outstanding hairdressers.

Mario's ability who will contribute his knowledge of styles and hair arrangement at the meeting in New York.

M. Adolphe has just returned from a convention in Chicago, where he demonstrated hair styles before the twelfth annual midwest trade show and won a gold trophy cup for the outstanding hair fashion presented at the show.

Arkansas Sales Tax Is Declared Invalid

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 13.—(AP)—Chancellor Frank H. Dodge held the two per cent sales tax invalid today in a decision which is to be appealed to the state supreme court.

The chancellor granted A. Phillips and several attorneys, including Earl Wiseman from expending money toward preparations for collecting the tax, scheduled to go into effect May 1.

The court overruled Wiseman's demurrer, and Attorneys Millard Alford and Louis L. Lewis, representing the revenue commission, announced they would file the transcript later today in the supreme court and ask that court Monday to advance it to the docket as a matter of "transcendent public importance."

ADMINISTRATION ASKS OIL CONTROL MEASURE WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP)—The administration decided today to seek legislation at this session for oil production control.

President Roosevelt, in a conference with congressional oil authorities and government aides, gave the signal to go ahead in an attempt to pass the Thomas bill for ratification of the oil states compact, with supplementary legislation providing quotas in commerce.

Secretary Ickes, the oil administrator who attended the White House session, indicated the administration was sympathetic to the legislation, including ratification of the states' compact.

Five states have ratified the agreement for control of oil production—Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico and California.

Men Doing Outside Work Called Back to Duty in Department.

Trked by criticisms of Fulton county grand jury and Solicitor-General John A. Boykin, that the city police department was "lax," the Atlanta police committee Saturday night ordered four especially detailed police officers back to duty in the department and announced it would police Atlanta and Atlanta only.

Action by the committee was taken after Chief T. O. Sturdivant asserted that the city police department "is the only enforcement arm which is active in Fulton county, and I recommend the change so that we can do a better job."

The officers ordered back to the department are: W. D. McGee, detailed to work with the federal narcotic squad here; Sterling Gresham, detailed to police in police detective work for the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association; J. N. Starnes and Charles Hamby, detailed as juvenile probation officers in Judge Garland Watkins' juvenile court activities.

Four to Get Light Duty. In addition to ordering the four men back to active police duty, the committee announced that Assistant Chief of Police C. P. Connolly and Patrolmen J. R. Collins, W. F. Pittman and W. S. Martin, all of whom are subject to pensions, will go on light duty at markedly reduced salaries July 1. It was anticipated that they all will take their pensions. C. E. Ford and J. B. Highmower also will go on light duty at that time, but they have not the required 25 years' service necessary to entitle them to pensions.

E. H. Boggs, veteran officer, already is assigned to light duty.

16 to Be Examined. The committee ordered 16 veteran members of the department including Captain G. T. Butler and Lieutenant W. H. Andrews, to take physical examinations by the May 2 meeting of the committee to see if they are fit for further police service. All in the list are entitled to pensions, and their retirement is for the purpose of raising the personnel of the department through infusion of new and younger men.

Following is the list: T. E. Brown, J. E. Wiley, C. L. Hamilton, J. H. McGhee, O. E. Evans, J. H. Doy, J. W. West, R. L. Gaisert, S. C. Johnson, J. R. Chaffin, J. M. Tugley, J. D. Freeman and L. A. Rivers.

A. D. Hornsby, H. W. Douglas and J. W. Gossett, who have not been on the department for 25 years, but who have physical impairments, also were ordered to take the examination.

Woman's Bureau Must Stay. Councilman Alvin L. Richards, member of the police committee, announced that the omnibus bill, passed by the recent session of the Georgia legislature and signed by Governor Talmadge, prevents abolition of the woman's bureau in the department.

He said he had just been apprised of the provision, and told the committee that the department under the law can be increased by any number "provided by council, but it cannot be abolished."

City council Monday will be asked to abolish the regular traffic court which is held every week day morning at the city hall and to establish a traffic session of the recorder's court at the newly-completed police station each week day from 10:30 a. m. until 12:30 p. m. Records, under the ordinance, will divide the day into the holding the 8:30 a. m. and the 10:30 a. m. courts and the other 2:30 and 4:30 p. m. sessions. The recorder's office will exchange benches periodically.

Policemen Warned. Chief Sturdivant warned all members of the department that they are policemen for all purposes and that traffic officers would not do police duty.

"I want every member of the department to know that he is expected to enforce the laws and ordinances," Chief Sturdivant said, "and shirking of duty will not be tolerated."

T. R. Glover, policeman, was suspended 29 days after being convicted of being under the influence of liquor while off duty, and G. C. Darby was reprimanded for conduct unbecoming an officer.

Permission was granted to Queen Esther chapter, O. E. S., to hold a flag sale, but only after Councilman George B. Lyle, committee member, succeeded in passing a resolution requesting that American-made flags be sold. He said Japanese-made flags have been sold in flag sales here in the past.

Policemen will not be able to plead beer in drunkenness in the future and get immunity. The committee last night decided that any officer who is haled before the committee on a drunk charge will get the same punishment for "beer drunks" as for liquor.

DEKALB VIOLATORS PLACED ON HONOR UNDER NEW PLAN DeKalb county police are going to exchange courtesy for courtesy in the handling of minor violators, Chief W. O. Parker stated yesterday.

The new plan, designed to spare minor violators the embarrassment of going to the jail and posting bond, will be placed in effect within a few days with the co-operation of Judge Frank Guesz, of the city court of Decatur, and involves the use of a courtesy appearance notice.

The notice which responsible violators will receive states: "It is understood that you have not made any cash deposit for your appearance and that this appearance notice is a courtesy extended by the DeKalb county police in lieu of physical arrest and regular formal bond."

Chief Parker said the police are expecting those receiving the notices to show the same courtesy extended them and appear for trial. "In case they don't appreciate our courtesy," Chief Parker said, "we'll go after them and they won't get a courtesy notice that time."

G. O. P. CHIEFTAINS SEE IMPROVEMENT

Colonel Knox Confers With Senators Capper, Borah in Capital.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP)—An assertion that republican chances for the presidency in 1936 are improving, but varying views as to how they should be capitalized, today emerged from brief and informal political parleys here between Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, and republican senators.

Put forward by some senators as a possible presidential candidate against Franklin D. Roosevelt next year, Colonel Knox first called on Senator Borah, of Idaho, who wants the party reorganized with new principles and leaders. He then spent another ten minutes in the office of Senator Capper, of Kansas.

Borah said afterward that he received the impression that the 61-year-old publisher, a close personal friend, agreed with him as to the need for reorganization, but possibly not as to the method of bringing it about.

"I think he feels the same things can be accomplished without an open fight," said the Idahoan.

The two also discussed the proposed midwest republican meeting next month at Kansas City, but while Borah did not go into detail on this, Capper said Knox looked with favor on the proposed meeting.

Borah feels the preliminary platform it repudiates those now in control of the party and adopts a liberal set of principles. As some others, the Idahoan likewise believes Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the national committee, should step down and Hoover should definitely state he is not a candidate.

Talking a little more freely than Borah, Senator Capper recalled his 20 years' friendship with Knox, including the time he operated newspapers in New Hampshire and Michigan.

"Colonel Knox is not running for president," Capper said, "but he is very much interested in a comeback for the republican party."

"He and I agree that things are looking up and getting better all the time for the republicans in 1936."

"He looks with favor on the move we are making for a round-up in Kansas City next month. It's going to be an interesting and worth while get-together. We are going to have the leading republicans from eight or ten states out there."

"I don't think there is any possibility of any attempt to promote candidacies, though."

MILL IS GIVEN 15 DAYS TO REINSTATE WORKERS The Atlanta Woolen Mills yesterday was given 15 days to notify the Textile Labor Board that it would reinstate former employees whose jobs are now open and who were not reinstated after the textile strike last fall. The board ruled in Washington that the mills had discriminated against certain union employees at the conclusion of the strike.

Boy, 15, Kills Eagle Snatching Brother, 8

Lynchburg, Tenn., April 13.

(AP)—Floyd Tipton has proved that a 15-year-old boy is a worthy foe—even for a massive golden eagle with a spread of 55 inches.

The big bird came out a poor second to Floyd who beat it to death with a stick as it tried to carry off his 8-year-old brother, Charles.

Attracted by screams and shouts, Floyd said he ran to his brother's aid and found the eagle dragging Charles along the ground. Floyd grabbed a stick and beat the bird across the head until it released its hold on the little boy.

WESLEY CHURCH DRIVE LAGS, SAYS CHAIRMAN

Immediate Response to $50,000 Campaign Needed To Avert Foreclosure.

The need of greater activity in raising the $50,000 "Save the Church" fund was stressed Saturday at a meeting of the Wesley Memorial board of trustees by Miller S. Bell, of Millidgeville, chairman of the board, who told the members present the time for raising the fund was getting short and that unless a substantial part was contributed immediately, there was grave danger of losing the church through foreclosure of the mortgage and forced sale.

"It would be a reflection on Methodism to lose this valuable Wesley property in this way," he said. "I am sure when our people fully realize the grave danger that confronts them they will generously rally to the cause. Wesley Memorial church means much to Methodism and, I might add, to Atlanta and to the North Georgia conference, as a great meeting place for our church organizations, for conferences, and as a social center. It is as much identified with Methodism as is the Baptist tabernacle with that denomination. It serves as headquarters for the North Georgia conference."

Dr. Harvey W. Cox, chairman of the executive committee, declared that Wesley Memorial church must be saved; that the North Georgia conference by special mandate had assigned this duty to the Wesley trustees and that this trust must be successfully acquitted. He urged greater activity all along the line.

The value of Wesley, not only to Methodism, but to Atlanta as a center of social service, was pointed out by Major R. J. Quinn. "If the noble work is to go on, the church must be saved," he said. "During the depression thousands and thousands have been clothed, fed and housed by Wesley, as well as given spiritual comfort."

"So much has this social service been appreciated by our citizens that they have supported Rev. Felton Williams in this work irrespective of denominational affiliations. In my opinion, many members of other denominations will gladly answer our appeal 'Save the Church' and insure continuance of its home mission work."

All who would like to contribute to the "Save the Church" campaign should send their contributions, by check or cash, to the Wesley Memorial Campaign Board, 224 Palmer building, Atlanta, it was stated.

WINNERS NAMED IN WILD FLOWER POSTER CONTEST

Response to the wild flower contest for Atlanta school children held by the Planters' Garden Club resulted in the submission of artistic posters representing numerous varieties of Georgia's wild flower life and a number of the posters were placed on display in the children's room of Carnegie library. Children from the second grade up were entered in the contest, winners of which were announced Saturday by the contest committee, comprised of Mrs. Houston Johnston, Mrs. R. G. McAllister, Mrs. Frank West and Mrs. Sam Edwards.

Prizes were awarded for the best posters and for the ability to name correctly the wild flowers exhibited to the school children. In the designation contest first prize was awarded to Patricia Sally Connolly, fifth grade, E. Rivers school; Candler Samuel Dobbs III, fourth grade, Ivy Road school, who tied for the honor. Second prize went to Ann Harrison, 6, and third prize was won by Warren Dobbs, 6. Both children are second grade pupils at Ivy Road school. Another Ivy Road pupil, John McEachern, fourth grade student, took fourth prize, while fifth prize went to Joe Richardson, fifth grade, Adair school.

Perry Hayes, of Maids High, received first prize in the poster contest, and second honor went to Sybil Coker. First prize in the poster contest for High Sixth grade pupils went to Mary Skinner, Kingsberry school, and second to Betty Twitty. Margaret Ragan, of E. Rivers school, won third prize.

Fifth fifth winners were: Evelyn Motes, Kingsberry school, first; Patricia Sally Connolly, E. Rivers school, second; Candler Dobbs, of Ivy Road, received first prize in the high fourth class.

DECORATED SHOP WILL OPEN MONDAY IN NORTON STUDIOS

An event of interest to every homeowner in Atlanta and vicinity is the display of different furniture groupings and window treatments which will mark the opening of the newly-decorated shop of the Alice Norton studios.

Monday morning the shop will be open for inspection and will remain open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. "So many homes," stated Mrs. Norton, "are filled with beautiful furniture which loses, somehow, its charm in arrangement. A room which has too many heavy pieces without the delicate touch which a few lighter pieces give is one of the many problems of the homemaker. Quite often it is simply a matter of drapery which makes a room mediocre when it would, otherwise, be a place of beauty and a joy forever. If, for instance, the room is naturally dark, colors and materials which brighten and reflect light should be used. There are so many of the small details which we wish to teach the women of Atlanta."

In this connection Mrs. Norton announced a free service to her clients. That of arranging furniture throughout their homes and of personal visits from a member of the personnel of Norton studios for the sole purpose of suggesting to them how to make the most of their homes.

The Southern Practical School of Interior Decoration assisted in arranging the showrooms for open-house week, their senior pupils, with the assistance of Mrs. Norton and instructors, placing the furniture and suggesting the color combinations and window treatments.

Arrangements have been made for decorators to be in charge of the Norton studios at all hours during open-house week to answer questions and make suggestions to visitors who would solve their own decorating problems.

DR. FRANCIS J. KOLAR.

NEW GOODYEAR TUBES AVOID BLOWOUT PERIL

Now that car owners are using their cars more frequently, and planning longer trips, it is of prime necessity that they prepare their cars for the hot weather ahead.

Jack Kelly, manager of Goodyear service stations, says: "There are a couple of very important needs for all automobiles, especially at this time of year. First, every car should be gone over thoroughly from bumper to bumper, heavier weight lubricants for summer put in the transmission and differential, heavier oil in the crankcase, and the radiator thoroughly flushed to remove anti-freeze. Then your car's ready to run smoothly and stay cool, saving plenty of money on repair bills due to overheating motor."

"Then," continues Mr. Kelly, "with the harder, faster driving that's done in spring and summer, I'd make sure I had Goodyear's new Lifeguard tubes installed in all my tires. These tubes completely eliminate the perils that so often accompany sudden blow-outs. Traveling at high speed, when a blow-out occurs, you'll have time to slow down and pull to the side of the road in safety."

"Goodyear's Lifeguard tube," according to Mr. Kelly, "is of radically different construction than anything previously manufactured. It consists of a 'double tube'—one inside the other and joined together at the base, with a single small vent hole connecting the air chambers. When a blow-out occurs, only the outside breaks. The air escapes from the outer chamber, just as in an ordinary tube. However, the second chamber remains intact and the amount of air in it escapes so slowly, through the single vent hole, that you can drive from a half to three-quarters of a mile in perfect safety. This auxiliary Lifeguard air chamber actually converts a blowout to a slow leak, removing the danger of sudden swerves that throw the car out of control. The new Lifeguard tube brings this matchless safety without any sacrifice of riding comfort. It steers as easily as other conventional tubes and as a matter of fact, it is stated the driver will not be conscious of having Lifeguard tubes in his tires except for the feeling of safety at all driving speeds that it brings him."

LOAN SHARK PERIL MADE GREATER, BOYD DECLARES

More than 10,000 Georgia families are in danger of becoming involved with "dangerous small loan contracts," as issued by loan sharks, it was declared yesterday by J. L. R. Boyd, secretary of the Atlanta Thrift Society.

"It is generally understood that the recent general assembly reduced the cost of all small loans to a maximum of 1 1/2 per cent per month," Mr. Boyd said. "This is unfortunately untrue and the poorest people should be on guard."

The reduction was directed only at industrial lenders, Mr. Boyd said. Salary buyers, pawnbrokers and industrial bankers are exempt from the provisions of the act. Families who will be forced to re-finance with industrial banks are urged by Mr. Boyd to make inquiries as to the reliability of the concern with which they contemplate doing business.

BURLY DETECTIVE NO "BUG" WRITER, NEGRO DISCOVERS

An unidentified negro yesterday had a "hunch" on the lottery bug. As a matter of fact, he had three hunches, 410, 691 and 550, he told City Detective Jake Woodruff.

Detective Woodruff and his partner, Detective E. I. Hilderbrand, had conducted a raid at the home of Willie Durden, in an alley off Sixth street, where they confiscated two books such as are used by lottery writers.

Woodruff was fingering one of the books when the negro entered the house and wanted to put a penny on each of the numbers he had "dreamed." He didn't dream, however, that he was talking to "the law," until he was so informed. The negro, when last seen, was shattering all human speed records for getting from one place to another.

Shot Wound in Chest, Negro Dies in City Jail

Arrested Friday night with his wife on charges of drunkenness, a negro, Leroy Ponde, of a Williams street address, was found dead early yesterday morning in his cell in the city jail, a bullet wound in his left chest.

When Ponde was admitted to the jail, according to police reports, he was so intoxicated he could not give his name and was lodged in a separate cell. A turnkey who went to the cell yesterday morning to see if the negro was sufficiently sober to tell his name, found him dead. His wife told police she did not know when the man was shot, but that they had been in a disturbance in a bootlegger's place near their home earlier Friday night.

ATLANTA WOMAN SEES EX-KAISER AT FLOWER SHOW

Wilhelm, former kaiser of Germany, there is a certain magic to the name. There is certainly romance. Fanny "bumping into" the former kaiser at a flower show. This was the interesting experience of Mrs. Rose Massey Ashby, prominent Atlanta and world traveler, who has just completed her latest trip abroad.

It was at the world-famous flower show, the Florida, near Harlem, in Holland, that Mrs. Ashby had the opportunity to study at close range the man who guided the destinies of a great state.

"He was very erect," Mrs. Ashby said, "and walked with an elastic step. He did not seem crestfallen, neither was he arrogant. His mien was poised and peaceful. He was perfectly groomed and he did not look his years. If he had been in a large group of statesmen or diplomats he would, perhaps, have been picked out as the most distinguished."

His companions surrounded him, Mrs. Ashby said. And it was evident they worked to obviate crowds gathering.

And so walked the former war lord with his friends, talking of flowers. Mrs. Ashby landed in New York last Monday. "Glad to be back and looking forward to coming home to Georgia," she said.

CLEAN UP, PAINT UP CAMPAIGN REVIVED, TO START APRIL 22

The clean up, paint up campaign heretofore conducted each year by the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce, but suspended during the depression because relief activities covered much of the same ground, is to be revived, beginning with the week of April 22, which has been proclaimed by Mayor James L. Key as Annual Cleanup Week.

In his proclamation the mayor cites the advantage of cleanup week in safeguarding health, attracting prosperity, promoting thrift, preventing fire, stimulating civic pride and making the home and city beautiful, and calls upon every individual and organization to assist in the campaign.

In line with its campaign for cleaner and more sightly streets and private premises, the woman's division is advocating the passage of an ordinance requiring junkyard operators to enclose their premises with suitable fencing. The ordinance is slated to come before council for consideration tomorrow afternoon.

AMOCO HOLDS MORE OFFICIAL WORLD'S RECORDS THAN ANY OTHER GAS!

Read the letter from the Contest Board of the (A.A.A.) American Automobile Association! It says Amoco holds more world's records than any other motor fuel or gasoline. That's official!

And now that same great Amoco-Gas has been improved to become GREATER Amoco-Gas. It took some improving to better the Amoco that holds more official world's records than any other gas.

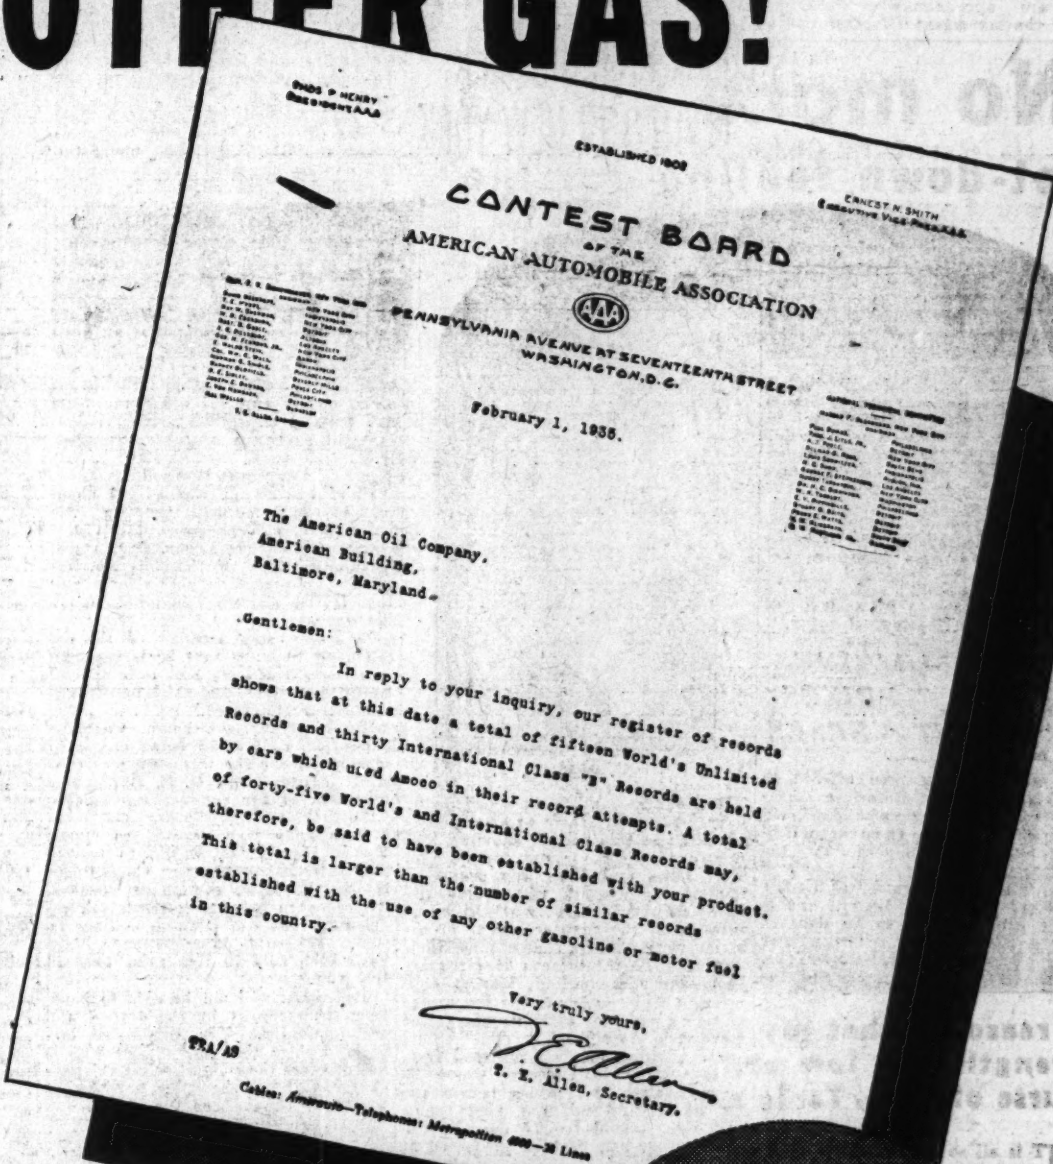

Only our new refinery and new processes made this improvement possible. Out of them all comes a new basic gasoline into which more available energy from the raw crudes is being put than was ever before possible. In addition, we have increased the percentage of the most costly of Amoco's exclusive ingredients.

WHAT THIS MEANS TO YOU!

1. GREATER Amoco-Gas, among other superiorities, sets a new world's high in calorific value.
2. It contains more heat units per gallon than any other gasoline or motor fuel.
3. This definitely means more power and more miles per gallon.
4. It takes less fuel to get more results. It's the biggest gallon of motor fuel on the market today.
5. There is nothing else like GREATER Amoco-Gas. It is distinctive; it is different!

DO THIS:
No matter what gas you are using today, you owe it to your pocketbook to try this new GREATER Amoco-Gas. GREATER Amoco-Gas costs no more to produce, but is sold to the motorist on the same basis as the previous Amoco-Gas. Prove to yourself that GREATER Amoco-Gas is the biggest gallon of motor fuel you can buy. Sold from Maine to Florida and inland.

APRIL 30 LAST DAY FOR TAX RETURNS

Intangible Assets Must Be Included This Year, Says Fulton Board.

Returns on all classes of property subject to taxation must be made by April 30 to escape the 10 per cent delinquent penalty, it was announced yesterday by the Fulton county board of tax assessors.

Under the law passed by the recent legislature, owners of taxable stocks and bonds will be required to make returns this year. In the past this class of property has escaped taxation because information as to owners of stocks and bonds and the values held has not been available. A complete list of all such stocks and bonds is now in the hands of the assessors, it was stated.

It is estimated that in the past approximately $20,000,000 in intangibles have escaped taxation. While there has been no estimate made by the board of assessors as to the additional revenue which will accrue to Fulton county due to the addition of taxes on intangibles, an estimate may be reached.

In the past Fulton county has followed closely the valuations as set by Atlanta. The city is now accepting intangibles at 15 per cent of their market value. It may be assumed that the county will follow this valuation.

Under a 15 per cent valuation, it is estimated an additional revenue of approximately $200,000 will accrue to the county from the taxation of intangibles.

The statement of the board of assessors follows: "House Bill No. 362, applicable to Fulton county, enacted by the recent session of the legislature broadens the duty and power of the board of county assessors in dealing with tax defaulters."

"The law also provides for, and requires that a 10 per cent penalty be assessed against all tax payers who fail to make tax returns to the tax receiver as required by law. Those making tax returns and failing to include therein all property that should be returned are also subject to this penalty. The penalty as provided by law is mandatory and no one has authority to waive it."

"Owners of taxable stocks and bonds will be required to make tax returns this year. This class of intangible property has escaped being taxed for the reason that information as to owners and the amount and the kind of stocks and bonds owned was not available until recently. Assessments will be fair and reasonable if returns are made to the tax receiver as required by law."

Several tax investigators have been working in connection with the intangible property lists, it was said by the board.

"The work of the special investigators will be paid for in the future by those who fail to make tax returns as required by law," it was declared.

There are approximately 75,000 names in the tax digest. Of these ap-

WHEELING, W. Va., April 13.—(P)—Former President Herbert Hoover arrived by automobile in Wheeling this afternoon for an engagement with republican leaders of West Virginia. He was met by H. C. Ogden, publisher. No announcement was made as to the purpose of the meeting.

"No more tired, let-down feeling for me"

"I reasoned that my red blood corpuscle strength was low and I simply took a course of S.S.S. Tonic and built it back."

It is all so simple and reasonable. If your physical let-down is caused by lowered red blood corpuscles—which is all too frequent—then S.S.S. Tonic is waiting to help you... and will, unless you have a serious organic trouble that demands a physician or surgeon.

Remember, S.S.S. is not just a so-called "tonic." It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying red corpuscles in the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Let S.S.S. help build back your blood tone... If your case is not exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... steady nerves... a good complexion... and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today. S.S.S. is really an inexpensive way to better health and more happiness. So many say, "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

FEW MURDER TRIALS FOR FULTON COURTS

Homicides Show Drastic Shrinkage, While Jail Population Drops.

A noticeable decline in homicides in Fulton county is shown in figures compiled by Lewis P. Jones, calendar clerk of the criminal divisions, showing the total number of murder cases awaiting trial at this time is only 10, including the case of Manson Miller, charged with the slaying of his half-sister, Mrs. Ethel Cook. A former hearing resulted in a mistrial in this case. All other untried murder cases are against negroes.

Further evidence of a lessening of crime is the grand jury record for the past two months. No murder in-diments were returned in April and only three in March. At the same time the jail population has diminished to 319, the lowest figure in several years. The record for untried murder cases is said to be the lowest in more than a decade.

Criminal divisions of superior court this week will be in charge of Judge G. H. Howard and Judge C. J. Perryman, of Lincoln. Judge John Rourke, of Savannah, will preside in the emergency division the week of April 22 and his visit will mark the close of the present system of providing judges for the extra division. Beginning May 1 Judge James C. Davis, of the Stone Mountain circuit, will preside as permanent judge of the emergency division, serving 15 weeks out of the year.

Trial of Allen Munday and William Lochovitch, charged with exhibition of an indecent motion picture in a downtown office building, has been set for Tuesday before Judge Perryman. According to George Pounds, special investigator for the solicitor-general, the picture will be shown to the trial jury with the courtroom cleared of spectators.

City, County Make Arrangements For Daylight Saving Time April 28

Daylight saving time, approved by the people at the polls September 20, will go into effect at 1 a. m. on Sunday, April 28, when cities throughout the country will adopt the change. Information relative to the change has been furnished by the Chamber of Commerce to numerous business concerns, and railroads and other transportation concerns have arranged their tables in conformity with the change.

Railroads, buses and airplanes will continue to use standard time, as is the custom in other cities where daylight time prevails each summer, although the new time will be used at freight depots, for the convenience of shippers. Although observance of the change by business houses is not compulsory, according to Chamber of Commerce figures a canvass of more than 60 companies showed that they will adopt the change April 28. The canvass included three utility companies,

Gloria Said To Love Her Mother Now

NEW YORK, April 13.—(P)—The News says in a copyright story that little Gloria Vanderbilt, 11-year-old heiress, has changed her mind about her mother, Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

"Once she spurned her," the paper says. "Now she loves to visit her." Supreme Court Justice John F. Ca-new recently awarded custody of the child for five days each week to her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, prominent and wealthy New Yorker. Her mother was given custody of the child for two days of each week. An appeal from the decision is pending.

fact that schedules are based on standard time.

In a statement Saturday Mayor Key advised all residents of the city to move their timepieces up at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, April 28, so that they will read "2 a. m.," thus affording an opportunity to adjust matters to the new time by Monday morning.

DANIEL OFFER ON BOND IN COUNCIL MONDAY

Proposal by Bondsmen for Settlement of Shortage To Be Passed On.

Proposal of bondsmen of former City Marshal J. Ben Daniel to pay $1,500 into the municipal treasury in full settlement of the shortage in Daniel's accounts probably will lead in importance the matters to face council's session tomorrow afternoon.

The petition to force an election on a measure to empower Mayor Key to operate a series of liquor stores and divert all profits into the city treasury will not be ready, it was indicated yesterday.

A total of 998 of the 1,850 signatures required to make the referendum mandatory were on the petition but it was not expected that the required 852 additional signatures would be obtained before the latter part of next week if they.

The mayor yesterday agreed to call a special meeting of the budget commission before the council session Monday to set up $4,294 to put two new dog wagons on the streets to enforce city license provisions against stray dogs. The wagons will take up dogs which have not been inoculated against rabies and which have not been licensed.

Alderman J. Glover Hailer, sponsor of the drive against the animals, believes it will pay for the added expense.

Hailer also will ask at council's meeting that steps be taken to tag all bicycles in Atlanta at a cost of 50 cents a year each. He will present an ordinance making it an offense to sell or buy a bicycle if it is not tagged. He contends that such a measure will be good insurance to about 25,000 bicycle owners, aver-ring many are stolen and mutilated each year.

Payment of $20,000 of the $43-000 the city owes the state of Georgia for gasoline tax will be recommended at Monday's meeting by the finance committee.

Members of the tax committee will recommend an increase in the discount rate for current tax bills. The 1.5 discount heretofore given for payment of current taxes in May of each year will be hiked to 2 per cent, and the .5 per cent discount allowed for payment by July 1 will be raised to 1 per cent, if recommendations of the committee are accepted by council.

A revised ordinance regarding operation of junk yards provides among other things that a $1,000 surety bond shall be required of operators and that a seven-foot high fence shall be so constructed as to hide from public gaze unsightly junk within the various lots.

DEDICATION PLANNED OF FARMERS' MARKET

ercises of the Buckhead farmers' market on West Pace's Ferry road at Buckhead Tuesday afternoon, April 16.
Mrs. Owen Perry is chairman of the committee, which is composed of many other prominent North Side women, including Mrs. Raymond T. Cole, Mrs.
Cam D. Dorsey, Mrs. Philip H. Alston, Mrs. Rose Hunter, Mrs. Frederick Peck, Mrs. Walter Hill, Mrs.
W. T. Perkins, Mrs. C. F. Posberg,

Kenneth, Mrs. Strother Fleming, Mrs.
Charles Danna, Mrs. Lewis Sharp,
Mrs. Edgar E. Pomeroy, Mrs. Hugh
Wood, Mrs. Fred Patterson and Mrs.
P. C. McDuffie.

State and county officials will take part also in the formal opening of the market which, according to P. C.
McDuffie, owner, is designed to appeal to North Side housewives.

The Osgood-Sanders nursery as a committee has been active in assisting Mr. McDuffie in obtaining tenants of integrity and long experience in the market trade.

NRA CODE COMPLIANCE TO BE ENFORCED HERE

Rigid enforcement of NRA compliance codes will continue in this district while congress is considering new legislation to replace the National Industry Recovery Act, which expires in June, it was announced yesterday by W. L. Mitchell, regional compliance director here.

"State offices will continue to act promptly and vigorously on all valid complaints filed," Mr. Mitchell declared.

As evidence of NRA activity in the southeast, Mr. Mitchell pointed out that during March 271 wage complaints were adjusted by state organizations in the Atlanta region, comprising Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and South Carolina. In these cases restoration aggregating $24,198 was made by employers to employees who had not been compensated in accordance

HEARING TO BE HELD ON INTRASTATE RATES

A Public Service Commission hearing will be held soon on the application of railroads to apply the 15 per cent increase as ordered on interstate shipments to include shipments made within the state, it was announced yesterday by Jud P. Wilhoit, commission chairman.

Two more hearings are on the commission docket in its investigation of commercial electric rates and long distance telephone tolls.

The Georgia Power & Light Company is cited to show cause Thursday why its rates should not be revised and hearing on Southern Bell telephone tolls is scheduled for April 20.

Over Seas

By CHARLES E. HARNER.
Associated Press Foreign Staff.

Statements of Great Britain, Italy and France, gathered in warlike conclave at Stresa, Italy, on the fate of Europe's peace, were electrified by an announcement relayed from Berlin that Germany at last was ready to enter the proposed eastern European nonaggression pact.

The reaction was jubilation, not only because Germany was announcing itself as willing to enter a multilateral peace pact to which she long had been opposed, but because Reichsfuehrer Hitler's government said it would not even object if some of the other signatories of such a pact had separate accords of reciprocal assistance among themselves.

Hitler consistently had been opposed to such reciprocal assistance pacts on the ground that they tended to be directed against Germany. His agreement to enter a general treaty guaranteeing the inviolability of the borders of Germany's neighbors was, naturally, received with the greatest joy, although it could be regarded as merely a confirmation of his previous declarations that Germany intends no aggressions against other nations.

The sequence of events at Stresa Friday, when the German agreement was announced, appeared to show a signal success for the announced British contention of moderation and mediation in the tri-partite colloquies.

The French delegates entered the conference with a resolution, intended for submission to the forthcoming council session of the League of Nations, in which she would have sought the condemnation of Germany's rearmament in violation of the military clauses of the Versailles treaty.

On the second day of the conference, however, France agreed to refrain from proposing her resolution in the council session, which has been called to hear French charges that Germany violated the Versailles treaty by her announced rearmament. The French decision against instituting the resolution came when the British plan for regional European pacts within the framework of the League of Nations.

Shortly after this combined concession on the part of both powers, Sir John Simon, the British foreign secretary, announced that Germany was willing to join the eastern European plan for a multilateral treaty of nonaggression. His information, he said, had come directly from Berlin through the offices of the British ambassador there.

The news was a bombshell, but quite a different type of bombshell from what many Europeans had been fearing for weeks past. The effect of its explosion was to radiate hopes for peace to such an extent that international diplomats gathered at Stresa suggested before the close of the day that the probable result would be the summoning of a European international peace conference in which Germany would take place of a basis of diplomatic equality with the other nations while the details of a multilateral nonaggression pact were threshed out.

Own Cotton Crop Planned by France

PARIS, April 13.—(AP)—France's imperial economic conference, the first in the nation's history, closed a four months' session today with a "15-year plan" as its major achievement.

Delegates in a final meeting with President Albert LeBrun heard former Minister of Commerce Louis Rolin call for a permanent institution to be established out of the conference, as they prepared to leave the capital for home.

The "15-year plan," which will be submitted to parliament for consideration when the two houses meet again, provides for the expenditure of 12,000,000,000 francs ($67,000,000) with nearly 3,000,000,000 francs for development of cotton raising in French West Africa in an attempt to make France independent of the United States and other countries for that product.

Harry Houston Romer, Ace Reporter, Passes

LONDON, April 13.—(AP)—Harry Houston Romer, veteran news writer for the Associated Press, died today of heart disease. He was 64.

During the war Romer held important posts in the news organization. He became chief foreign news editor. Later he was placed in charge of the Berlin bureau. Subsequently he was a member of the London staff where his experience and background in American and international affairs aided him in handling the swiftly moving events of the post-war era.

He is survived by his widow and a son, Professor Alfred Romer, of Harvard University.

MRS. HATTIE E. COHEN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Hattie E. Cohen, president of Cohen Brothers, one of the city's largest department stores, died early today of a heart attack.

COUNT HOHENSTEIN

VIENNA, April 13.—(UP)—Count Max Thun Hohenstein, 48, known as the monkey count, died suddenly today. He adopted as a slogan: "Learn to walk on all-fours if you want to walk on two legs correctly."

OIL NEGOTIATORS FAIL TO AGREE IN JAPAN

TOKYO, April 13.—(AP)—Negotiations which sought a basis for foreign oil companies to continue business in Japan ended today without an agreement.

F. Godbird, Shell Petroleum representative, left for London and G. S. Walden, Standard Oil official, will leave for the United States Tuesday. Both will consult directors on the question of future business in the orient, inasmuch as Manchukuo already has begun enforcement of an oil monopoly.

NAZIS DECLARE STRESSA PARLEY FAILED

Two Leaders at Epochal Stresa Parley

With bravos from a cheering throng, and a stiff military salute from Il Duce's personal guard, Benito Mussolini (left), and Premier Ramsay MacDonald departed from their hotel to attend the tri-partite conference of Italian, French and British statesmen in Borromeo castle on the Islet Isola Bella. This picture was transmitted by telephoto and radio.

WASHINGTON HAILS STRESSA DECISION

Continued 'Do Nothing' Situation Will Permit U. S. To Take Hand.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(UP)—Belief was growing in official circles tonight that the war clouds over Europe are gradually blowing themselves out.

Reaction here to the outcome of the Stresa conference seemed to be one of relief. Officials here believed that the conference refrained from any action or decision which would tend to aggravate the tension in Europe. Official approval was given to the circuitous route laid out at Stresa for further conferences to consider the political and military situation growing out of Germany's defiance of the Versailles treaty.

This route leads first through discussions at the League of Nations council, which meets next Monday, and eventually to another and larger conference at which Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia may be represented. All this conferring occupies time, and officials here believed that the more delay in reaching any final decision, the less likely war becomes.

Economic Bars. The delays afford time for certain economic factors, which the administration is attempting to set into motion to start working. This administration believes any lasting peace arrangements in Europe must be based upon an economic revival there, and that this can be brought about only by reductions of trade barriers, tariff walls, import and export restrictions, foreign exchange controls and like artificial devices of economic nationalism built up in Europe during the past few years.

If the political situation meanwhile can be kept fluid and reasonably calm, that is the best that can be expected, officials here believe. They felt that the best chance of peace could be achieved at Stresa would be temporary, without a corresponding settlement of the economic and political economic questions besetting Europe.

The decision at Stresa not to force a showdown in the League council on the question of Germany's rearmament was applauded as a move in the direction of continuing peace. It was also regarded as a move to permit the League to continue to exist. Officials thought a showdown on the very issue which the League of Nations was created to settle might have destroyed the League, and perhaps would have led directly to war.

Stresa Lophole. The League was created specifically to make impossible a rearmament of Germany such as faced the Allies in 1914. Germany has begun her rearmament in defiance of the Versailles treaty and the League. Officials here feared the results if the League council was asked to rule upon the issue, without any 15 or 20 years, and sanctions for the violations were demanded by France.

Upon the program worked out at Stresa, officials here see a loophole whereby the council may stipulate the sanctions to be invoked in case of any future violations of the military clauses of the covenant, but will be compelled to do nothing in particular about past violations.

This would let Germany off with merely a rebuke and would permit the League to concentrate at the next conference with optimism for new political and military alliances.

Seal Hunters Periled

TROMSOE, Norway, April 13.—(AP)—A northerly gale raged today in the region where 160 seal hunters are busy in the ice fast in the pack ice since March 26.

'Black Eagle of Harlem' Received Coolly on His Return to Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, April 13.—(AP)—Hubert Julian, the "Black Eagle of Harlem," who once was a large part of Ethiopia's air force, received a cool reception today in the capital city of Haile Selassie's empire.

Julian, who arrived yesterday by train, wore a monocle and was sartorially perfect, but there appeared no immediate prospects of his defending Ethiopia against an Italian threat.

So far no one has accepted his offer to do or die in the air for his country, the love of which he said brought him all the way from Harlem with a stopover at London.

JAPAN MAY SLASH U. S. LINT-BUYING

the exclusion of Japanese goods from those countries."

On that agitation it blamed the tendency of Latin American nations to denounce commercial treaties with Japan or restrict Japanese imports. Mission to Brazil.

The foreign office's assertion that Japan's exports to Latin America are decreasing was not borne out, however, in figures issued by the finance ministry, which revealed that January and February exports to Central America and South America were $2,220,000 and $2,501,000, respectively, against $2,458,000 and $2,780,000 in the same period last year.

The effort to increase trade with Brazil is the background for the dispatch of an economic mission to that country by the Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

The commission, composed of six outstanding businessmen among whom the cotton industry is well represented, will reach San Francisco on the Chichibu Maru April 21, visit briefly in Texas and other points en route to New York and reach Rio de Janeiro May 17 to spend several months in Brazil.

TO FORCE LINT RELIEF. WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP)—After being told at the White House that imports of Japanese textiles are less than 1 per cent of American production, New Englanders seeking a higher tariff and removal of the cotton processing tax held conferences today to discuss the next step in their campaign.

Eastern cotton manufacturers contend their business is menaced by Japanese-manufactured textiles, which are sold in the United States at less than cost of domestic production.

One immediate effect of yesterday's developments was expected to be a fresh concentration upon measures to restrict imports of Japanese goods.

Meanwhile, new demands for a higher tariff on cotton products were raised with publication of official reports that imports of cotton seed oil had jumped 15,000,000 pounds in one month.

These demands came from Chester Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Despite a three-cent duty, Commerce Department compilations disclosed that 30,000,000 pounds of cotton seed oil had come into this country since November as against no imports last year.

Senators George, democrat, Georgia, and Smith, democrat, South Carolina, attributed the inflow of cotton seed oil to the tariff reduction in the manufacture of compounds and vegetable shortenings to the AAA crop reduction program. They saw nothing alarming in the situation.

In congress, Chairman Connery, of the house labor committee, has said he would seek to force a hearing before the house ways and means committee on his bill to keep out imports which can be landed in this country at less than the American cost of production.

Representative McCormack, democrat, Massachusetts, announced he would ask that the ways and means committee, of which he is a high ranking member, appoint a subcommittee to inquire into the entire question of foreign imports.

Representative Backarach, republican, New Jersey, introduced in the house a bill providing a 50 per cent excise tax on all imports of cotton products.

THREE MILLS SHUT DOWN IN PROTEST ON TAX

BOSTON, April 13.—(AP)—The closing of three New England textile mills employing 8,510 workers was announced today while governors and congressional representatives at Washington appealed to the president for relief for the industry in this section.

An "appeal to the president" campaign was opened in Pawtucket, R. I., and Fall River.

The Hanlonite presents a striking picture on the streets of Addis Ababa if nothing else. He walks about with two servants tagging along behind him struggling with two suitcases. It is a matter of town gossip that he changes his suits three times a day.

The Black Eagle brought neither airplanes nor aviators, but he did bring two bags crammed with pictures of planes he hopes to sell to the government.

He sought an interview with the emperor, but the latter, doubtless recalling how the former air idol once cracked up the country's only airplane almost at his feet, was not at all interested.

agreed, although official confirmation was lacking, on:

1. A general European conference after the Danubian parley.

2. A proposed eastern Mediterranean pact linking Italy, Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia.

Further, France agreed to soften her arraignment of Germany at the League of Nations council session opening Monday, in this return for Britain's tacit approval of the bilateral assistance pacts she feels should reinforce any general security system.

French and Italian delegates to the conference also found time to extend and amplify provisions of the accord between the French and Italian foreign ministers, reached at Rome March 7.

An Italo-French mutual assistance pact is virtually in the final stages, it was stated authoritatively, and this may be extended to bring in other Latin nations. Later an agreement for friendship and consultation between the Latin bloc and Great Britain is envisaged.

Spirit of Cordiality. "A spirit of cordiality and collaboration" marked the three days of discussion on secluded Isola Bella in Lake Maggiore, an official spokesman said after official adjournment was announced today.

British and French spokesmen both said: "We have reached complete agreement on everything as far as we could go."

Members of the three delegations met again at 10 a. m. tomorrow to work out the final wording of their agreement. An official communique summing up the results of the conference will be issued afterward.

After publication of today's brief official statement, British, French and Italian spokesmen said they had decided to give no further details or explanations before the appearance of tomorrow's communique.

Hitler and his associates, it was reported, will arrive here tomorrow, and will be housed at seven hours' return on Mussolini's island "workshop."

Conferees Tired. A gala night at Milan's La Scala opera house had been scheduled for the distinguished visitors but the British prime minister, his foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, and the French foreign minister, were too weary to go. Flandin represented them.

Immediately after today's discussion, spokesmen for all three delegations made the flat statement that agreement had been reached on all points under discussion "as far as we could go."

Details of certain pacts, they added, could not be settled here before negotiations with other countries. Neither the spokesmen nor the communique gave the number or nature of the agreements reached.

Both the visiting delegations plan to leave Stresa tomorrow. MacDonald, Flandin, will return to their capitals, while Simon and Laval go to Geneva.

There was complete unanimity in expressing satisfaction at the conference's results.

All Points Covered. Today's brief official communique said all the points raised in the Anglo-French talks at London February 3, which formally launched British-concocted plans to bring all Europe into one inclusive security system, had been agreed to in the course of the three days' deliberations.

"Divers other points were examined," it added.

Efforts to arrive at the definite signing of an air pact was due, it was stated, to Prime Minister MacDonald's desire that Germany be given an opportunity to accept the other French side proposed in the Anglo-French communique.

Three pacts were proposed in that document—the air defense alliance, the Danubian pact, the Mediterranean pact. The first Germany welcomed; the second she agreed to accept yesterday; the third she received coolly.

Hitler's policy, they said, would be difficult to define what constitutes "interference" in Danubian countries' internal affairs.

France was reported anxious to have the three nations sign the air pact immediately and let Germany enter later, after other pending problems are solved. This failed of acceptance, however.

WARNINGS RENEWED

NICE, France, April 13.—(AP)—Renewed warnings of the "German peril" and gratification that "Russia's military forces" are on the march were voiced here today by the Republican Federation Congress today.

General Davaud, former military governor of Metz, told the gathering that Germany will have 4,200 fighting planes, 2,520 of them bombers, "directed at France" by March 1, 1936, the fleet manned by 6,000 pilots already thoroughly trained.

Louis Marin, minister of state without portfolio in the Flandin cabinet, asserted "utilization of Russia's military forces" outweighs any trouble in entering the spread of revolutionary propaganda in France.

Declaring he recognized that "an entente with Russia might present difficulties," Marin said "it is preferable that the power which is necessary to reject off-hand utilization of her military forces."

The Abbe Riedinger also told the right wing congress that German propaganda in Alsace is "going so far that some Germanophile publications claim that a plebiscite similar to that in the Saar should be held."

"The ravages of that propaganda are being felt even in the clergy," he added.

New Arms Forged.

Alfred Oberkirch, member of the chamber of deputies and minister in several former cabinets, declared the German general staff the real master in Germany and said it is "forging new arms to put into the hands of Chancellor Hitler, that docile pupil of pure Prussianism."

Calling for governmental reform, the cabinet minister said "We must consolidate our alliances with Italy, France and England."

Cobb Reassures Farmers On Prices for 1935 Crops

Former Atlantian, AAA Administrator, Says Government Will Not Market at Loss.

Cotton growers may be assured the government does not intend that any farmer shall market his 1935 crop at a sacrifice, Oully A. Cobb, administrator in the AAA, said in an interview on his arrival in Atlanta yesterday for two speeches by his chief, Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace.

Conditions are too indefinite this early in the season for the government to propose any guarantee, such as the continuance of 12-cent cotton loans, Cobb said. So many factors enter into the making of the crop and the necessity for a guarantee that the government must delay action until these factors are observed, he explained.

While he could not commit himself to any assurance that 12-cent loans will be offered on the new cotton production, Cobb did emphasize that the government is working toward a permanent relief for agriculture, following a program designed to place agriculture on a par with industry.

This same search for permanence in agricultural relief caused the opposition to the plan to pay cotton processing taxes out of relief funds. Cobb said. Relief funds are necessarily temporary, leaving cotton with an uncertain future if dependent upon the relief rolls, and the plan would place the farmer on a dole as well, he declared.

Recent opposition to the processing taxes was blamed on New England textile interests by Cobb. They charge that the taxes place a burden on plants attempting to compete in the market, he declared, but neglect to explain away the fact that the processing tax is rebated on all products sent to foreign markets, thus leaving the manufacturer on the old basis of competition, he said.

Cobb recalled the storm aroused by the charges that a certain large New England mill had been forced to close on account of the processing tax. The storm died down, he said, when government officials learned that the large textile plant suffering from the processing tax was engaged in the manufacture of rayon.

Cobb said all farmers should remember that the government is planning for them just as industry plans for itself. When temporary expedients are offered, he suggested the farmer think first of the greater benefits of long-range plans for permanent relief.

Cobb did not believe the adjustment in silver prices would affect the competitive situation between southern mills and Japanese interests.

expect miracles. Austrian independence is the chief point in the Italian policy."

The ambassador said Italy hopes to see the situation in Africa without armed conflict.

"The African continent is the logical location for development by Europe and expansion," Signor Rosso said. "Italy is interested in securing a road for communication between its African colonies of Eritrea on the north and Italian Somaliland on the south. If this can be accomplished by pacific means it is desirable to go about it in that manner."

Signor Rosso knew that Ethiopian troops were massing. The situation is dangerous from two angles. The first of these is that the boundaries are well defined. The second is that we are dealing with a nation over which the European powers have no control.

Asked for his impressions of Louis Marin's Kingfisher, the ambassador smiled, shrugged his shoulder expressively. "Senator Long does not follow the policy of the day of the prophecies," he said. "But the possibility we observe the conventions more strictly than we should."

Signor Rosso believes the south may expect industrial expansion. Everywhere there are signs of returning prosperity, he said.

Signor Rosso, who is a comparatively young man, is unmarried. His diplomatic career extends over a period of 25 years. His first assignment was as an attaché at the Italian embassy in Washington. From there he went to St. Petersburg, then Rome. During the World War Signor Rosso saw service on the Italian front. He entered the service as an under lieutenant, and was promoted to full lieutenant.

Signor Rosso was sent to the embassy in Norway, thence to Greece and back to Washington in 1922. There followed assignments to London, Rome, Geneva and finally to Washington as ambassador in 1933.

Signor Rosso flew to New Orleans and motored to Baton Rouge to attend the 75th anniversary celebration at Louisiana State University. There the honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred on him. He arrived in Atlanta at 12:15 noon, lunch at the airport and departed at 12:47 p. m. for Washington.

Deputy Xavier Vallat contended that restoration of the Hapsburgs to the throne of Austria would strengthen that nation's chances of keeping her independence and even help the Little Entente, but Marin said "it would be a crime to sacrifice the friendship of the Little Entente for the problematical restoration of the Hapsburgs."

REC'S IN BUSINESS TO PROTECT LOANS

Dozen Big Companies Being Operated Owe Total of $53,000,000.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(UP)—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been forced into operating half-a-dozen big businesses to protect $53,000,000 in recovery loans.

RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones hoped it "would not be necessary" but he "would not be surprised" if the government went into other companies if repayment of $53,000,000 in loans to industry, banks, railroads and utilities is threatened.

RFC records disclosed that action has been taken by the government to watch and supervise operations of two railroads, three insurance companies and a large utility holding company controlling 1,500 operating units.

"We are not trying to foreclose on properties or force liquidation," an official said. "We are attempting to protect our collateral. The money belongs to the public and we are watching it. Our attitude on this matter is exactly the same as that of big banks prior to 1933, when their loans were threatened."

The companies in which the RFC has moved to protect its claims are: Maryland Casualty Insurance Company, Detroit Life Insurance Company, Denver & Salt Lake Railroad, Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad, United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company and Public Utilities Securities Corporation.

This list does not include many banks in liquidation, whose affairs are being worked out between receivers and the RFC, which has spent millions in loans to insure payment of depositors.

Chairman Jones, a Houston banker, insists that the government does not want "to get into private business" through property seizure but that he intends to protect the federal government's interests.

If private business repays its loans, it can redeem its collateral without red tape, he said.

He said that he believes the government "may take some losses" on the $53,000,000 in outstanding loans by his corporation but that it will "not be large."

In the case of Public Utilities Securities Corporation, which is holding company in the former Harley Clarke utility empire, Jones pointed out that the RFC holds property worth potentially $400,000,000 on a $2,000,000 loan.

Rome Wants Hambrick For Big Holdup in 1928

T. M. Hambrick, arrested several days ago by Atlanta detectives and later identified by two recent robbery victims, is wanted in Rome, Ga., where, according to a wire received yesterday by Atlanta police, he is under indictment in the $9,000 pay roll robbery of the Hank Stove & Range Company there in 1928.

The pay roll robbery, according to police, was staged at midday on the main street of Rome. Two messengers were held up by three men who robbed them of the $9,000 pay roll. Two of the three men who were indicted were convicted.

Victims of recent robberies in Birmingham, Ala., and Macon were expected to view Hambrick in a police lineup yesterday, but Detective D. L. Taylor stated last night the lineup would not be conducted until today or tomorrow.

STUDENTS' ARREST WAS 'JUST IN FUN'; 'PRISONERS' FREED

"I think," said Recorder John L. Cone yesterday afternoon, "that you boys like to break rocks so well I ought to arrange for you to break them for the city for about five days."

The eyes of 14 Georgia Tech students lined up in front of the recorder's bench fell. The spokesman for the students cleared his throat to make one final appeal for mercy.

"So," said the recorder, his face breaking into a grin. "I'm going to congratulate you in being admitted to the civil crew and hope you'll make fine civil engineers and all of you will graduate with high honors."

The recorder said he would like to dismiss the cases, but that was impossible as no cases had been made against the students who had been arrested Friday afternoon in front of the city hall where they were breaking slabs of concrete as part of the initiation to the civil crew, collegiate branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers. They were lodged for several hours in the unused federal quarters on the fifth floor of the city hall and later were released on copies of charges of disorderly conduct to appear in recorder's court yesterday afternoon where Recorder Cone informed them the entire proceedings were part of the initiation.

Roosevelt Helps Reporters To Satirize Administration

Chief Executive Shatters Another Precedent as Gridiron Club Parodies American Scene.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP)—The Gridiron Club tonight celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with caustic satire on the New Deal, European diplomacy, and the gold decision.

President Roosevelt was its guest of honor and, contrary to precedent, participated personally in one of the skits, that leading directly into his own speech, traditionally, with no reporters present.

The fun-poking ranged from a Barnum side show, with cabinet members as the freaks, to a new version of the Pied Piper of Hamelin in which the country was portrayed as plagued by Senators Long, Overton and Schweickart, Father Coughlin, Dr. Townsend and Governor Olson.

In commemoration of the club's fiftieth birthday, there was a parade in which the marching groups carried banners running from the "Grover Cleveland Marching Club" to "Bankers Away." Captain Taylor Branson, directed the United States marching band in a performance of his own composition, "The Gridiron Golden Jubilee March."

The souvenir of the dinner also carried out the golden anniversary idea. It was a large cartoon by Clifford K. Berryman, of the Washington Star, portraying a parade of the famous guests of the club since its founding in 1885.

Gold Decision. Weber and Fields were called upon to elucidate the gold decision. Two club members impersonating the comedians engaged in a discussion of the famous verdict and of other monetary matters, including "devaluation."

"Today the dollar is only 59 cents," explained one.

"Sav, vare dit you go to school? At Columbia?"

"No, I read it in a book by Mr. Roosevelt, called 'Ours of My Way.'"

They finally decided to see if they could "hook" their gold bonds for a dollar and a half, and invest the proceeds in baby bonds.

"Are they sold, too?"

"No, and are if, as and ven."

"Can they do not under the constitution?"

"No."

"Yes?"

"Yes? Vot you mean, dis no-yes?"

"Well, dot's vot the court said!"

The Pied Piper skit found the burlesomaster informing the guests that the country was under a plague.

"We are gathered tonight," he said, "to free ourselves from the truculent therapeutics of Aesculapian idiots, from the doleful dietetics of disaster, from the precarious paragon of preachers of pedantic prescriptions, from the cataleptic ipecac of chiro-practic economists, and from the quasi-scientific sassafras of self-seeking saps. To wit and to witness—"

Dr. Long, Senator Coughlin and Father Townsend.

Three characters appeared upon the stage while the chorus sang "The Rats Have Come to Town." The burlesomaster asked the first if his name was Long.

Long, Chief Rodent. "Yes, sir," was the answer. "I am the head rodent around here. These others are just amateur cheese chasers. I want rich cheese—the Rockefeller Roquefort, that Couzens Camembert, that Guggenheim Gorgonzola, and when I get it I'll wrap it up in small bundles and pass it around."

"So yours are the fingerprints that are found in all our best pantries," a burgher observed. "What a cute little rat he is after all!"

A solitary rat then obliged with "Tiny Little Fingerprints."

"Tiny little fingerprints that point to '36."

"Every one as artful as can be."

"Tiny little fingerprints that put us in a fix."

"Are just a great big snafu to me."

Senator Coughlin refused to make a speech because no microphone was present, but Townsend promised that each person on reaching the age of 50 would be given $500 a month, a job's license and a pair of polo ponies.

The "Pied Piper of the Potomac" appeared, but his most enticing tune failed to attract the children and the rats.

Cabinet Freaks. The Barnum skit had the famous showman serving as Barker for his own side show and introducing "the historic predecessors of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

"The most amazing group of oddities ever brought together in one administration" by introducing Fatima Farley, "the fat philatelist," Pasha Homer Cummings, "the world's greatest sword swallower," Senator Enrico Walker, "the living skeleton," Tom Thumb Ickes, "the midwife of the midwest," and Jumbo O. P., "the world's thinnest elephant."

In another skit, the leading figures of the European crisis were gathered together "in an airport somewhere in Europe." They came to a unanimous agreement after reading the following "telegram" from President Roosevelt:

"Ever mindful of our historic isolation and our horror of war I have turned loose the Philippines, ordered fleet maneuvers in the Pacific, increased our standing army 75 per cent and laid the keels of 10 new cruisers. The government will take over the munitions business and I've got a clever new model of an aerial torpedo for the White House mantelpiece."

Nulric Bell, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, was inaugurated as president of the club and two newly elected members were initiated—Lyle C. Wilson, manager of the Washington bureau of the United Press, and Raymond P. Brandt, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA MUSIC NOTES

by Mozeille Horton

CLAIRE HARPER.

The current week's musical calendar is crowded with events presented by local artists. The Good Friday night presentations at many of the churches will attract vast crowds for worship through the medium of beautiful music Friday evening of this week. And in the air is that excited feeling of preparation and expectation that always precedes Easter and Christmas among the organists and singers of the city. It is an important time in local musical circles. Then there is the concert of the Atlanta Philharmonic orchestra, Tuesday evening, another anticipated event.

Philharmonic Concert.
The Atlanta Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Georg Lindner, will present a concert Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, in Wesley Memorial auditorium. Hugh Hodgson, concert pianist, will appear as guest soloist with the orchestra, playing the entire second piano concerto of Saint-Saens with full orchestral accompaniment. Mr. Hodgson, one of the south's foremost musicians and pianists, is a favorite with Atlanta audiences. Mr. Lindner is the competent and successful conductor of the orchestra, having trained them from a rank amateur organization into a symphony of creditable caliber. There are about 60 musicians in the orchestra, all playing without financial remuneration, but simply for the sheer joy of playing. The Atlanta Philharmonic Society, of which Raymond Kline is president, is nearing completion of its fourth season.

In addition to the piano concerto the program for Tuesday offers three Wagnerian selections, "Reine Overture," "Introduction to the Third Act of Lohengrin," and "Prelude to Lohengrin," "Light Cavalry Overture," by Suppe. Tickets are on sale at Cable Piano Company.

Sacred Cantata.
The "Seven Last Words of Christ," sacred cantata by Dubois, will be presented by the chorus choir of First Presbyterian church Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Soloists for the work are Mrs. Charles A. Sheldon Jr., soprano; Lena Mae Fairman, contralto; George Allen, tenor, and Stewart Watson, recent valued addition to Atlanta musical circles, will render the difficult baritone role. Dr. Charles A. Sheldon Jr. will be at the organ and will direct the work. The public is invited to attend.

Claire Harper in Concert.
Claire Harper, well known concert violinist, and member of the faculty of the Atlanta Conservatory and the University of Georgia, will be presented in concert by the Atlanta Conservatory Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Cable Hall. The public is invited.

Miss Harper has reaped many successes on the Atlanta concert stage and the news of her appearance in a complete violin concert will be welcome. She is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music in New York, where she was a fellowship pupil of the late Paul Kochanski.

Miss Harper's program for Wednesday offers the entire "Sonata for Violin and Piano in A major," by Franck; the Lalo "Symphonie Espagnole"; "Romance in F major," by Beethoven; "Prelude from Violin Sonata in E major," by Bach; and "Rondo Capriccioso," Saint-Saens.

Virgil Fox to Come Here.
Virgil Fox, outstanding young American organist, who was the unanimous winner of the 1929 biennial contest of the National Federation of Music Clubs when he was only 17 years old, will be heard in concert in Atlanta on Monday evening, April 22, at the First Baptist church. His Atlanta recital is being sponsored by the American Guild of Organists, Georgia chapter, of which Wilbur H. Howard, of Shorter College, is dean.

Conservatory Program.
The Atlanta Conservatory and College of Music, Hugh Hodgson, director, and Georg Lindner, dean, announces they will sponsor a broadcast over WSB on alternate Sunday evenings from 9 to 9:30 o'clock, beginning this evening, at which time short recitals will be presented by faculty members of the conservatory and artists. This evening Claire Harper, violinist; Irene Lueck, pianist, and Frances Stokes, contralto, will present the program.

Miss Dozier Honored.
Eugenie Dozier, head of the dance department of the Atlanta Conservatory, left yesterday afternoon by plane for Birmingham to be in attendance at the meeting of the Alabama Dancing Teachers' Association. Mildred Adams is head of this organization. While in Birmingham Miss Dozier will attend a party given in her honor by the association, and will also teach the group two Chasin Preludes (one still in manuscript) and a prelude by Erik Satie. She will return to Atlanta by plane this afternoon.

Mu Phi Epsilon Entertains.
The Mu Omega chapter of the Mu Phi Epsilon national honor music society entertained in honor of women students of the junior, senior and post-graduate classes of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Jeff Hutchings is president of the chapter.

A musical program was offered by a group of the guests. Those appearing included Grace McKinley, Irma Jackson, Mrs. Henry Ware, Katherine McConnell, Dorothy Hiatt, pianists, and Mary Farmer and Elise Jamieson, vocalists.

Trophy for Gatti-Casazza.
Helen Gleason, selected as the most representative of American opera stars, has been chosen to present the trophy now being made for Giulio Gatti-Casazza in appreciation for his encouragement of American opera singers during his 27 years as general manager of the Metropolitan opera house. The presentation will take place on April 26 prior to his sailing for his home in Italy.

Robert Harrison in Recital.
An audience in Cable hall received a simultaneous surprise and disappointment Thursday evening—a happy surprise in the unusual artistry of the 18-year-old young violinist, Robert Harrison, who won the student musician contests in violin of the South Atlantic District National Federation of Music Clubs in Savannah recently, and a keen disappointment when it was announced from the stage that Louise Higgins, young pianist, who won the student musician contests in piano at the convention of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs, was the victim of an attack of appendicitis and therefore could not appear with Mr. Harrison in recital as scheduled. Helen Knox Spain, Georgia chairman of young artists and student musician contests, presented Mrs. Harrison as awards. Evelyn Jackson, president of the state federation, was honor guest of the occasion. Mr. Harrison is a pupil of Georg Lindner, and Miss Higgins a pupil of Charles Beaton.

The last half of the program will be devoted entirely to operatic selections, offering favorite arias and choruses from several operas. Besides Miss Hecker, other soloists, members of the club, will be Francis Nunn, Millard Rewie, Chester Kitchings, Edmund Phillips, Robert Blackwell and Ben Beabout.

National Federation Biennial.
The National Federation of Music Clubs, Mrs. John Alexander Jardine, president, will hold its biennial convention in Philadelphia from the twenty-third to the thirtieth of April. A gala musical festival has been planned for the official program of the convention, offering some of the finest artists and musical organizations of the country in concert. Some of the musical organizations invited to give concerts are the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Hurbi; the North Carolina All-State Symphony orchestra, conducted by Lamar Stringfield; the Salzedo Harp ensemble; the American Society of Ancient Instruments; the Philadelphia Music Club Women's Symphony orchestra, and the Matinee Musical Club piano and string ensembles. Such noted artists as Kathryn Meade, Iurbi, Martinelli, Eddy and Spaulding will be heard, as well as Gilbert Ross, violinist; Andrew Haigh, pianist; Dalmeier Russell, pianist, and Dorsey Whittington, in a two-piano recital.

Seven Famous Artists To Appear Here Next Season in All-Star Concert Series

The all-star concert series next season will introduce to Atlanta four new personalities of world renown, along with three artists who have established their popularity here.

Nelson Eddy, whose appearance in the motion picture, "Naughty Marietta," now in its second week at Loew's Grand, has made him the new singing sensation of the film, will be presented in joint recital with Helen Jepson, beautiful Metropolitan opera prima donna. Prior to their appearance here, on Saturday evening, February 8, Miss Jepson will also be a motion picture favorite as she is under contract to make two pictures for Paramount this May.

Mr. Eddy returns to Hollywood this spring for his next picture, which will be "Maytime."

Ruth Slenczynski (pronounced Slen-chen-ski), the amazing 10-year-old pianist, will be one of the most outstanding features of the series. This "wonder child," as she has been acclaimed throughout America and Europe, is recognized as one of the greatest prodigies the world has ever known. Not since Josef Hofmann made his debut as a boy has a young pianist created such a furor throughout the world as little Ruth has during the past 18 months. She comes to Atlanta on Monday evening, January 13.

Hans Kindler, world-renowned cellist and conductor, will direct the famous National Symphony orchestra, of Washington, D. C., on Wednesday evening, November 13. Mr. Kindler, the only conductor the National Symphony has ever had, has made of this orchestra one of the best in America. For the past five seasons an average of 80 concerts per season have been given by this organization in Washington. They have toured most of the large eastern cities, and annually present series of concerts in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Richmond, and other cities. This orchestra has 85 members, and is endowed for $100,000 per season.

The master violinist, Fritz Kreisler, will open the season, Saturday evening, October 19.

La Argentina, the Spanish dancer who is perhaps the foremost personality of the dance today, returns for her second engagement here, Tuesday evening, December 3. La Argentina was tremendously popular with her Atlanta audience when she danced here four seasons ago as a feature of the first all-star concert series.

The final attraction of the course will be Grace Moore, glamorous star of the musical masterpiece, "One Night of Love."

The all-star concert series will again be sponsored by the Atlanta Music Club and the Atlanta Philharmonic Society and will be presented at the Fox theater, provided the city completes arrangements for the use of that theater as an auditorium, which is considered a certainty.

The price of season tickets will remain the same as last season. Reservations may be made now through Marvin McDonald, manager, 35 Peachtree circle, Hemlock 2233.

JUDGE DONATES $5 TO MAN WHO STOLE TO FEED CHILDREN
NEW YORK, April 13.—(UP)—Spectators sniffling and Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky shifted uncomfortably on the bench. Detective Vito Cristiano whispered that the arrest was the hardest thing he ever had to do.

Before the bar in Yorkville court stood William Ritterweiser, fat, and a friend, Harry Stein. They were charged with theft of a case of milk, and Ritterweiser told in hopeless tones how the walls of his six hungry children had driven them to steal. Stein, who has two children of his own, visited Ritterweiser's bleak one-room apartment, heated by a stove, illuminated by an oil lamp, and with only one mattress to sleep on, last night. They stood the sobbing of the children as long as they could and then they went out.

Not far from the apartment at 301 East 83rd street, they found a case of milk. William Bock, an inspector for a bread company, saw and trailed them. He called Detective Cristiano. In the apartment stood Ritterweiser greedily gulping a bottle of milk.

"My kids are hungry," he said. "They haven't eaten for a long time. I couldn't hear them crying for food."

Max Eisenberg, owner of the milk, vigorously blew his nose and said he would not only refuse to prosecute but would supply more milk, and groceries, too. Magistrate Brodsky looked vastly relieved that he could dismiss the case and he softened a lecture against Stein with a $5 bill.

Mediation Expected In Mexican Strikes
MEXICO, D. F., April 13.—(P)—It was announced today that President Lazaro Cardenas is ready to mediate two of the outstanding industrial strikes in Mexico, which might mean the end of nearly all the important labor conflicts paralyzing the nation.

The president has offered to intervene in the Huasteca Refinery strike in Mata Redonda, Vera Cruz, and the trolleyman's strike in the capital, it was announced.

Previously the president had made it clear that he had no intention of establishing a communistic regime in Mexico, adding that private enterprises "can count on full guarantees and securities."

Boy, 10, Nabbed En Route To Court Shirley Temple

CHICAGO, April 13.—(P)—Having fallen in love with Shirley Temple's dimples the first time he saw the young actress in a motion picture, Warren Dawes, 10, decided to call on her. He left his South Side home yesterday with $1.20 for expenses, but paused in the loop to telephone Shirley that he was coming.

It was in a telephone booth, vainly trying to get Hollywood, Cal., that police found the lad at 4 o'clock this morning.

BOXER IS ACCQUITED IN ACCIDENT DEATH

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 13.—(P)—A circuit court jury early today acquitted Joe (Kid) Peck, veteran boxer and referee, of a second-degree murder charge in the death of Mrs. Ruth Matthews, killed by an automobile February 17.

The jury deliberated for two hours and 45 minutes.

Peck faces a similar charge over the death of Morris B. Sanders, former Little Rock banker, who was with Mrs. Matthews when the car struck them.

Thirty million miles of Ford Economy

MORE MILES. Faster miles. Greater economy . . . that is the story of the Ford V-8. There are conclusive figures from owners to show that it is the most economical Ford car ever built.

A particularly interesting and complete report of costs comes from a national fleet owner who has owned 854 Ford cars which have run more than thirty million miles in business use.

175 were Model T Fords which were run 5,017,075 miles. 599 were Model A Ford cars which were run 24,041,632 miles. 80 are Ford V-8 cars which have been run 2,982,896 miles.

This owner's cost records show that Ford V-8 cars cost 12% less to operate than the Model A Fords and 31% less than the Model T Fords. And they covered more miles per month! The monthly average for the Model T Fords was 1509 miles. For the Model A Fords, 1866 miles. . . . And 2571 miles for the Ford V-8.

Each year the Ford car gives you more in value and performance and costs you less to operate. The Ford V-8 was an economical car in 1934. This year it gives you still greater reliability and economy, new beauty, new safety, new ease of control and remarkable new riding comfort.

Actual Figures

Show the Ford V-8 is 12% more economical than the Model A. and 31% more economical than the Model T.

COTTON'S CRISIS

In a comprehensive review of the causes leading to the crisis faced by the cotton textile industry, L. M. Forbes, secretary of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia, in a communication appearing elsewhere on this page, makes the frank statement that the industry is facing certain bankruptcy unless relieved of the burdens that have made profitable operation impossible.

Citing the major increases in operation expenses resulting from the textile code, the first to be signed by any industry; the destructive effect of the processing tax; and the disadvantage to which the southern mills are placed by the inexcusable freight differentials granted eastern manufacturers, Mr. Forbes expresses grave concern "for the welfare and the happiness of the thousands of Georgia cotton farmers and their families and the 60,000 Georgia cotton mill workers and their families, and for the preservation of the enormous investments in lives and in resources which have been made in the cotton growing and manufacturing industry in this state."

This threat is laid directly at the door of "certain legislative and administrative policies which have proved to be economically unsound, and which are beyond the control of those whose interests are directly involved."

The continued urgency of New England manufacturers that the wage differential in the textile code, under which the minimum in the south is placed at $13 a week and at $14 in the east, be abolished, is convincingly answered by Mr. Forbes in the clear statement showing that, under existing conditions, the lower scale in the south represents greater revenue to the operators and larger cost to the mills, than the high scale does to the eastern mills.

The critical condition faced by the textile mills as the result of increased production costs and growing foreign competition is reflected in the announcement that the Slater Mill of Webster, Mass., the second oldest cotton mill in the United States, has quit operations for good.

The following report, published in a Boston newspaper, succinctly tells of the fate that has overcome a manufacturing company with a long record of prosperous and progressive business:

WEBSTER, Mass.—With notification given to salaried employees of the Slater Company mill that their services will be dispensed with in two weeks, the announcement was also made that the mill will not resume operations.

It has been closed since a week ago Friday, when the management shut down after refusing to grant a demand of the United Textile Workers for 20 per cent increase of pay for Slater operatives.

The mill before it closed down had on its pay roll 550 men and women.

This is the second New England mill to close its door permanently because of inability to operate profitably under existing conditions.

Numerous mills both in the east and the south have been forced to close temporarily, and the New England group has issued formal warning that if relief is not extended wholesale shut-downs will result, throwing thousands of operatives out of work.

The cotton industry, as regards both production and processing, is at the most vital crossroads in its history. The domination of world markets by American cotton is now seriously threatened by increased production in other countries and the textile manufacturers are unable to compete successfully with foreign-made materials, even in the markets of this country.

If general collapse, with disastrous results to the entire recovery program, is to be avoided, some means must be found to eliminate the evils that have brought about the crisis, and which are so clearly and forcefully presented in Mr. Forbes' comprehensive review.

HART SHOWS THE WAY

Attention is called in a communication, appearing elsewhere on this page, by L. C. Westbrook, county agent of Hart county, to the outstanding example of long-time planning set by the farmers of that county who during the past five years have planted hundreds of thousands of trees in a sustained reforestation program.

These progressive north Georgia farmers did not adopt the now customary policy of "let Uncle Sam do it," but they planted the trees themselves, using their own resources to get the seedlings.

On the contrary, they are determined to prove, Mr. Westbrook writes, "that it will pay the individual farmer to carry on a reforestation and soil conservation program of his very own rather than depend upon state and federal resources to do it for him."

If every farmer in Georgia were to follow this wise course millions of dollars would be added to the natural resources of the state each year and other millions saved that are now being annually swept away incident to the destruction of valuable land by erosion.

No better step for the future prosperity of the state could be taken than for the farmers and the businessmen of every county to get together on such a program. If the farmers of Hart county can do it, there is no reason why the same thing cannot be done in every other county.

THE TEXAS CENTENNIAL

Following the announcement that the Texas centennial celebration in 1936 will have as its principal feature a great central exposition in Dallas, 150 Texans will stop in Atlanta on May 1, en route to Washington to present an official invitation to President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner, members of the cabinet and of congress to attend the 100th birthday of the Lone Star State.

To the officials of Atlanta there will be presented a copy of the joint resolutions adopted by the Texas legislature. The people of 14 southern states will be invited to attend the main celebration at Dallas as well as supplementary projects at Houston, San Antonio and other Texas places which played a leading role in the momentous struggle of that state to throw off the yoke of Mexican tyranny.

There should be an enthusiastic reception given the ambassadors from Texas here and elsewhere in the south. The southern states contributed nine-tenths of the families who settled Texas and later carried on the heroic battle for independence. Georgia, Tennessee, the Carolinas, Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana were the native states of heroes who built an empire in a wilderness and flung off an alien yoke—heroes of whom Henry Van Dyke wrote:

"O, question not, but honor every name
Travis and Crockett, Bowie, Bonham, Ward,
Fannin and King, all who drew the sword
And dared to die for Texas liberty!
Yes, write them all upon the roll of fame,
But no less love and equal honor give
To those who paid the longer sacrifice
Austin and Houston, Burnet, Rusk, Lamar
And all the stalwart men who dared
To live
Long years of service to the lonely star."

Picturesque figures like Houston, Crockett and Bowie are best known to the world-at-large, but one of the most potent influences of the early drama of Texas was a great Georgia—Mirabeau B. Lamar. He was first a soldier in the ranks when Texans were fighting to destroy the rule of aliens, and later was named commander-in-chief.

Lamar's most lasting imprint on Texas was the result of his statesmanship. He was its first vice president and second president, and gave to Texas the opportunity to foster public schools and a great university system. He believed that, "It is the axiom of political science that unless a people are educated and enlightened, it is idle to expect the continuance of civil liberty, or the capacity of self-government."

It was while he was president and acting under his advice, the congress of the Republic of Texas gave for the purpose of public education immense acreage in land grants. There were set apart for education 221,420 acres, and later the state added to this endowment one section (640 acres) out of every 10 sections appropriated to encourage the building of railroads and other public improvements.

As a result of Mirabeau B. Lamar's interest in education and his foresight, the University System of Texas has an endowment which is surpassed by only one or two universities in America. It was in his first message to the Texas congress that Lamar proposed these land grants and at the same time he recommended a national bank, to be the exclusive property and under the control of the republic. Lamar was not only soldier and statesman, but journalist as well. He was the founder of the Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer-Sun, which began publication as a weekly in 1828.

One hundred years ago, the population of Texas was less than 200,000, of which a small percentage were Americans. It has been said that the fact that such a small number of Anglo-Saxons were able to achieve independence and maintain it for a decade, in spite of a powerful enemy on its borders and in the face of tremendous financial difficulties, is one of the marvels of the nineteenth century.

Texas has always maintained her individuality. She was never a territory, and entered the Union on her own terms. She reserved the ownership and control of her own public domain and her territory could not be subdivided except by consent of her own people. At one time, Texas claimed a territory greater by 100,000 square miles than it does today. Yet it still comprises more than 170,000,000 acres.

Of Texas inhabitants born in the United States, approximately 85,000 are natives of Georgia, 140,000 of Tennessee, 135,000 of Alabama, 95,000 of Mississippi, and 80,000 of Arkansas. Of the 55 signers of the first declaration of independence, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and the Carolinas furnished one-half.

With ties of kinship so strong and with a veritable empire going on exhibition in the celebration of a momentous 100th anniversary, the southeast cannot fail to join heartily in this great centennial, whose headquarters will be in Dallas, Texas, in 1936.

OUTSIDE TROUBLE-MAKERS

Last Sunday The Constitution called editorial attention to a vicious pamphlet, entitled "Can Guns Settle Strifes?" being distributed in the south by a New York organization called "The Fellowship of Reconciliation."

It is not difficult to realize the particular brand of "reconciliation" favored by this organization since the pamphlet is an unwarranted attack on Governor Talmadge and other southern governors for having called out the national guard to quell violence during the textile strike, but which at the same time inferentially justifies the activities of the "flying squadrons" that spread terror, by violence and intimidation, through numerous peaceful communities.

The foreword to the pamphlet, which is published in New York, is signed by Will W. Alexander, executive director of the commission on interracial co-operation; George L. Googe, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor; W. Aiken Smart, Emory University, all of Atlanta, and Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, and E. McNeal Poter Jr., pastor of the Pullen Memorial Baptist church of Raleigh, N. C.

In all probability this group was misled into permitting their names to be used in the inferential endorsement of so vicious a document, obviously issued for the purpose of deception, and as an appeal to prejudice and passion.

In a communication appearing on the opposite page, Claud Nelson, of Decatur, southern secretary for the Fellowship of Reconciliation, defends the pamphlet on the ground that its purpose is "not an attack on a person, but the criticism of a policy."

The statement is also made that "we agree that both the right to work and the right to strike must be protected." It was because the right to work was being denied, through violence, to thousands of southern textile workers that the governors of three states called out the national guard at the urgency of local peace officers.

The "flying squadrons" were deliberately organized for the purpose of preventing, either by violence or intimidation, those who wanted to work from doing so. At least some of the members of these "flying squadrons" carried pistols and guns and all possessed clubs or other weapons of assault.

Since one side of the controversy resorted to guns, it was necessary that the constituted authorities send armed troops to put a stop to the disorders being created. Since this was the case, the question of a deliberate resort to arms to end strike troubles was not involved, despite the effort of the "Fellowship of Reconciliation" to make it so appear in the pamphlet, "Can Guns End Strifes?"

"The Fellowship of Reconciliation" is a New York organization, allegedly devoted to the promotion of "pacifism," but which refuses to reveal its sources of revenue.

It has conducted crusades against war and assails the "exploitation of workers," which it terms as "the root of war"—expressions strongly reminiscent of utterances emanating from bolshevik Russia during the past decade and a half.

It is evidently one of the excesses of extreme pacifist organizations, some of which, it is openly charged, are supported either directly or indirectly from Moscow. Whether or not the "Fellowship of Reconciliation" is of this type, the refusal of its officers to reveal the source of its income at least places its motives under suspicion.

The organization has participated in several disturbances, notably the disputes in Arkansas between sharecroppers and planters.

The circulation by such an organization of its vicious propaganda throughout the south is another instance of meddling outsiders seeking to stir up trouble.

Agitators of this type have done widespread harm in the thickly populated centers of the north and east, where they have organized radical groups that have been the leaders in numerous disturbances.

The organization is now concentrating its efforts at demoralizing conditions in the cotton textile industry in the south.

There should be no tolerance with dangerous and misguided efforts to stir up violence, under the guise of pacifism, in this section.

JAPAN SEEKS CLOSER ACCORD

Encouraging prospect of more intimate and understanding relations between the Japanese government and the United States is found in the recently expressed opinion of Foreign Minister Hirota that "better friendship between the two nations bordering the Pacific hinges solely on a closer economic co-operation between them."

Mr. Hirota's statement reveals an accurate knowledge of one of the chief underlying reasons for the somewhat formal reception given by the American state department during the past two years to the various friendly gestures made from Tokyo.

While trade conditions have not been entirely responsible for the American attitude, the inroads made by Japanese industrialists into the American export business have caused such serious concern both in the state department and in congress as to prevent a return of the intimate relations interrupted by the unfortunate policies of the Stimson regime.

The Japanese foreign minister's remark, made before a gathering of representative financiers, bankers and business leaders of Tokyo, called for the purpose of planning the reception to be accorded the American economic mission now touring the Far East, clearly reveals a continuance of the Japanese desire for the resumption of the close friendship that marked the relations of the two countries for more than a half century. He emphasized his belief that "the visit to Japan of the influential American mission affords the country a golden opportunity for the creation of a better understanding between the two countries."

Commenting upon the statement of Mr. Hirota, the Japan Times, one of the leading Japanese-owned daily newspapers of Tokyo, says: "That the foreign minister personally acted upon such prominent economic leaders is generally considered a very significant and timely step, particularly at a time when the need for a closer relationship with both the United States and China is keenly felt by the nation."

The American mission, which is headed by W. Cameron Forbes, former United States ambassador to Japan, can render far-reaching service in clearing up the misunderstandings that have arisen between the two nations during the past few years. Unquestionably much of the responsibility for the unfortunate estrangement that has arisen is attributable to American lack of understanding of Japanese conditions and policies.

If it can clear up these misunderstandings and thus clear the way for a resumption of more intimate relations between Japan and the United States the commission will have rendered invaluable service.

Textile Industry Facing Certain Bankruptcy Unless Given Relief From Unbearable Burdens—Forbes

Editor Constitution: Since, through the news and editorial columns of The Constitution, you have consistently manifested such a keen and constructive interest in the cotton producing and textile industry of the south, I am writing you with respect to a matter that has attracted considerable attention within recent months, in order that you may have the facts with which to answer certain charges against the southern branch of our industry.

During the past few weeks a great deal has been said by New England papers, congressmen, and manufacturers, to the effect that, under the cotton textile code, southern mills have been given a most advantageous position in the market and that as a result, many New England mills are being forced to discontinue operations. That these charges are not justified, I shall attempt to prove by facts and figures based on United States census bureau reports.

There was a time when southern mills did have some advantages over their eastern competitors, due largely to the fact that southern mills had not been handicapped with the restrictive legislative measures that had been enacted into law in some New England states. But the NRA through the cotton textile code, wiped out these advantages, and placed northern mills on a par with southern mills with respect to hours of operation and wage scales. It is true that the code provides that the minimum wage in the south shall be $12.00 per week, compared with a minimum of $13 per week in the north, but it is a self-evident fact that this differential of $1 per week in the south is actually a decrease amounting to only 2.5 per cent of the cost of owning, operating and maintaining the mill villages which practically all southern mills are required to furnish for their employees.

Under the code, southern mills are required to pay a minimum of $12.00 per week to their employees, but which are almost nonexistent in New England. Nor is this differential of $1 adequate to pay for the health, safety, and other industrial relations services which southern mills, by practice, tradition, and custom, feel under obligation to furnish their employees, but which are practically unknown in the northern branch of the cotton textile industry. Taking these factors into consideration, it is safe to say that the code actually gives southern mills a wage advantage over the south.

Unfair Freight Rates: Furthermore, it should be remembered that the northern mills are located much nearer to the primary cotton goods markets of the east and can, therefore, deliver their goods to those markets at a lower cost than the southern mills. The proximity of southern mills to the source of supply of raw cotton has ceased to be of any advantage, since the code has made it possible for a bale of cotton to be shipped as cheaply from New Orleans to Boston or New Bedford as from Memphis to Atlanta.

In addition to these several factors, tax rates on New England mills have been gradually lowered for a number of years, and in some instances tax assessments against textile plants are being abated entirely in some eastern communities, while in southern states the taxes paid per spindle by cotton mills have been consistently increasing.

I call these facts to your attention for the purpose of explaining some of the causes that have brought about the serious problems which are now confronting our industry and which you have so ably discussed through the editorial columns of The Constitution in recent weeks.

The cotton textile industry, the basic industry of the south, is facing certain bankruptcy, involving the closing of hundreds of mills and the dismissal of thousands of workers, unless Washington rectifies some of the disastrous mistakes that have been made.

The cotton textile industry opposed the establishment of the processing tax to the limit of its ability, warning that it would ruin the American cotton farmer and the cotton mill worker. Mr. Wallace refused to listen to the experience and wisdom of those who have invested their lives in this great industry, and having levied these super-sales taxes, has found himself with disastrous results to America's industry and agriculture, he has not the political courage to admit his error.

In the following analysis, the 18-month period preceding the establishment of the cotton textile code includes the period of January 1, 1932, to June 30, 1933, which the 18-month period immediately following the establishment of the code. This study has been based entirely on figures published monthly by the census bureau of the census, showing cotton consumption, spindle activity, etc., of the mills in the New England states and in the cotton-producing states of the south. The figures reveal the fact that the operations of the northern mills were materially increased during the 18-month period following the establishment of the code, while on the other hand, the operations of the southern mills have shown a decrease.

The quantity of cotton consumed during a given period is measured by the number of spindles actually operated during a given period. For example, 1,000 spindles operating for 40 hours would produce a total of 40,000 spindle hours. The monthly reports of the United States bureau of the census show the exact spindle hours operated by the various states, so that by geographic division, so that an accurate comparison is possible.

During the 18-month period preceding the code, the mills in the cotton-producing states operated a total of 80,800 billion spindle hours, while during the 18 months immediately following the code, these mills operated only 87,338 billion spindle hours, a decrease of 8,038 billion spindle hours, or 9.9 per cent. (See Table I).

Holds Taxpayers Getting Only 50 Cents On Dollar Value Of The Present Worn-Out Systems of Local Governments

It is a cardinal principle of Jeffersonian teachings, that national and state governments should do nothing for the people locally, which they can do for themselves. It is also a teaching of the same authority that state and national governments, by a wise administration of law, shall encourage and protect local units in their efforts to help themselves.

Hence, there was established in every state in this Union, in the beginning of this nation, local units of government, municipalities, and even small militia districts, parishes, etc.

These local political units conformed thoroughly and entirely with the foundations upon which the American institutions were established, and the present wholesale argument for the destruction, or obliteration of these political units, is another example of the Hamiltonian theory of the centralization of government and political power, and of depriving local people of the right of fostering and maintaining their own local units of government.

The howl and horror of the Hamiltonian "rang," over the expenditure of $2,000,000,000 on county and local government throughout the United States, is nothing more than an effort to fool local communities into surrendering their local political rights, and causing them to surrender the principle to the federal government, and to deliver themselves into the control of the larger cities of the nation.

It is not the principle upon which the expenditure of $2,000,000,000 locally is done, which is wrong; but it is the fact that every system of county and local government in this nation is out of date and does not conform to the conditions in which we live.

The result of these worn-out systems of government is, that the people are getting only 50 cents for the dollar value for the tax money expended. Until county and local governments are reformed so efficiently that waste, extravagance and graft will be eliminated, the tax money will continue to bear a heavy burden in this respect.

If the taxpayers were operating under a system that would secure approximately 50 cents for the dollar value of the tax money expended, the expenditure of money for local governmental purposes, tax rates could be correspondingly reduced, and the burden proportionately relieved. Georgia is not overrun by the multiplicity of local governments. This state is reasonably thickly populated. Every political unit in this state was established for a local purpose, and the federal government and social security. Every local political unit needs its local government. It needs to do everything possible for the people, and to relieve state and federal government as much as possible. Every one of these political units is needed to foster the local spirit of patriotism and pride in local government. If the number of counties and political units in Georgia were cut half in two, a thousand local communities would turn backward in

More Buying Competition And Better Cattle Needed For Higher Beef Prices

Editor Constitution: The two fat cattle shows just held in Georgia have demonstrated three facts for which we cattlemen have contended: First, raise better cattle; second, finish them out better before selling; and third, we need more competition in buying. President Roosevelt was offered $3.50 per hundred last fall for his cattle. Thursday they sold around $3.75. Since fall cattle prices have only advanced 40 per cent. The president received 150 per cent more than the first offer. The answer is more feed and more buyers.

Dr. Hoke sold some of his cattle at $13 per hundred, not including the prize steer which brought him $226. The same answer here, except he raises better cattle and to start with a hundred head of cattle were sold at the Albany show in a few hours and the prices ran from $5 to $13 for the better cattle, down to $3 for the poor stuff. All these prices were better than we usually get by at least $2 to $5. Answer, competition.

On Sunday, March 17, two letters appeared in your columns which took issue with the letter I wrote to Editor Roosevelt. One of the letters was from E. S. Papp, manager of the White Provision Company, of Atlanta, Georgia, and the other from Mr. Papp.

Mr. Papp says he is willing to cooperate with the cattlemen. Fine, if he will honestly do so. We are all ready to go. All we ask is that the White Provision Company for our cattle. The day Chicago prices for our cattle. It should not be hard to do because we are importing 25,000,000 pounds of beef annually which means freight charges of $1.00 per hundred. The day Chicago prices for our cattle. It should not be hard to do because we are importing 25,000,000 pounds of beef annually which means freight charges of $1.00 per hundred.

Getting off of beef for a minute, take hog prices as quoted last Sunday: Corn fed hogs $8.85, and mixed fed hogs $7.25. You couldn't get a "corn fed" hog at $8.85. If you had all the hogs in a county swear he was fed on corn only. If he is sold in Georgia he is "mixed fed." The packers' theory is that he is sold in his life he ate a peanut and that ruined him to the tune of $1.00 per hundred pounds. No one who raises hogs in this country has ever seen why seven cents a pound fed hogs are quoted unless it is to show what people in other states are getting for their product. Cattle raisers, however, always raise corn hogs. We want hog prices fair too.

Mr. Papp wants to co-operate. The word co-operate means "to work with, jointly." Thus each to do his part. With large importations of meat into the state, the packers should be paid. If the White Provision Company, who evidently help make the market quotations, would do their part, the raisers would do theirs. Let's co-operate. Up until lately the top price of cattle quoted in Atlanta was 3 cents a pound. Where did these fine Georgia packers come from? If the number of counties and political units in Georgia were cut half in two, a thousand local communities would turn backward in

Tots Find New Spint and Health In Emergency Nursing Schools

Editor Constitution: I read with deep interest and approval the statement published in The Constitution relative to a proposed bill by Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, to create and finance a Farm Tenants' Home Corporation operative by the federal government.

No greater service could be rendered to the south and nation than the establishment of a federal system by which efficient and capable tenant farmers could be encouraged and aided to become prosperous and independent small landowners.

Approximately 75 per cent of the farmers in Georgia and the other cotton states are either tenants or sharecroppers. This unfortunate system has developed a distressing condition which is leading to the ultimate decay of our great agricultural industry.

I have for many years in published articles and in letters written to those in authority at Washington urged that plans be provided by the government to check the rapid increase in tenant farming and rebuild the ownership of small land-owning farmers. No country ever has or ever will prosper and forge ahead in progressive development with a majority of its farmers as tenants.

Such a system perpetuated means the gradual degradation of the country home, the impoverishment of the soils and inefficient farming methods with the loss of farm-purchasing power to the states and the nation.

I trust that Senator Bankhead will have the full support of congress in his highly commendable efforts to enact a sound and practical financial measure which will begin the establishment of a permanent system for the gradual relief of farm tenancy and provide a satisfactory and enduring system of small land-owning farmers for the rebuilding of our agricultural industry and thereby abolish the present menace of unprofitable farming.

Home Garden Beans

BY W. ELBRIDGE FEEBORN.

The rule that our grandfathers used in planting beans at Atlanta was that they should not be planted until Good Friday. This year, with Easter coming on April 21, a great many have already begun to plant beans. It is necessary to understand the proper methods of controlling the Mexican bean beetle.

Before discussing this pest, and particularly for the benefit of those who will not plant beans until Good Friday, we would like to recommend some of the new and outstanding varieties of beans that have been introduced to southern gardens within the last few years: Tendergreen stringless green pod bush bean, McCaslin pole bean, Henderson bush lima bean, Yopp's prolific pole lima bean and dust-proof golden wax bush bean are five of the outstanding garden varieties for use in the south.

The most outstanding one of these is the new tendergreen stringless green pod bush bean, 4,200, which is the gold medal award from the All-America Vegetable Council. The plants are large, erect, prolific; pods are tender, green, stringless, round, 8 inches long, fleshy, smooth and attractive.

Mexican Bean Beetle Control. I want to quote from the most recent Bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, which is very active. This bulletin should be a complete plant food with groups.

"Life History and Habits. The beetles begin to leave their winter quarters in the spring. In the south they first appear in the bean fields in March or early April, while in the north they do not appear until June. At intermediate points they appear on different dates, depending on the location.

Barbers in Evangelism! The emperor's birthday is a holiday in Japan, and on that day the barbers of Kansas joined with the local ministers in celebrating by helping some who had need of their shears. Floods, added to hard times, have left a large area near Kansas in a bad way. The Kansas Barbers' Association, under the leadership of the ministers, got the use of two buses and filled them with barbers and evangelists. The evangelists, in the meantime, were busy with their shears, while the barbers evangelized to the children and gave out tracts to the adults.

In the southern mountains there is a community nurse who has a record of bringing into the world more than 900 babies without a single infection. This community nurse is employed by one of our church missionary boards.

Dr. George William Brown, general secretary of the American Bible Society, gives the following interesting facts about the society's ministering to the blind for 100 years: "A century of service to the blind is rounded out by the American Bible Society in April of this year, 1935. During this period 118,000 volumes of the Bible have been distributed among the sightless, and the number of sightless people who have been helped is estimated at 6,000 being reached for the second time in 1934. The majority of the blind have lost their sight in adult life, and many of these adults, from previous occupations, have fingers so toughened and nerves so dulled that reading through their fingers is the only way they can read. This is a modified raised English letter large enough for the reader to feel with his finger tip. These large letters result in bulky books. A complete Bible requires 58 large volumes, making a stack, the top of which a man on tip-toe cannot reach. The Bible Society is now equipping children in schools for the blind and to adults whose finger tips are sensitive. It is based on a formation of six dots, three high and two wide, which are embossed in sufficient relief to be read by touch. It is written by hand with the use of a Braille stylus, and a Braille typewriter, with just six keys available. The system has been condensed by numerous contractions for syllables and words. Some learn to read it with astounding rapidity. For full hundred years, the American Bible Society has been putting the Bible at the command of the blind in various systems in this country, and distributing them also in foreign lands and languages."

quantities, one ounce (five level tablespoons) of magnesium arsenate in three gallons of water. "In all experiments tried by the writer two pounds of magnesium arsenate sufficient to cover the underside of the bean foliage where the beetle feeds, were sufficient to prevent the spray mixture, weigh the proper quantity of magnesium arsenate, mix it with a small quantity of water, and wash it through a fine strainer into the spray tank in order to prevent clogging of nozzles. "The magnesium arsenate must be applied to the bean foliage where the beetle will eat it when feeding, that is, on the undersides of the leaves. Magnesium arsenate is a stomach poison, and therefore not effective until it is taken into the stomach of the insect; hence the insects may not receive a poisonous dose unless they are sprayed on the underside of the leaves. It is often difficult to find the underside of the leaves. The majority of the beetles will feed directly after the application of the spray, but some will be found crawling around over the plant for several days thereafter. MELLON'S GIFTS TOTAL 23 MILLION IN 5 YEARS

Only $2,218,000 on Donations.

Records from the A. W. Mellon income tax hearing disclose that the financier lists his public gifts for educational and charitable purposes for the five years ending in 1934 at $23,612,031.32.

The largest item on the list of gifts is $9,587,615 which has gone to the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust. More than $19,000,000 of it was involved in oil paintings for a projected national art gallery.

The government, in the tax case, has challenged the contention that these art gifts are bona fide tax-exempt gifts.

In the five years, Mellon has claimed exemptions for $2,218,928.97 on the donations—about all that could be claimed, because the late Mr. Mellon

By Jimmy Jones.

Manager Eddie Moore, after several weeks of deliberation and frequent consultations of his staff, yesterday made the decision that brought the Crackers' roster down to the 18 players allowed for the first month of the season and, at the same time, disposed of a knotty problem on his pitching staff.

The decision—or series of them—follows:

1. Jim Lindsey, veteran holdover of last year's staff, and "Whitey" Hayes, rookie, who has a sore arm, were placed on the suspended list for an indefinite period.

2. Pitcher Ralph West, rookie right-hander, was sent on option to the Portsmouth club of the Piedmont league, with which the Crackers have a working agreement.

MOORE TO PLAY.

3. Moore himself decided to return to action Tuesday and very likely will play second base against the Knoxville Smokies, leaving young Johnny Hill on third. The Crackers' playing manager isn't positive about this, but it seems the most likely arrangement since Young "Nig" Lipscomb, his promising young second sacker, hasn't quite recuperated from his leg trouble.

"I may change my mind and play third, but Hill is a very cool youngster and can get by there all right, I think," he said.

These decisions by Moore mean that the following Cracker roster will start the season:

Pitchers—Harry Kelley, Lynn Nelson, Bill Schmidt, "Bud" Thomas, Chester Martin, Bobby Durham and Almon Williams.

Catchers—Joe Palmisano and Jimmy McCaskill.

Infielders—Harry Taylor, Manager Moore, Buster Chatham, "Nig" Lipscomb and John Hill.

Outfielders—Henry Oana, Dave Harris, Paul Easterling and Norman (Pinkie) James.

Discussing the suspension of Lindsey and Hayes, Moore stated:

"This doesn't mean that I intend to dispose of either pitcher, Hayes has a sore arm and can't pitch any way. And Lindsey isn't in the best of shape. Besides, it will give me a chance to see how Thomas looks against league opposition."

PLANS TO USE HIM.

Moore plans to start Thomas in regular order with the so-called "Big Four" and pitch him frequently for the first 30 days.

The suspension rule implies that a player must remain suspended for a minimum of 10 days, but he may be kept suspended for an indefinite period, as long as there is cause for same.

Lindsey, a seasoned campaigner of 14 seasons in the big leagues and minors, pitched splendid ball for the Crackers last year after coming here from the Cardinals, winning 10, losing 3 and pitching two tie games. He had the best percentage of any man on the staff and earned more than the age of 3.23. He is considered too valuable a man to let go.

Hayes, who won five straight for the club last season, is still considered a good prospect. His arm is being treated by a specialist and he is improving.

After the first 30 days of the season, Moore will have to get the pruning knife again and further reduce his roster to 16 players. But by that time, he will have a better line on the youngsters and will know all about them. Portsmouth will get the first call on the two players to be sent out.

SCHMIDT AT KNOXVILLE.

Moore also confirmed previous statements that Bill Schmidt would be his choice to pitch the opening game in Knoxville Wednesday. The Crackers and Smokies play here Tuesday.

Thomas and Nelson clearly will work the next two in the order named, thereby enabling Moore to get his "Big Four" rotating. Thomas has shown so much ability that he couldn't be kept out of there. Williams and Durham will be held in reserve for relief pitching.

"I have had a time getting this pitching situation straightened out with the weather we've been having, but it seems as if I have four men ready to go now," Eddie stated.

Harry Kelley, who will pitch Tuesday against Climax Blethen, is ready to go, outside of a heavy cold. He thinks he will be completely over this and yesterday Trainer Johnny Shores had the star on the rubbing table for an hour, applying the rubbing oil and lamp rays.

Mr. Eddie Moore and I were sitting around peering at his Crackers as they went through the motions. We were discussing that charming subject, "Why We Behave Like Human Beings."

If his Crackers get anywhere in the Southern association race this year it will be because they are in charge of a man who recognizes the fact that men are individuals, not groups.

It will be his job to baby the babies, praise the faint-of-heart, encourage the ambitious and otherwise play mental nursemaid to his squad of 18 men.

I do not know if there are any of the Crackers who like to bend the elbow now and then. If there be any it will be his job to keep this group separated and not let them get together in their moments of elbow bending. If so they are apt to start singing or tossing out furniture from the hotel rooms and falling into the hands of the constabulary. None of this is good for a ball club. It will be better if he has none of this type but if he has and keeps them separated it will work no great harm.

It is no job for a word-mincer, this one of managing a ball club. Nor is it a task for one who does not know when to mince a syllable or so. It is a job calling forth the best diplomatic qualities in one, plus the best ideas of discipline.

I have known ball clubs to be wrecked because the wrong man was put into an upper berth or because a couple of players' wives got to talking in the stands. Oh, it's a sweet job, this one of managing a ball club.

A CASE IN POINT.

I have in mind a case in point with regard to the value of knowing why we behave like human beings.

There was a manager in a minor league last year who was awarded a new contract before the season closed. He was a good baseball man but his head had not been able to stand the pressure. He had become harsh and unreasonable on his players.

When he was awarded the new contract he had an excellent opportunity presented him. He could have gone down to the clubhouse and said, "Well, boys, we've all been on edge and I guess I've been too critical. I've got a new contract and I want to help every man here get one so let's forget it all and go out there and play baseball."

They would have come through for him and he would not now be out of baseball had he done just that.

But instead he went down and he said, in effect: "Well, you mugs, I've got mine for next year. You so-and-so's have been riding me, now I'm going to do some. You'll get out there and play ball or I'll wreck you all for next year."

This sounds too dumb to be true yet it is quite true.

The result was that the infielders began to miss hops by inches and the hitters began to be very listless up there at the plate. The outfielders would barely fail to get under fly balls and before long the ball club looked so terrible that the manager was out and a new one in. He is getting his money but he is out of baseball and the story has got around and it would be most surprising if he got a job in 1936.

Had he known why we behave like human beings he would have saved himself the best minor league job in baseball. And he was a good baseball man, too.

GOSSIP IN THE GRANDSTAND.

I have in mind a Nashville club of a decade ago which was ruined by the wives of the players. Nowadays the wives are pretty wise and break up into couples or maybe into singles as the game goes on. The latter idea is best.

This Nashville club had a group which was composed of the wives of two pitchers, a veteran and a youngster; the wife of the third baseman and the wife of an outfielder.

It was a very poisonous group which eventually became so poisonous it bit itself. But before it did that it would sit there like the knitting women before the guillotine, the national barber of France, during the revolution of which Mr. Dickens wrote so charmingly in his "Tale of Two Cities."

When they were hitting the veteran pitcher the wife would make caustic remarks about how the third baseman was missing them and the outfielders were dropping them. This would be the cue for the third baseman's wife to say something about pitchers who stayed too long in the league. "And so on.

Before long the five husbands were glaring at each other on the field and were not speaking. The thing spread and the wives separated but it was too late.

The manager of this club was a former major league star and he took to drink. It used to be necessary to haul him out of the various speakeasies around town and take him off to the train when road trips began. He would mumble incoherently about gossiping wives and speak very despairingly indeed of the fair sex in general. All the baseball reporters were very sympathetic with him and used to help give him the old leave-ho onto the trains. It was a distressing situation.

NEW ORLEANS DEFEATED.

Word from the local park from our Mr. Mann is that the reserved seats at the Cracker park, are sold out completely, the first time this has occurred at this date.

This means that the New Orleans fans are defeated in their effort to bestir some competition for the attendance cup. Atlanta will have as many in the reserved seats as will occupy the park at New Orleans.

This corner is sponsoring the opening day and confidently expects 18,000 fans to be present if the weather is fair, as it will be.

Latest word from New Orleans is that Mr. Bill Keefe, the scribe, is in training. Mr. Keefe usually enters the gate at New Orleans several hundred times in an effort to beat Atlanta's record. His record is 1,213 entries the year of the famous soap-wrappers day when school children were admitted for soap wrappers, chalk or marbles. Mr. Keefe ran up the turnstiles 1,213 times that year. This year he hopes to set a new record.

There are always great vacant spots in the New Orleans stands and when the few fans present ask why, Mr. Macon Jones, the secretary, always replies: "Oh, that is where Mr. Keefe is sitting."

DON'T MISS THIS ONE.

Our Mr. Bryan Grant is to be out there on the clay this afternoon having it out with Wilmer Allison, the No. 1 ranking tennis player of the good old U. S. A. It is a match which outtranks any our town has ever seen—two members of the Davis cup squad—the number one and the number ten ranking players, in action. The match, along with others, will be played at the Billmore courts this afternoon, they being on Peachtree street at Fourth.

GRANT, ALLISON CLASH TODAY

By Jack Troy.

Out at the April 14-15 tennis matches (b-r-r-r-r-r!) Saturday, Bryan Grant, Atlanta's new Davis cup player, once again demonstrated there is something very funny indeed about the national rankings by defeating Berkeley Bell, seventh-ranking star from New York, in straight sets of a semi-final match that showed, beyond any doubt, the mastery of Atlanta's national clay courts champion.

The scores were 8-6, 8-6, 6-1. Wilmer Allison, No. 1 national star and top-seeded in the tournament, won his way to the finals with a straight-set victory over Billy Reese, Georgia Tech captain, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

And so Allison, Davis cup player, and Grant, ranked 10th nationally and the newest of the cup players, meet for the championship of the second annual Atlanta invitation tournament at 3:20 this afternoon at the Billmore Club.

The Grant-Bell battle was clearly the feature of a bitterly cold afternoon. There was an amazingly fine crowd out, despite all, fully 700 spectators witnessing the play.

"GENERAL" GRANT.

Grant outgeneraled Bell and ran him to distraction before the three sets were over. He finally had Bell calling his own shots, being the job ordinarily handled by the umpire and the linesmen. It was the second straight-set victory for Grant over Bell this season.

Getting back everything Bell offered, including his smashing service, Bitzy did not always wait for Bell to err but often galloped to the net, fought it out in brilliant exchanges, and then put the points away.

Perhaps the most brilliant point of the great match was that time when Bell dropped a tricky drop shot over the net in the corner, after an exchange, and stood by the post on the other end of the net, watching. It seemed impossible of return. Some-how Grant got it, however, and flipped a return down the sideline. It was almost too much for Bell's patience which was none too good at any stage of the match.

It was very evident that Grant won as he pleased. He was like a midget boxer, sparring for an opening and then landing a killing punch. He boxed with Bell, caught him off balance and finished him off time and again.

Grant ran in three love games in the first set. Bell served first and at 40-15, slipped one past Grant and was in the lead. Bitzy won his service to even the count.

It all seemed too easy as Grant

Opening Day Plans Are Given By Earl Mann

By Earl Mann.

Elaborate, if not entirely original, are the plans for the opening of Atlanta's 1935 baseball season.

Earl Mann, vice president of the Crackers, yesterday gave them in detail as follows:

1. Parade will form downtown at Trinity avenue and Whitehall at noon.

2. Four bands will head parade and proceed to Baker street where bands will fall out, with rest of participants proceeding to ball park.

3. Fifty new automobiles will take part in the procession, along with city officials, players of both Atlanta and Knoxville clubs and President John D. Martin, of the Southern league.

4. At ball park, Mayor James L. Key will throw out the first ball and Miss Louise Robert, president of Atlanta Debutante Club, will receive it to pitch to the first hitter, which will be Governor Eugene Talmadge.

Richard West, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who is visiting here, will catch the first ball.

5. The usual flag raising exercises will be held in center field with four bands—Tech High, Boys' High, Police and American Legion drum and bugle corps leading march to flaps. Players also will participate in this.

6. Game starts at 3:30 p. m. central standard (Atlanta) time, which will continue to be the starting time until further notice.

That Mann's prediction of a record-breaking crowd of 18,000 will attend the opener is the event of fair weather will come true is indicated by the heavy advance sales. All of the reserved box seats are sold out for the first time in history at this time and Mann has erected more emergency bleachers to take care of the crowd. He figures on actual seating capacity for 18,000 persons, with 15,000 allowed to the overflow section in center field.

"Atlanta is out, not only to take the league attendance trophy again but to beat its own opening day record," Mann declared.

General admission grandstand and bleacher seats are on sale at Marshall & Reynolds downtown.

By Ralph McGill.

Atlanta's campaign to exterminate the Buffalo was halted abruptly yesterday on the icy diamond at Ponce de Leon park when the Buffalo ball club scored three runs in the tenth inning to win, 6 to 3.

Art Jacobs, who could not get them out as a Cracker last year, pitched the last inning for the Bisons and made three of our hitters look very bad as he got them out in order in the tenth. He was the winning pitcher and he was one of the few games he ever won on Ponce de Leon.

It was so cold that the pitchers kept a startled look on their faces. They explained later it felt as if their arms were accompanying the balls up.

Four Cracker Pitchers Ready To Go---Moore

Eddie Hopes to Get Jump on Rivals; Kelley, Schmidt, Nelson and Thomas "Ready."

By Jimmy Jones.

They can wipe all the exhibition results off the book and toss all the hot stove league debates in the nearest can for Tuesday is opening day in Atlanta and the rest of the territory that is embraced by the grand old league that is the Southern.

Instead of having to read the daily jeremiads of the managers, the routine reports of the practice antics and the last year's batting averages, old John Fann, the man who lays it on the line, can now go out and munch his peanuts while affixing the cold scrutiny on the athletes.

This also relieves the baseball writers of having to cudgel their wits every day to think up something new for the papers without writing the story they wrote last month.

Here in Atlanta, the best baseball town of them all, one finds the old city all agog once more over the Crackers.

SEE RECORD CROWD. Without a great deal of drum-beating of ballyhoo, the Atlanta officials may look forward to a crowd which may actually break the record set on April 16, 1931, when 17,201 rushed to the turnstiles at Ponce de Leon park to see a ball club which couldn't carry this ball club's glove, to use the vernacular of the game.

There is a lot of enthusiasm for this club and also for the two young, but extremely capable executives who head it actively—namely Eddie Moore, the manager, and Earl Mann, the vice president and nominal president.

Both are beginning their first season or, their respective capacities and everyone wishes them a lot of luck.

And as for the ball club it is rated the best the city has seen since Bert Niehoff's pennant winner of 1925, and undoubtedly deserves it.

The team, which undoubtedly carries more guns of the right kind than last year's team and a little sharper rifle, has acquitted itself well in a long run of 18 exhibition games.

Moore is eager that the club get off to a good start on the first full 154 game schedule (plus the Shaugnessy play-off) the league has had since 1932.

THEY ALL COUNT. "A game won in April or May means just as much as a game in July or August," Eddie commented wisely.

Moore says he now has four pitchers in shape and ready to go. They are Harry Kelley, the ace, who will pitch Tuesday's game; Bill Schmidt, the brilliant rookie who has been nominated for Wednesday's game in Knoxville; Lynn Nelson, who looked great against Buffalo Friday in allowing one hit, and "Bud" Thomas, the youthful right-hander who put up

MISS GLUTTING MEETS DEFEAT

PINEHURST, N. C., April 13.—(AP)—Estelle Lawson, of Chapel Hill, N. C., today brought the south its first victory in the 35-year-old women's north and south golf tournament, defeating Charlotte Glutting, East Orange, N. J., defending champion, one up, in the title round.

One down at the turn, Miss Lawson put on a comeback on the inward nine and after 18 holes was 2 up. Miss Glutting prolonged the match by taking the seventeenth with a par 5, but went down to defeat as they halved the home hole in 36.

Miss Lawson shot an approximate 82 in defeating the New Jersey champion and medalist in the tournament.

a great fight for his place on the staff. Bobby Durham, the stocky rookie, is being held in reserve for relief duty.

Eddie Moore realizes that it is on the spot and that it is a pretty hot one since more than one veteran and thoroughly-seasoned manager has howled to the guillotine here during the last eight years. They include Spencer Abbott, Charley Moore, "Red" Barron, Johnny Dobbs, Wilbur Good and Bert Niehoff, all of whom relinquished the reins under a certain amount of pressure.

And what does Moore, the third baseman who wound up last season with 9 out of 10 victories after taking the helm from Abbott, think about the ball club he has been given to manage? Let him tell you:

ONLY TWO HITTERS. "Last year we had only two hitters—Joe Palmisano and Duck McKea—who batted above .200. This year I hope to have five or possibly six, including myself and Harry Taylor."

'Free-for-All' Battle Is Seen in Southern League This Season

'EXPERTS' GIVE CRACKERS BEST CHANCE AT FLAG

Five Clubs Figured To Fight It Out for Pennant.

By Kenneth Gregory.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 13.—(AP)—Baseball's year-round fans—the fellows who gather in stove-league haunts to wage word-battles for this or that team through the winter months—may relax now and await the outcome of their prophecies.

The time has arrived for action instead of ballyhoo, with the 1935 pennant race of the Southern association, heralded as one of the best in years, scheduled to shove off next Tuesday afternoon for the 154-game schedule.

Inauguration of the Shaughnessy system, changes in managerial roles, strengthening of some of the weaker clubs of last season and the general excitement of the season have brought about a feeling that the league will provide plenty of fireworks before the curtain falls next September.

"FREE-FOR-ALL."

In every respect the outlook is for a well-balanced "free-for-all" battle for the gonfalon, with at least five clubs figuring in the race and the other three looming as anything but pushovers.

Extremely popular around the circuit in preseason discussions, the Atlanta Crackers, a team that won its last flag ten years ago, have been elevated to the post of favorite by the winter "experts" who figure the Georgia member a potential champion.

Generally, however, the flag chase stacks up as a wide-open battle, with at least four teams aside from Atlanta—New Orleans, Memphis, Nashville and Chattanooga—fortified with good material and ranked as real contenders.

Under the Shaughnessy system of play, the teams finishing in the first division engage in a post-season series for the pennant. The prevailing assumption is that the race will go to the end, with Atlanta, Chattanooga, Knoxville and Little Rock likely to develop into very tough customers.

BEST HURLERS.

Atlanta has one of the best hurling staffs in the league, headed by the veteran Harry Kelley, leading pitcher of 1934. The Crackers have a powerful outfield trio of Dave Harris, Paul Easterling and Henry Oana, and a dependable infield.

Genial Larry Gilbert, the New Orleans manager whose teams have finished out of the first division only twice in the last 20 years, is going after his third consecutive pennant, but the Pelican pilot hesitates to say where his club will come in.

"Atlanta, Nashville and Memphis," Gilbert believes, "will battle it out to finish at the top," with New Orleans in the playoff series by getting "somewhere" in the select four before the season ends.

In leaving Chattanooga, Birmingham, Knoxville and Little Rock as its last division choices, Gilbert backs up his guesses by saying that any one of these "can prove a dark horse" and all are working along with major league teams and cannot be discounted.

ALL HAVE CHANCE.

Declining to hazard a guess on the race, "Mule" Shirley, the scrappy Chattanooga pilot who led the team to an inspired finish last season, expects a "wide open race" under the Shaughnessy system, with no favorite and everyone having a "chance," particularly since Doc Prothro has gone from Memphis to Little Rock to help get the Travelers up the ladder, and the Birmingham Barons are working with Pittsburgh.

Fred Hoffman, the Memphis Chickasaws' new catcher-manager, a former Yankee backstop, openly selects his team to finish out in front, conceding Atlanta second place, New Orleans third and Nashville fourth.

While the majority of the managers have put their bets on New Orleans selecting it to win the flag, Eddie Moore, peppy little manager of the Atlanta Crackers, believes Memphis has the best chance, with New Orleans also strong. As for the Crackers, Moore says determinedly that they will finish no lower than third.

BETTER BALANCE.

"This league," Moore says, "is better balanced now than I've seen for a long time."

Among those who pick Atlanta to come home in front is Les Head, manager of the Knoxville Smokies, who sizes up the team in this manner:

Atlanta, New Orleans, Nashville, Knoxville and Chattanooga look like the cream of the crop this year. However, I look for Little Rock, Memphis and Birmingham to have improved since last year, and Atlanta should win the pennant."

As the campaign gets under way fans will watch with interest the deal of the veteran Doc Prothro, who after Little Rock, who transferred there after many highly successful seasons at Memphis.

The Travelers lost several good players through drafting by Pittsburgh and Peoria has gone about building up a squad of youngsters and a few veterans.

"We will be building not for one year but so that in future years we will not find ourselves dependent on help from the outside," he says. "We have rounded up some good men, and if our green players develop we will be no one's setup and may surprise some who expect to see us near the bottom."

Nashville, working with the New York Giants, has gathered together a well-balanced squad, headed by a pitching staff of a veteran in Atlanta and a fast infield. With Frank Brazill, the firebrand skipper, in charge, the Vols are likely to go places.

Johnny Flags One

Here you see Johnny Hill, the pride of Douglasville, Ga., who has cinched the utility infield job with the Crackers, as he goes after a hot one at third base. Hill, only 23 years old, has impressed Manager Moore and the fans with his work and will start the season with the club Tuesday. Last year he played for Douglasville in the West Georgia league. Gooch Is Mainstay Of Volunteer Team Former Major League Catcher Expected to Steady Pitching Staff.

By Freddie Russell.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 13.—The Nashville Vols, runners-up for the 1934 Southern association pennant, enter a new race Tuesday with a club admittedly weaker than last year but fully capable of finishing in the top four.

A veteran catcher, a stout inner defense and a batting order that should include seven .300 hitters form the basis for the belief that the charges of Frank Brazill can qualify for the first division and the Shaughnessy playoff.

Johnny Gooch, 36-year-old receiver with 12 years' experience in the majors, is the club's most valuable addition. In the spring games he has shown the same qualities that enabled him, as a 334 hitter in 1932, to top all Southern league catchers and win a return trip to the big leagues.

The presence of the steady, clever Gooch behind the plate may remove the uncertainty now felt about the pitching staff, which lists Chaplin and Speer as its only Class A members. Hal Stafford, sidearm, and Sharkey Eiland, southpaw, return from last year and complete the Big Four of the staff.

Joe Semler, winner of 20 battles in the N.Y.P. loop last year; Lyn Watkins, 22-game winner from the West; Dixie, and Lefty Masters, Giant-owned strike-out king from the North-east league, form the unproven trio from which two will be selected to round out the six-man mound corps.

Frank Brazill, who replaces Lance Richbourg as manager, will boss the club from first base. The remainder of the infield returns intact with Cuccinello at second and Martin third, from the Giants, and Bill Rodda at short.

A new partner between Poco Taitt and Richbourg in the outfield is George Gerken, former Little Rocker. He has batted Zach Smith for the outfield job, although the latter will be carried as protection for the first 30 days. Larry Kinzer, West Dixie league graduate, will be utility man. Rae Blazemire, promising Indiana youngster with no pro experience, understudies Gooch as second-string receiver.

Manager Brazill predicts that the club will score enough punch to offset any pitching weakness and that the infield will rate on a par with any in the league.

Brazill Sends Two to Beckley.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 13.—(AP)—Manager Frank Brazill tonight announced that he had optioned George Scherier, infielder, and Clement Dreiswiler, southpaw pitcher, to Beckley, W. Va., in the Middle Atlantic league.

Further reductions in the Vol roster were expected tomorrow after the exhibition game with Minneapolis, of the American association. The Nashville club was forced into another day of idleness today as the scheduled exhibition with the Pittsburgh Pirates was canceled on account of cold weather.

Brazill figures his team a distinct question mark now after experiencing two weeks of rough weather during which nine exhibition games were canceled and many of the Vol workouts were prevented or held indoors.

The Nashville roster remains over-stuffed with about a half-dozen men, most of whom are expected to get their walking papers Sunday night. The Vols open the season Tuesday against Chattanooga with Tiny Chaplin slated to oppose the Look-out veteran, Alex McColl.

BARONS TO OPEN BATTING PUNCH WITH NEW TEAM; MURRAY TO HURL OF CHICKASAWS

Only Willett Left From Cold Weather Delays Workouts; Outfield Will Be Strong.

By Jack House.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 13.—Working on the theory that his team will be the "dark horse" in the approaching Southern league race, Manager Clyde Milan, of the Birmingham Barons, finally has succeeded in getting together a team that he hopes will land in the league playoffs.

With the acquisition of Elmer Trapp to play third base and Frank Cox to shoulder most of the catching burdens, Milan is set on his opening day lineup against the New Orleans Pelicans here Tuesday and his worries are far less than they were two weeks ago. Trapp was obtained from Pittsburgh last week and this has solved the big riddle of who would play at third base. It was a known fact that Joe Woodard, who had been stationed at this position in spring games, wouldn't start the season, although his batting near the close of the exhibition routine had been outstanding.

NEW INFIELD.

Woodard just couldn't hem up a ball if he had a corner, so President Billy West had to come on the outlook for an experienced third sacker for some time. Trapp isn't exactly an experienced third sacker, but what time he has been playing he has done well. It had been hoped that Aubrey Epps, who was traded to the Pirates last year for Tony Malinosky and Nick Etten, would be returned to Milan, but the Pirates have decided to hold on to Epps as third-string catcher. Cox, who was obtained from the Coast league, reported in from a few exhibition games and he will be supported by Otto Denning as second-string backstop.

Milan has an infield that will hold its own against any in the league. Trapp, of course, will be at third, Malinosky at short and Bill Regan, veteran obtained from Toronto, will be at second, with John (Bud) Clancy, another veteran, obtained from Buffalo, stationed at first. Memories of Shine Cortazzo, Billy Bancroft and Woodley Abernathy will flash across the faces of Barons fans this summer, as Malinosky, Regan and Clancy put on their double-play act. You'd think Regan and Clancy were youngsters judging by the way they have worked twin killings this spring.

Milan will start Harold Willett, a holdover from last year, in left; Leslie Horn comes from Greenville. He is another Scrappy Moore in the outfield.

NEW TEAM.

George Murray, a right-hander, will open on the mound against the Pels. Murray is one of six hurlers back from the 1934 team. Others are Bill Hughes, a right-hander, who pitched for the Barons last year, and Clarence Griffin, Adell White (an Atlanta boy) and Legrant Scott, former Alabama star. Clyde Shoun has shown more class than any of the other rookie moundmen, but chances are he will be farmed out.

Outside of his pitchers, not a single position will be filled by the same man who started there last year. Hal Willett is the only 1934 starter back and he was at third base in 1934. Art Weiss, Aubrey Epps and Buzz Arlett are gone in the infield, and Harry Strohm, Tom Kane and Herbert Rushing are absent from the infield. Jack Redmond, regular catcher last spring, should have made good with Washington.

The probable lineup for Tuesday's game is: Horn, cf; Malinosky, ss; Clancy, lb; Etten, 2b; Willett, 3b; Trapp, 3b; Regan, 2b; Cox, c; Murray, p.

With Atlanta driving at 18,000 opening day, Birmingham is aiming at 20,000 for the first opening day game played in Birmingham since as far back as old-timers can remember. The Barons have always opened on the road until this year.

to the plate each time they pitched and this was somewhat disconcerting, to say the least.

In the clubhouse after the game Johnny Shores was around applying hot bricks to frozen toes of the players. The wind, plus the temperature and a glowing sky, made it a day for fog fires and warming drinks but they played ten innings of passable baseball.

HELD TO FOUR HITS.

The Crackers were limited to four widely scattered hits by the three-forming Buffalo pitchers. They got just one hit in the first five innings. Another came in the sixth.

The first two runs were scored in the seventh when Bill Harris walked four men to force in one run and another scored on a fly ball by Joe Palmisano.

The Crackers were still a run behind as the Bisons had scored one in the second and two in their half of the seventh. It was the first hit of the ninth when the Crackers tied it up and had two men on base when Harry Taylor lined sharply to Mullevay at short and ended the rally.

SCHMIDT GOOD.

Bill Schmidt, the tall Cracker, pitched good baseball for seven innings on our side. He gave up seven hits but they were well scattered. It was simply too cold for much pitching.

It was a pleasure to see the big fellow stop Ollie Tucker, who did considerable slugging out in our league a half dozen years ago, in three times at bat.

He was followed by Bob Durham, who worked two innings, allowing one hit and no runs. Al Williams was the losing pitcher. He went in with very little warming up and threw the first run toward the plate to get his arm. He was surprised to find it on his shoulder and while surprised gave up two hits, walked a man, hit one and permitted three runs.

EASTERLING HITS.

Easterling was the only one of the hard-hitting outfield trio to hit. He got a single in the first inning. Chattanooga's pitcher, who was responsible for the other three of the four Cracker hits.

But, as Eddie Moore announced later in the clubhouse, it was not a day for baseball. He was thawing out his frozen groin by a radiator.

"We'll pitch Bud Thomas Sunday afternoon," he said, "and I do hope the weather will be all right for Tuesday when we meet Knoxville."

The exhibition with Buffalo today will close out the spring season. The club will rest Monday.

No Wonder He's Smiling

They say that Earl Mann, popular young vice president of the Crackers, is always smiling, rain or shine. But Earl smiles broadest in prospect of the biggest opening day baseball crowd Atlanta has seen since 1931. Mann has good reason to expect 18,000 Tuesday with good weather and the unprecedented display of interest in the 1935 Crackers indicated by the heaviest advance sale in history. Extra seating sections are being built at Ponce de Leon park to take care of the overflow. Staff photo.

A Man's Man, Is Mann; He Made His Own Way

Earl Mann Used To Sell Peanuts in the Park Where He Now Is Vice President

By Jimmy Jones

An experience born of the ranks, an engaging and wholesome personality and a knack for meeting the public and speaking its language won for Earl Mann the swivel chair job at the Atlanta baseball offices.

The distraught directors of the club were looking around for someone who could dispense the gloom which enveloped the premises when Wilbert Robinson, the greatest gloom-disperser of them all, crossed the Styx last summer, and their eyes fell on the debonair Mr. Mann, who had made a very popular business manager.

It proved to be one of the best moves they ever made for Mr. Mann brought harmony out of chaos and smiled the gloom away.

Thus he is established, at the age of 30—a very young age for baseball executives—in one of the most responsible positions in baseball, the nominal president of the club in charge of one of the finest plants and franchises in the minor leagues.

WORKED WAY UP.

Earl Mann, who came from nowhere, so to speak, to the job he now holds, is a man of the people. AND HE LIKES PEOPLE.

He has done everything around a ball park from peddling peanuts and programs as a boy to his present position. He grew up in a baseball atmosphere, so to speak, and knows its mannerisms and its human interest side and gets along great with ball players and managers.

But Mann, although essentially an Atlanta product, was far from being a native son when he was elevated to the position. On the contrary, he was a well grounded baseball man. His first job was with the Atlanta club as traveling secretary under the Michalove regime. There then followed an interlude in which he acted as business manager for three of Brooklyn's minor league clubs and with the New York Yankees at Wheeling in a similar capacity.

MANY FRIENDS.

Everywhere he made friends for the club and hit it off splendidly with the managers—so well in fact that he was connected with four pennant winners in the four years he served in the chains. At Rocky Mount, N. C.; Macon, Ga.; Hartford, Conn., and Wheeling he was associated with men and things that meant something to him besides mere luck.

Usually when there is harmony between the manager and the front office there is a winner. And there isn't likely to be a winner without it.

All this elbow-rubbing with the public and the million-dollar smile made of Earl Mann one of the best contact men in baseball. The Atlanta directors recognized this, along with his general efficiency, when they placed him in charge of the club's executive and financial affairs.

TREAT 'EM RIGHT.

"Treat everybody right and you'll get along," is the motto he adopted when he started out and it has paid him rich dividends. He numbers his friends in Atlanta by the score and is making new ones every day. A native of the city, he attended Oglethorpe University. He's a fraternity man and a thirty-second degree Mason. He has always been a great "jiner" and no public function is too rigorous for him.

This brings us down to opening day of the 1935 season and Mann's activities along that line.

He has personally conducted the advance ticket sale, without help from outsiders and minus a great deal of ballyhoo and the circus stunts.

An example of Mr. Mann's way with the public was witnessed just the other day.

QUICK SALE.

A baseball fan who is employed by the state came out to the park to sound him out regarding the chances of getting 10 free tickets for his department.

Mann received his courteously and talked with him for 30 minutes, at the end of which time the man emerged with the 10 tickets in his hand, smiling and apparently well pleased.

"Did he fix you up?" a friend who was waiting outside inquired.

"Yep, and they cost me six bits

EXCITING RACE IS PREDICTED IN AMERICAN

"No Pushovers in My Loop," Says League Head.

By Will Harridge.

President, the American League. When, especially for the Associated Press. CHICAGO, April 13.—(AP)—To predict in early April what will be the outcome of the championship race in late September, with eight ball clubs participating, is merely guesswork. The uncertain thing, which is always liable to happen in baseball, might upset any early predictions.

I hope and am sincere in the belief that the American league will enjoy the best race we have had for years. There does not appear to be a single "pushover" in the league. Detroit is starting the season with their championship club of 1934 intact and may repeat. A poll of the newspaper writers has given Cleveland the edge, but the New York Yankees are confident, with the return to good physical condition of Combs, Dickey, Walker, Allen and Van Atta.

Boston has been greatly strengthened by the acquisition of manager and Shortstop Joe Croppin, and should Pitcher Bob Feller show a return of his 1933 form, the Red Sox will be first-place contenders.

Connie Mack spent 1934 in developing a new pitching staff, which now appears ready to go places, and if Jimmy Fox develops the catching ability Mack looks for, the Athletics are going to be dangerous.

Washington, handicapped by an unprecedented epidemic of accidents in '34, should again have its full strength on the field, and if it has the pitching, will be fighting for a first-division berth.

The St. Louis Browns, under the leadership of Rogers Hornsby, made an enviable showing on their spring exhibition trip and will give a good account of themselves.

The Chicago White Sox have shown terrific hitting punch in their spring exhibition games, and with two or three young promising pitchers to replace the fading veterans might be the surprise of the league.

Fan interest is at its height, which promises a prosperous season.

Red Sox Base Stealer Played Here With Duke

Bill Werber Played at the Auditorium Here in Three Basketball Tournaments.

By Peyton Todd Jr.

There will be many players on the major league clubs this season whose activities will be closely followed by local fans, such as Joyner, who plays third for the Senators, and Cecil Travis, of Fayetteville.

Both of them are Georgians, which accounts, in part, for the attention they claim in this section. However, there is another youngster in the big leagues who will be watched by Atlantans though he is not from this state; in fact, not even from the south.

He is William M. (Bill) Werber, of Washington, D. C., third baseman for the Red Sox and whom his manager, Joe Cronin, terms the very best in the game. Werber led both leagues in stolen bases last year with 40, that being the highest mark anyone has set since 1931 when Chapman, of the Yankees, ran up the amazing modern total of 61.

Werber is remembered here for his excellent playing on the Duke Blue Devils in three tournaments at the auditorium. Werber was first seen by the fans in 1928, when he played for the Duke team in the first year in the Southern conference.

He was a member of a green five that was known as the "Millionaire Club." The Duke team, which was the best in the conference was the richest.

LOTS OF SPEED.
The then Blue Devils' speed attracted attention at that time and the next two tournaments he proved to be quite a devil to the efforts of other teams as he streaked up and down the court to sink baskets and thwart his opponents' tries. It is that same speed that has so blindingly exhibited here that has carried him to the top of the major speed demons of the game.

Werber is banking on it to again bring him honors during the forthcoming campaign, when he and the fleet Chapman are expected to stage an exciting duel on the base paths.

As a collegian Werber was caught by two former well-known big leaguers, Jack Coombs and George Binkley. They urged him always to play aggressively and make full use of his intelligence. He has and both items have had much to do with his success.

FAST AT DUKE.
In one game at Duke he stole six bases, one of the best performances in college baseball annals. He went straight from the campus to the Yankees, where he stole 14 and in 1932, when he increased that mark to 24.

The Boston infielder is built for speed, his 165 pounds being nicely proportioned over five feet, 11 inches. Not only is he fast offensively but also defensively, having led the American league third basemen in assists last summer.

Incidentally Bill pleads guilty to the hobby of taking soap from hotels so maybe he comes by his base-steiping tendencies naturally. Anyway Atlanta fans will wish him luck for he is a fine, clean player.

Yates Bags 67 As Jackets Tie Duke

DURHAM, N. C., April 13.—(AP) Charlie Yates, Georgia Tech's national intercollegiate champion, handed Cliff Perry, Duke's southern conference tieholder, his first dual meet defeat here today as their golf teams battled to a 9-9 deadlock.

Yates, getting a two-up lead on Perry the first nine when the Duke star faltered on the final two holes, set forth on the back nine with a birdie three and, after a par on 11, he birdied the par 4 12th and 13th, got pars on 14 and 15 and dropped an eagle 3 on the 16th to take three points from the Blue Devils ace.

Yates made a 67 for the 18, three under par, missing a short putt on the 18th which would have given him a 30 on the last nine.

FISHING SEASON CLOSING MONDAY

Standing rewards for the conviction of persons caught trapping, poisoning or dynamiting fish in Georgia are offered by the Department of Game and Fish. The announcement of the rewards was made as the Game and Fishing Department prepared to enforce the closed season on April 15.

Anybody who furnishes information and evidence strong enough to bring a conviction against another for such violations is eligible to the rewards, it was announced today by Commissioner Zack Cravey.

For persons caught using seines, nets, baskets, traps, gigs and the like, $25.

For persons caught putting poison in water, $12.50.

For persons caught dynamiting for fish, $25.

"We have information from authoritative sources showing that one explosion of dynamite will kill fish, particularly the young, and destroy the spawn within a radius of 300 to 1,000 yards in every direction," Cravey said.

The closed season, however, does not apply to 18 counties in north Georgia in the mountain region. Those counties are: Chattooga, DeKalb, Dawson, Fannin, Gilmer, Gordon, Habersham, Lumpkin, Murray, Pickens, Rabun, Stephens, Towns, Union, Walker, White and Whitfield.

GEORGIA HOST TO GOLF MEET.
ATLANTA, Ga., April 13.—Entry blanks for the first annual open intercollegiate golf championship tournament to be played over the Atlanta Country Club course have been mailed to every college and university in the southern states, it was announced here today.

Herman J. Stegeman is chairman of the tournament committee and will be in charge of all registrations. The dates for the tournament are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 25, 26 and 27.

A change in the program has been made to accommodate the large number of entries. There will be 36 holes of medal play on Thursday, two rounds of 18 holes each on Friday and two more rounds of 18 holes in the semifinals and finals on Saturday.

The tournament is open to any college student, varsity or freshman competitor and to any college or university within the area of the Southern and Southeastern conferences.

There will be no limit to the number of men who may represent an institution, but competition for the team trophy will be limited to four players and they must be named before the qualifying round opens.

Georgia Track Team Beats Furman, 89-37.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 13.—The Georgia track team defeated Furman University, 89 to 37, here this afternoon. Georgia took 10 first places in the event.

Led by Jimmy Spec Townes, spectacular hurdling star, the Bulldogs had little trouble in defeating Furman. Townes took first places in the 100-yard dash, 120-yard dash, 200-yard dash and 220-yard low hurdles. Townes and Harry Harman, Atlanta sophomore, tied for first place in the high jump.

Atlanta's 100-yard dash record in the tape in 9.9 seconds. He was running with sweat pants on, more or less as a lark after Pinky Moore, Atlanta dash man, failed to show up in time for the race.

A damp track and a blustery wind kept both track teams from turning in outstanding times although Townes set a new record in the 100-yard dash.

Abundant Rain, Sloppy Trucks Hinder Derby Nominees' Workouts

FIELD UNCERTAIN AS RACE NEARS; CHANCE SUN, 4-1

Field Yet To Be Selected From Over 40 Thoroughbreds.

By Charles M. Guthrie.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 13.—(AP) With the Kentucky Derby in three weeks off there is more uncertainty than in many years as to the probable starters.

Aside from a few major candidates, certain to start barring training mishaps, the field is yet to be selected from some two-score thoroughbreds.

An abundance of rain, welcomed by Kentucky farmers after an unusually dry winter, has proved no corresponding blessing to blue grass trainers, prepping for the classic mile and a quarter.

TRACKS SLOPPY.

Tracks here and at Lexington have been so sloppy that training has been slow, boding no special good for such likely nominees as Chance Sun, Chance View, Bothorn and Nellie Flag.

Despite the fact that Chance Sun still rules the future book favorite at the exceptionally short odds of four to one, the sticky blue grass tracks have turned the thoughts of some experts toward Mrs. J. D. Sloane's Trio, that spent the spring on her farm near Columbia, S. C., and no other promises that have been racing on California and Florida tracks.

Mr. Sloane's Derby candidates are Nelly Bid, Special Agent and Young Native.

GETTING IN SHAPE.

Reports from the east indicate that William Woodward's Omaha and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plat Eye, two colts calculated to make things interesting for Chance Sun, are rounding into shape in impressive manner. Bluebeard, recently caught from W. B. Coe by Mrs. R. B. Fairbanks, had the benefit of racing in California in the late winter before being brought here, but has yet to be tested over a mile.

Turf sages of the blue grass believe the Derby field will probably be drawn from the following: Chance Sun, Commonwealth, Omaha, Plat Eye, Sun Fairplay, Bothorn, Bluebeard, Psychic Bid, Nellie Flag, Bluebeard, Chanceview, Our Reigh, Count Arthur, Mantanga, Roman Soldier, St. Bernard, Blackbird, Today, Western, Hank MacTavish, Sir Beverly, Brandon, World Series, Calumet Dick, Round Advice, Finance, Morpuck, Purple Knight, Whizaway, Gallacley, Whiskie, Good Flavor, Shoeless Joe, Bachelor Dinner, Cold Shoulder, Nice Talk and Jawapa.

TWAY HAS RUN OF 100 STRAIGHT

Charley Nunnally, Jack Tway and Hugh Nunnally engaged in a three-way tie for the top prize in the city's skeet shoot at the Capitol Gun Club.

Charley Nunnally had a score of 50x50 with handicap while Tway and Hugh Nunnally, each broke a record, straight, which automatically threw them into the tie. In the shoot-off Charley Nunnally won.

Marion Smith came next in line as runner-up with 55x50, having won a shoot-off with Rembert Marshall with whom he was tied.

Jack Tway, by the way, has an unfinished run of 100 straight targets. He broke them all yesterday and will continue the run this week. Jack is getting ready for the city championship.

Other leading skeet scores included Ralph Minahan, 51; Tom Parsons, 50; Clyde King, 48; Smith and A. J. Orme, 47; Jack Gray, 46; E. B. Freeman, 45; H. L. White, 44; Tom Cassels and E. L. Wright, 43; Luther McDonald, 42; Tichenor and Buddy Jones, 41; and Bob Autrey, 40.

Yesterday's run was in celebration of the birthday of Luther McDonald and Charley Tway, the youngest and oldest club members. There were four prizes, the shooters drawing numbers out of hats corresponding with the scores shot. So prizes were won by Marion Smith, H. L. White, E. D. Smith Sr. and either E. L. Wright or Benson Freeman. The latter two tied and will decide about the prize later.

Buddy Jones was high gun in the 36-vary event, having a score of 52x50 with handicap. Jack Tway was runner-up with 51. Benson Freeman was next with 49. Other leading scores included Charley Nunnally, 48; Clyde King, 48; Milton Dargan, 47; E. D. Smith Sr., 47; Hugh Nunnally, 46; Tom Parsons, 45; and Jack Gray, 43.

Midwest Golf Title Won by Dawson

FRENCH LICK, Ind., April 13.—(AP)—Playing sub-par golf, George Dawson, of Chicago, came from behind today to win the Midwest amateur 36-hole medal tournament for the third successive time.

He played the two rounds of the long, hilly course in 146 strokes, three less than Wilford DeLoach, 20-year-old Racine, Wis., star.

Mrs. Harley Higbie, of Detroit, won the women's section of the tournament, scoring a 93 yesterday and an 85 today for the low gross of 178.

'Stay-at-Home' Move Launched To Keep Mississippi Athletes

JACKSON, Miss., April 13.—(AP) Mississippi is experiencing a new sort of campaign, one to keep Mississippi athletes at home.

Athletic authorities of the state's two leading colleges, Mississippi State and the University of Mississippi, literally have been "selling the woods" during the past few weeks in an intensive campaign to persuade budding high school athletic stars to attend state colleges.

The hue and cry has gone out that Mississippi has the big schools in neighboring states been getting the cream of the crop in an athletic way in Mississippi.

Major Ralph Sasse, the new athletic director at State College, has fired alumni of that school with enthusiasm and State alumni are rallying to the call of their "alma mater" as never before, he says.

He and Coach Ed Walker, of Ole Miss, have been crossing one another's trail in a "good-will" canvass of the state during the past few weeks.

"Contact meetings," they call them, "recruiting" No. not that, explain. But these Mississippi boys should be in Mississippi schools, and we're out to get them if we can.

Athletic authorities at the two state schools, both members of the Southeastern conference, are out to compete with the "big schools" for the state's own athletic products, they say.

Alumni meetings are being held in practically every county of the state. Alumni who haven't received a letter from the graduate manager in 30 years are receiving personal calls. They are being imbued with a new type of "college spirit."

And the results thus far, say the coaches, have been "most encouraging."

The Old Squatter--At Station Sever

Atlanta sportsmen are given three guesses, the first two not counting, as to who the shooter is in the above picture. Yes, it's Al Frese Sr., the old squat skeet shooter. The popular hardware dispenser recently staged a comeback and is getting ready to give all and sundry a battle in the city championship.

There is really nothing wrong with Al's form. When he's in form he squats and blasts the toughest of targets. He's shown in typical pose at the No. 7 station. Al gives beginners his idea of how to break them in the accompanying article. He was snapped by Turner Hiers at the West End Gun Club.

Frick Expects Great Season For Baseball

By Ford Frick,

President National League.

(Written especially for the Associated Press)

NEW YORK, April 13.—My favorite prediction for the past two months has been that 1935 will prove to be a great year for baseball.

I've been saying that, then proceeding to state that in our league it looks like a pennant race narrowing down to the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals, with Chicago and Pittsburgh possibly taking a hand in it and one of them, perhaps, holding the upper hand at the finish.

The rebounds of my statements show me that people have hooked up these two statements and have construed my "great-year" prediction to mean the National League exclusively.

I really meant a great year for baseball as a sport of national scope. I was thinking mainly of the fact that this year—and I can show you figures to prove it—there will be more boys playing ball than there ever were before at any time in American history.

In my opinion the laying out of new ball fields all over the country, in connection with community unemployment relief last year, and the program for more fields to be put into operation this year represents the recognition of a nationwide demand for more places on which to play ball.

My first thrill will be staged in Boston when I see the Red Sox. I watched him in a Boston Braves uniform starting a new incarnation.

I'm looking to Dizzy Dean's next chapter. You never know what Dizzy is going to do next. I'll get a thrill out of Rabbit Maranville's comeback after his year off because of a broken leg. I'm going to follow closely Cincinnati's luck with all these new stars Larry McPhail has gotten together.

I'm keen to see whether Bill Terry's Big Four are going to be the inevitable pitching staff they were in 1933. I'll be watching Chuck Klein to see whether he has regained his hitting year off because of a broken leg. I want to watch Paul Waner defend his title of league batting champion.

Tech, Oglethorpe Series Postponed

A strong northwest wind and near freezing temperatures today have postponed the Georgia Tech and Oglethorpe baseball series to the nearest steam radiator Saturday afternoon, instead of the scheduled 10 o'clock start.

Both games in the opening series were called off, leaving Oglethorpe without a college game played so far. Tech is two down in two starts against Alabama and Clemson.

Another effort will be made next week to play the series, which was scheduled for Ponce de Leon park on Thursday and Friday afternoon and at the Rose Bowl field on Saturday.

A small admission fee will be charged for the Ponce de Leon games, but all games at the Rose Bowl field with the exception of the University of Georgia series will be free to the public.

Lindale Takes Lead In Textile League

ROME, Ga., April 13.—Lindale took undisputed possession of first place in the Northwest Georgia Textile league today by defeating Ato, 5-4, behind a seven-hit pitching performance of Ed White. Shannon moved into a three-way tie with Ato and Rockmart for second place by beating Cedar town, 5-2. The Tubize-Rockmart game was called off on account of cold weather. While White was holding Ato to seven hits, he and his mates collected 12 off Pinion. The winning run came in the sixth inning after Pinion, Ato hurler, had tied it up in the first part of the inning with a homer with one mate aboard the sacks. At Shannon the homebats took a five-run lead in the first five innings and Cedar town was never able to overcome the deficit. Cooper gave up six hits over the Cedar town while Shannon got right off Rod and Temple.

Hold the Gun Low At No. 7, Frese Says

(Editor's Note: This is the eighth of a series of articles on skeet, the sport of clay target shooting that has definitely won a permanent place in the realm of outdoor sports. Station eight will follow next week.)

By Jack Troy.

The old squat skeet shooter came back into the picture the other day at the West End Gun Club. It was a sure sign of spring, although later developments by the weather have inclined to refute this belief.

At any rate, Al Frese Sr., the little man with the big cigar, blasted away after a long absence to break 49 targets, tie for top place in the trophy shoot and finally, a week later, win in a shoot-off at the West End Gun Club.

"The old man has just been biding his time, resting up for the city shoot this month," Al said. "You can tell all those top-notchers that they'll hear from the old man."

Al Frese always has been one of the leading boosters of skeet in Atlanta. He got me interested in the infernal sport, which has an appeal that is inescapable once one enters into the spirit.

BOY IS GOOD.

And Al has a boy coming along who will give the junior game an ally, a battle in the city championship. He taught Al Jr. how to shoot.

In addition to his boosting, Al Frese has been and will continue to be one of the best shots in the city. He is really ready for the city championship. The spectators get a big kick out of his squatting posture at the stations. But one can't escape the fact that Al breaks the target with great consistency. There must be something in this squatting business.

A great sportsman and one of the most popular scatter gun figures in the state and south, Al will carry on from this point and tell you how to break the targets at station seven:

DIFFERENT TYPES.

"Skeet shooting from station seven should be the easiest station on the field. However, the beginner will find that each target requires a different type of shot.

"At angles the incoming bird is shot first and should be broken over or near No. 8 post as after it passes this point it usually is dropping fast and has slowed in its flight until it can be very easily given too much lead and overshoot.

"The outgoing bird if not properly shot is the most misleading target on the field. This is the only bird that must be aimed directly at, and most beginners have the habit of holding the gun high and dropping down on this bird. If they will take notice that this target comes out of the house low and fast and is rising fast after it passes the eight station, it will be easy to see that holding the gun high and bringing it into the line of flight of the target from above causes a tendency to overshoot.

HOLD GUN LOW.

"If the gun is held low and the target is followed from this position, the average shooter should have no difficulty on this post.

"Doubles are shot in the exact reverse of singles—namely, the outgoing target is shot first and again the beginner should hold the gun low. Break the outgoing and follow on through for the incoming target.

"In order to hold the gun low enough, it is sometimes necessary to 'squat' or sit on a shell box or use any other method that is best fitted to the shooter."

By Roy White.

Opening shots in East Lake's annual golf tournament schedule will be fired Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock, when a "losers" dinner tourney will be played over the two courses.

The dinner will be served in the clubhouse shortly after the matches are over and any member of the club not playing golf is invited to be present for the dinner. The plates can be reserved at $1 each.

Captains for the two teams have not been selected as yet but will be named within the next few days. Entries for the tourney must be filed with George Sargent, club professional, by 6 o'clock Wednesday night.

Four-ball foursomes will be played with two points, low-ball and aggregate scores on each hole. The Nassau system of scoring will be used.

STUDENTS CHESSERS

Solution to Problem No. 8.

By PERRY FAIR.

Black—2, Kings 18, 11, 12, 27. White to play and win 11-7, 25-15, 7-10, 13-22, 12-8. White wins.

This little problem was the ending of a game played across the board, and the writer was about to pass up the win, when it was pointed out by Mr. Trimble. Even though it is not difficult, it displays an idea that is very useful, and is a good example of the many wins we do not cash in, during our cross-board practice.

Problem No. 9.

By ARTHUR TRIMBLE.

Black—16, 18, 20, Kings 25.

White—13, 27, 31, King 11. White to play and win.

Fundamentals.

The remaining positional settings to be given in this section of our column, are not usually classed as such in the standard works on checkers, but we feel that the beginners will have a much better understanding of end-game play after studying them, and will consequently learn more in the study of games, which will be a regular part of our column immediately following our brief study of positional endings.

The Drummond Position.

By JOHN DRUMMOND.

Black—3, 11, 12, 13, 14. White—18, 20, 21, 22, 23. Black to play and draw.

13-17-A 9-6 25-31 20-16 22-15 15-24 2-6 14-18 6-10 23-19 31-27 15-22 13-9-B 24-27 6-15 24-15 11-15 6-2 27-24 Drawn.

A—This move is the key to the draw.

B—Here is an interesting variation by P. H. Ketchum: 20-16, 11-20, 19-9, 20-24, 9-6, 24-27, 6-2, 27-31, 2-7, 31-26, 7-11, 26-31, and now Ketchum points out that 11-10 might look like a winning move for White, but if the move is made, Black wins by the pretty shot: 12-16, 15-6, 14-17, 21-14, 31-27, 19-12, 27-2. The move to draw at this point would be 11-7 instead of 11-15.

Checker-Bits.

We are glad to announce to our readers that we have made arrangements for complete reports on the Ryan-Rubin match, commencing June 1, and will pass them on to the public as fast as we can. The rules of agreement prohibit the use of endings, but we can give all the rest of the match, which is still "hot," and if the play is not syndicated we will try to get the games for our column.

However, should the play be put in book form, it will be well worth the price for the annotations alone, and we will be glad to get copies for our column that want them. So you pick the winner and we will furnish the news!

BLACK MEN FROM 1 TO 12

WHITE MEN FROM 21 TO 32

Black men always move first at the start of a game.

MEDAL SHOOT AT WEST END

The West End Gun Club today will hold a class medal shoot, with medals to be given to the winners of classes 1 and 2.

Handicaps will prevail in both classes. The two fields will be opened at 9 o'clock and shooting will continue all day.

Nash Dealers Demonstrating New Cruising Gear

A tachometer, mounted on the steering post of demonstrating cars, is being successfully used by Nash dealers to show the advantages of the Nash automatic cruising gear in actual operation. For the benefit of the uninformed, a tachometer is the ingenious device that registers engine revolutions per minute and it has long been used in aviation and marine work as a check on motor efficiency. In the case of the Nash cruising gear, however, the instrument proves in graphic fashion that the motor actually "loafs" at car speeds above 40 miles an hour; and since operating costs increase considerably with car speeds under ordinary conditions, the value of the cruising gear lies in the marked reduction of gasoline and oil consumption and engine wear obtained through its use.

"What the automatic cruising gear delivers is a fast cruising speed for which the owner pays no premium," explained Reagan Jones. "In other words, he gets 60 miles per hour performance at the cost of 42 miles per hour operation."

"The Nash automatic cruising gear is a self-contained unit operating as part of the transmission and can be used or not, according to the wishes of the driver, who controls it by means of a selector on the dash. To use it, the driver pushes in the selector—and from then on there is nothing further for the driver to think about for the cruising gear will automatically become operative at approximately 40 miles per hour."

"While it is difficult to make definite statements regarding the increased gasoline mileage obtained through the use of the cruising gear because of variable factors peculiar to individual drivers, factory tests have indicated that as much as five more miles to the gallon can be obtained at 50 miles per hour and oil consumption at this same speed is reduced approximately 40 per cent over the consumption in conventional gear. Owners report they have obtained as high as 22 miles to the gallon on the Nash advanced six equipped with the new device, and in a recent economy test conducted by a large oil company over a 700-mile course a Nash advanced eight averaged the remarkable mileage of 17.6 miles per gallon at top speeds."

"While economy and longer engine life are direct results of the use of the cruising gear, another interesting phase concerns the human reaction. With a reduction of engine speed at high car speeds there is a consequent increase in smoothness and quietness. Noise, of course, is well established as a contributory cause of nervous tension and fatigue; and it is interesting to note that both driver and passenger can make a long trip in a car equipped with the automatic cruising gear, maintain better average speed, yet end the day comparatively as fresh as at the start."

Plymouth Coupe Models Have Two Frames for Strength

Development of an entirely new type of automobile construction to provide unusual strength and rigidity in convertible models, was announced today by the Plymouth Motor Corporation.

The development is incorporated in the latest Plymouth convertible coupe, which will be in production soon. The new model is priced at $895, factory, Detroit.

An exclusive Chrysler motors engineering development, the new type construction involves the use of two frames instead of the usual one. The first frame is the regular chassis frame, while the second is a steel sub-frame built inside the convertible body.

In assembly, the convertible body with its enclosed sub-frame is mounted on top of the regular chassis frame. Then the two frames are bolted securely together to create a construction as strong as the body frame assembly of sedan models.

The regular X-type chassis frame is six inches in height, while the sub-frame, also of rigid X-type construction, is four inches high. The two, bolted together, form a steel girder that is actually comparable in size and strength to the girders used in construction of sky-scrapers.

Passengers in the new Plymouth convertible ride on top of this 10-inch steel girder, surrounded by the steel walls of the body.

The engineers who developed the new "double-frame" construction point out that it solves a major problem that has confronted the automobile industry ever since the presentation of the first convertible car. Heretofore, all convertible cars were weaker than other body types because the major connecting link between the cowl section and rear section was the body sill. This resulted in racking and twisting motions that were not present in enclosed body types. Until this development, the problem had defied all efforts at solution.

Jack Moore, of the A. O. Mitchell Motors, Inc., local Oldsmobile dealer, is shown receiving from M. L. Martin an order for a new 1935 Oldsmobile six touring coupe. Mr. Martin's purchase was one of the many made at the General Motors show here this past week.

Local Pontiac Zone Head Named

Left to right, D. U. Bathrick, assistant general sales manager, Pontiac Motors; Carl Murphy, assistant zone manager, Atlanta, and J. T. Bray, zone manager, Atlanta. Mr. Bathrick was in Atlanta this past Friday and announced Mr. Bray and Mr. Murphy as managers for the Atlanta zone. Mr. Bray comes to the Atlanta zone, taking the place of A. C. Olsen, who has been transferred back to the central office, to take charge of the Pontiac dealer accounting department. Mr. Bray has been in the automobile business in the south for many years, having worked this territory out of a New Orleans, La., branch. Mr. Murphy will remain as his assistant.

Tear Drop Car Here

Atlantans got a glimpse of this tear-drop design car here the past week. It is one of six tear-drop cars now in use by the McQuay-Norris Company for testing purposes. This car while here worked out of the Alexander Sewald Company sales department, the company selling the McQuay-Norris products here.

Angle of Stability Illustrated

How far can a modern automobile be tilted before it will turn over? This Hudson sedan has its center of gravity only 21.1-4 inches above the ground. It can be tilted to an angle of 53 degrees before it loses its stability. This contributes materially to the safety of the car at high speed and on winding roads.

Stopping Dip or 'Curtsy' Used by Cadillac Engineers

The slight dip or "curtsy" made by the front end of an automobile during abrupt stops has been put to work by Cadillac-LaSalle engineers to increase the power of the super-hydraulic brakes on the 1935 LaSalle.

The "curtsy," they explain, is caused by the tendency of a car to "lean" forward as its momentum yields to the friction of the brakes. They cite as an exaggerated illustration, the sprinter who trips and falls forward. When the brakes are applied to an automobile, this tendency to lean forward causes the front wheels to press the pavement more heavily than the rear. Thus the front wheels offer somewhat better traction.

In designing LaSalle's super-hydraulic brakes the engineers took full advantage of this fact. They have applied 55 per cent of the braking effort to the front wheels and only 45 per cent to the rear. Thus both front and rear wheels exert all the road friction that they can use without skidding.

Another feature of the LaSalle brake design is the use of cast-iron instead of pressed steel as a contact factor. Cast iron, it has been found, provides a more durable wearing surface, offers far greater resistance to scoring and permits the use of harder brake linings. LaSalle's brake linings survive almost unlimited numbers of high speed stops, a few of which ruin an ordinary set of linings.

Proving ground tests reveal that the brakes of the LaSalle will stop the car at 20 miles per hour within its own length or in 3.5 seconds at a 60-mile pace.

New Pierce-Arrow Set-Up Explained by J. E. Yarbrough

According to J. E. Yarbrough, the local Pierce-Arrow distributor, the incorporation of a new company to be known as the Pierce-Arrow Motor Corporation, was effected March 30, following the signing of a federal court decree approving the reorganization of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company.

The new Pierce-Arrow company will have a financial structure proportionately as strong or stronger than any in the industry. Current assets of the new company are more than 10-to-1 of liabilities.

Administration officers of the corporation were elected March 30 at an organization meeting of stockholders and later at the new board of directors.

Arthur J. Chanter was chosen to continue as president and chairman of the board. Other directors are J. Ernest Allen, of New York; who participated in the reorganization; Ansley W. Sawyer, Kenneth Strachan, Benjamin Sheets, Charles M. Kennedy and Charles H. Diefendorf, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Edward B. Germain, president of the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation; Bayard F. Pope, chairman of the Marine Midland Corporation; Sheldon A. DuCret, of New York; and Dallas E. Winslow, of Detroit. The new directors elected Mr. Allen chairman of the executive committee and continued Martin C. Ewald as secretary and treasurer, and Thomas J. O'Rourke as general sales manager.

Mr. Yarbrough says that the reaction of the news of this reorganization has been most gratifying. Reports from many cities indicate a perceptible stimulation of sales, directly traceable to the preliminary announcement of the complete reorganization.

To celebrate this important announcement, Mr. Yarbrough is holding a special exhibit of the new 8s and 12s at the local showroom, 560 West Peachtree street, N. W., and the A. L. Belle Isle garage. These 1935 models include cars similar to those Pierce-Arrows recently delivered to Princess Helene of Greece and the royal house of Belgium. The engines were designed by the same Pierce-Arrow engineers who created the present Pierce-Arrow 12, recent winner of world's records for speed and stamina, having covered 3,053 miles in 24 hours, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 13.—(AP)—Attorneys for the Tennessee Valley Authority announced today they had perfected an appeal from a United States District Judge W. L. Hudson Stresses Safety in Low Center of Gravity

"A low center of gravity is an important safety consideration," states Stuart G. Baits, chief engineer of the Hudson Motor Car Company. Few laymen realize, he points out, how superior the modern car is in this respect. The center of gravity of the Hudson sedan for 1935 is only 21.1-4 inches above the ground. With this low center of gravity, the car can be tilted to an angle of 53 degrees before it loses its stability.

"It is the low center of gravity which contributes so materially to the 'feel' of an automobile in taking curves at high speed and of keeping the weight squarely down on all four members in the Berlin area."

wheels which greatly reduces the tendency to skid and contributes so materially to the control of the car," states Mr. Baits.

"In spite of the lowness of the center of gravity of these cars, the Hudson has more headroom than previous designs which are much higher over all. Recently a car was checked by the engineering department at the Hudson factory to determine the exact angle of stability. The car was gradually tilted until an angle of 53 degrees was reached, at which time the car was in perfect balance. A car which can be tilted this far with safety will maintain its stability on the road under any circumstances and at any possible speed," points out the Hudson engineer.

Again TERRAPLANE proves amazing economy— in nation-wide test

Unbeatable Gasoline Mileage of Course—Plus the Upkeep Savings that Ruggedness Makes

22.9 miles to the gallon of gas—in a full-sized, 88-horsepower sedan! That's the national average, shown by scores of reports from leading cities, of stock Terraplanes in economy tests held just last month. And some of these cars went over 25 miles per gallon! Each on five gallons of gas, these Terraplanes ran an average distance of 114.71 miles. Every record officially certified.

Big Savings in Upkeep Costs, Too!

Of course, these are test figures. But in everyday driving and in city traffic—where you don't expect the kind of gas mileage you can get under test conditions—Terraplane is also the outstanding economy car. This is proved by thousands of actual statements from actual owners, sworn to before notaries in the past few weeks.

Extra gasoline and oil mileage is only part of the economy you enjoy in a Terraplane. These owner affidavits show an even more important type of economy—total upkeep costs as low as a fraction of a cent a mile for Terraplanes that have gone 20,000, 30,000, 50,000 miles and even farther. Hudson's way of building automobiles—with America's only bodies all of steel, the greater ruggedness of Terraplane chassis, the higher quality of materials used throughout—is your guarantee of longer life for every part of the car and unusual freedom from repair expense.

Compare Cars—Compare Proof

What other car can pile proof of economy on more proof, as Terraplane does for you? Drive a Terraplane, soon. Compare other lowest price cars with it. And ask for proof of performance, ruggedness and economy that can compare with the proof any Terraplane dealer will give you. Then decide.

Ask to see the sworn statements of Terraplane owners—proof of higher gasoline mileage and lower upkeep cost.

What "BUILT BY HUDSON" Means

America's only bodies all of steel. Motors noted for their smoothness, balance and power. World's greatest stock car performance... proved by scores of official A. A. A. records. Ruggedness proved in the recent 175,000-mile Ruggedness Runs.

The ELECTRIC HAND

An exclusive feature... greatest mechanical advancement of 1935. Simpler, easier, safer driving... faster, smoother shifting, with both hands always on the wheel. All 1935 Terraplanes are regularly equipped with conventional gear shift; with Electric Hand optional at small extra cost.

Economy in the Prices, Too!

and up for Terraplanes... Hudson Six 1495 and up... Hudson Eight 1760 and up. All prices f.o.b. Detroit for closed models.

CURB SHARES GAIN IN ACTIVE SESSION

NEW YORK, April 13.—(AP)—The curb market closed on an uptrend today in the busiest Saturday session.

STOCK OPINIONS.
FENNER & BEANE—The firm tone in the rails suggests that the traders anticipate a decision on the rail pension case Monday before the supreme court takes its two-week recess and anticipate that carrier stocks will do better when this decision is given. In the event of a sharp advance on the strength of favorable rail pension decision, however, we believe that profit-taking would be in order, strictly from a trading point of view.

COURTIS & CO.—The market gives the appearance of broadening interest with volume holding up well on price advances. Should a decision on railway pension act be announced Monday its character would have an effect on the list. The prospect is for increasing activity and no doubt increasing speculative interest.

DOBBS & CO.—A possible decision in the supreme court holding the lower courts in ruling the railroad pension act unconstitutional would probably stimulate market prices, and the adjournment of congress should be discounted some weeks ahead of time, but after these forces have been spent we should be inclined to look for poorer markets in the early summer.

State President, State Commander Honored at Third District Meeting

By LATIMER WATSON, Director of Publicity for Georgia Department of American Legion Auxiliary.

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 13.—Miss Mattie Kate Bagley, of Columbus, president of the Georgia Department of American Legion Auxiliary, and Delia Allen, of Albany, state commander of the Legion, were honor guests and speakers at the annual spring meeting of the third district held at the Stevens hotel, Monday, Mrs. R. M. Kendrick, vice president, was hostess in the absence of the president, Mrs. Edgar Johnson, Mrs. J. B. Calhoun, Jr., of Perry, president of the third district, presided. The meeting was attended by representatives from Albany, Ashburn, Butler, Dawson, Cordele, Eastman, Fitzgerald, Fort Valley, Hamilton, Hawkinsville, Perry, Richland, Unadilla and Columbus.

Distinguished guests included Miss Bagley, Commander DeLacey Allen and Mrs. Allen; Judge Arthur Lynch, members of the national defense committee, Mrs. J. B. Humber, of Charles Harrison post; Mrs. R. H. McNulty, state secretary and treasurer, and the following state chairmen: J. R. Tompkins, Mrs. John G. Young, LaGrange; Miss Latimer Watson.

Features of the morning session were the addresses of the department president and state commander and reports of the various units. Miss Bagley gave an inspirational address stressing the purposes for which the auxiliary was organized and the program of service. Commander Allen gave a stirring talk on "Child Welfare and Education of War Orphans," the subject of the month of April.

Reports from the units showed the excellence of the work of the chairmen. It was reported that the third district had won the 1934 year, Hawkinsville and Unadilla, and the membership for the district is 388, compared with 345 of last year. Six units in the district have won department citations, the district leading the state.

Miss Bagley announced that the Georgia department had won the $15 prize offered by the national organization for securing the largest percentage of members. Honor guests at luncheon were Columbus' two Gold Star mothers, Mesdames Bobbie David and George P. Munro.

Tuesday evening, Miss Bagley and Mrs. Edgar Johnson were hosts at a buffet supper entertaining at Miss Bagley's country home, Parade Springs, in honor of Commander Allen and Mrs. Allen. The invitation list included many influential members of the executive board and their husbands and officers of the local post and their wives.

Georgia hoped to complete its intensive campaign for subscriptions to the National Bulletin. At this writing many clubs have sent in checks for their quota, others have over-subscribed. Miss Bagley confidently expects to be able to wire headquarters the first of the week that Georgia has reached and exceeded its quota. If by chance, your unit has not sent in its quota, won't you do so at once? If Georgia is to win the $65 prize offered it must go in immediately for the prize is to the department first reaching its quota. Georgia can win and show it so.

The program was given by the Gainesville unit, namely the bonus bill, the war-orphan bill and the national defense bill and the "war profiteering" bill as those most vital to the interest of the Legionnaire. Continental Congress This Week In Washington Interests D. A. R.

By Mrs. John T. Dorsey, of Marietta, State Editor Georgia D. A. R. The president general, Mrs. William

R. Magna, sends the following message: "It's April—it's spring—it's Washington! The very thought contains a welcome even as I extend one to each and all who attend the 44th continental congress. We gather to renew our allegiance and loyalty to the aims, objects and ideals of our society and to listen to reports of work well done. May the congress prove for those attending a veritable joy, a sense of privilege to be in and of the nation's capital. May your experiences remain an unforgettable memory."

"As our April meetings are always held the week which contains the 19th of April, we convene in Holy Week this year. Our society, however, seriously, dedicated to country, home and God, and with these thoughts in mind we can well meet and contemplate our work any time. Our program is so arranged that time is reserved for the sacred hours which we need for prayer and meditation. To those who cannot attend I send special greetings from this city of hospitality and from your national headquarters. The members at home or in far-away places are the breath of life to the organization, for those who live here, even though it be temporary abode, Washington is, indeed, a home and a place of beauty. The study of its history and development, the contributions of those who have given public service year by year, form the stage, the setting and the dramatic personae of changing drama."

"And within this drama of national life the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has stepped front stage. Entering for the first time upon scenes with but 18 in the cast, it has enriched its setting and enlarged its personnel. Those who speak now are responsible to those who gave us our parts to play; and true to them we hold to fundamental truths and oaths of office, realizing that life presents changes which challenge the players to present-day activities, customs and language. To quote Shakespeare: 'All the world's a stage,' one can, with due apologies, apply the following paraphrase: 'Washington's a stage, and all the men and women merely players. They have their exits and their entrances, each man in his time, like a flower, has his time to shine and a woman breathes a living part, each holds the stage awhile, then exits to depart.'

"The nation's capital is an endless drama, the curtain never rings down, rather the stage becomes larger, the scenery more splendid, the drama more intense against the backdrop of history; more women cast in vital roles. Some of you speak our lines for the last time and exit from the active scene, yet no part, when played with honesty, loyalty and deep conviction, is forgotten. We exit and from afar we encourage and applaud as others take our places. To every individual who has helped us meet with any measure of success, on behalf of the entire company and for myself, I pay my homage in gratitude."

"To the newcomers who will be cast to play these parts through a three-year scene, I wish the same loyal support, the same joy in service and friendship which has been mine. Though the scenes and the players change, the drama endures with the historical settings the same, for the fundamental principles for which we stand form the backdrop which is all enduring."

Advance news of the 44th continental congress is announced today. On the opening evening, Monday, April 15, the president General, Mrs. Magna, will preside and address the delegates. It is hoped President Roosevelt will attend the opening and address the four thousand delegates from every state in the Union and seven foreign countries. The D. A. R. in turn will endeavor to honor him by having the flag pageant, when all flags, except the flag of the United States, will be dipped to the president. At the opening session greetings will be brought by the president of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, the advisory board and by the presidents of several patriotic societies. The music for the evening will be furnished by the United States marine band and two well-known artists.

Tuesday morning, April 16, greetings will come from honorary presidents general, followed by national officers' reports. The state meetings will be held Tuesday afternoon, Tuesday evening the president general will, as usual, hold the annual reception in Constitution Hall. She will be assisted by the national officers and state regents in receiving the delegates and members at the brilliant affair. The state regents will receive in the spacious south corridor of Constitution Hall. During the entire evening music will be furnished by two sections of the United States army band. The same evening the president general and the national officers will give a dance for the pages.

Wednesday morning and afternoon the reports of national committees are scheduled, also nominations of all national officers, which will include the president general, her official family and even vice presidents general, all to be elected for three years. The voting will be in Memorial Continental Hall. April 19, Good Friday, a business session followed by the memorial service, the chaplain general, Mr. Raymond G. Kimball, presiding. In observance of Good Friday no meetings will be held from 12 until 2 o'clock. At 3:30 o'clock pilgrimage to Arlington, where president general, accompanied by Daughters, will place a wreath upon the tomb of America's Unknown Soldier; then to Mount Vernon, where the president general, accompanied by Daughters, will place a wreath in memory of George and Martha Washington.

Saturday morning the regular business session, followed by the surprise celebration of the cancellation of the debt on Constitution Hall. The ceremonies incident to the installation of national officers-elect will be held in the morning, inasmuch as Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the congress at the White House at 2 o'clock. In the evening the president general's banquet at the Mayflower will bring to a close the administration of Mrs. Russell William Magna.

A Stamp Contest With Prizes

The stamps which are shown below are commemoratives of the Battle of Navarino. It was issued in 1827 by one of the oldest countries in the world and depicts a group of warships engaged in battle. We believe that you will find it easy to name the country which issued this stamp, but there's more than that to the contest.

Here it is. Write a story of not more than 250 words about the event which this stamp commemorates and give a brief history of the stamp itself. Write on just one side of the paper and send your story to the Stamp Editor, Young America Club, care of The Constitution.

For the best story received by next Sunday, when the contest closes, a packet of 20 different stamps will be given. For the five next best stories packets containing 10 stamps will be awarded. Trace down your facts and mail your stories in early. Here's another fine opportunity to add to your album.

The post office department annually issues five special stamps. If you remember, the three-cent peace stamp commemorates the ending of the Revolutionary War in America. The post office department held at Newburgh, N. Y., and the United States was represented by John Adams, Henry Laurens, John Jay, and Benjamin Franklin. The British commissioners were Pitt-Rivers and Oswald. This stamp is larger than the regular size, so there is room for a picture of the Hashack house, which was Washington's headquarters. One catches a SCOUTING METHODS. From time to time, it is our purpose to run articles dealing with camp life, camp craft and instructions as to the making of various articles in connection with Scout work.

Scout's Duty to Growing Trees. The good Scout does not destroy. He never uses an axe thoughtlessly. He chooses what to cut with a foreknowledge that it will benefit the remaining growing timber. His is not a mission of destruction and waste, but one of conservation. In choosing what to cut a Scout considers the use.

For Firewood—To build a fire, select only dead wood; fallen logs or a dead standing tree. To start a fire, take pine, cedar or punk wood, as they make a good blaze. After your fire is well started add poplar, beech, oak, hickory or any hardwood, as these varieties give a long-lasting fire and make excellent coals for cooking purposes. Chestnut holds too much sap, and unless it is very dry, makes poor firewood. In wet weather, dry wood can very likely be chopped from the side (or sheltered side) of a log.

For Fire Sticks—If green sticks are required for fire sticks or a pot-hanger, cut them from an overcrooked thickener where their removal will benefit those you leave. Use the crooked shoots and the weaker ones, as a straight, strong sapling will become a useful tree in time.

For Tent or Ridge Poles—For a tent pole, or ridge pole, select a shoot from a clump where the growth is crowded; or take a sapling which has grown from the root of a large tree, as such a shoot will be mothered by the mother tree eventually; or a broken, hanging limb may do. The removal of such a limb helps the growing tree. Always cut a hanging limb from the under side. Trim it close to the trunk, leaving a smooth cut. The bark will then grow over it, healing the scar. Use care in chopping so that the back of your axe does not scar or bruise the living trees. Let your aim always be to select that which is of the least use in the forest.

Gathering Brush for a Camp Bed—Nothing is more fragrant or luxurious than a bed of balsam fir or pine twigs. But every Scout should be careful not to damage the trees seriously by indiscriminately taking only the tender shoot from the twig ends. Choosing a pine or fir that is standing in a dense forest, cut off the branches near the ground, chopping then upward from the under side as already described. A glimpse of the Hudson river, winding its sinuous course between a range of hills at the left of the building; in the foreground at the right is a large tree with several plants and a group of rocks about its base and roots. There is a cannon buried among shrubbery on the opposite side, and above the design appears the motto, "Washington's Headquarters, Newburgh, N. Y., 1783-1833."

The series of stamps from the Century of Progress is especially interesting and appropriate. The American national fairs have usually resulted in stamps that were appropriate. All these extra issues have made it quite impossible to prepare a special air mail series for the Wright celebration. Collecting American special stamps requires no special financial strain, for none cost over 5 cents. In other countries, however, when historical or other special events are to be celebrated, many very costly sets are prepared, and these are often extremely limited in quantity. Our one and two-value stamp issues are now more than enough to fill a page in an album of a collector.

The French colonies are represented by the Martinique set, which is of the usual length. The postal stamps are horizontal, and the dunes are vertical oblongs. Twenty-two values in the first group have for design the village of Basse Tente, displaying a church and a few houses dominated by palm trees; the palace of the government, and two Martinique girls, with fantastic headgear. A fruit display is shown on the second group.

All the Egyptian stamps are printed in two colors, and denominations range from 100 to 200 mills. The stamps show plenty of sky with an airplane in flight over three pyramids, the Great Pyramids.

The two Italian sets for Tripolitania are for both air and ordinary postal use. The postage, a deep purple, decorated with an ostrich, is 10 centesimi; 25 green leafless trees in a decorated vase; 30, ochre-brown, hooded native with his drum; 50, purple, a stone arch, through which is seen a minaret and tall poles with small flags waving; 1 lire, 25, shows an eagle resting on a stone wall; 5 lire plus 1 brown, with a cheetah creeping through the grass, and 10 lire, crimson, a man rising over a wall.

For the air post, 50 centesimi is green, with an airplane stretched across the width of the design in full flight over a town; part of a plane in the upper foreground flying over a white mosque and walls, is shown on the 75; 1 lire is blue with tail-end of a plane over the sea; 2 plus 50, like the 75, is blue with tail-end of a plane over the sea. Two official stamps from Papua are the ninepence, purple and gray-black, and 1 shilling three-pence, light greenish blue and gray-black.

Inquiring Reporter—Have you ever been surrounded by a hungry pack of wolves? Explorer—No, but I know the feeling. I used to open the dining room doors at a summer boarding house—Christian Science Monitor.

"I say, Chester, what explanation do you offer for the fact that you don't wear your overcoat you had cleaned?" "Can't be bothered, Herman. I didn't mind the wood across the shoulders, but that wire hook kept knocking my hat off."

For a Log Cabin—If you plan to build a log cabin, get an experienced woodman to select the trees which can be cut with least injury to the forest. Do not cut trees at random. Do not cut gasless in live trees, either to blaze a trail through the woods or for any other purpose. Such a wound in a tree makes it susceptible to disease spores, or seeds, and, in the case of pine trees, increases the fire hazard.

We have seen healthy trees die because some thoughtless person chopped the bark in a ring completely around the tree.

Chuckles

The pharmacist was instructing his errand boy to deliver a prescription to a Mr. Crumback. "Remember 'Crumback' rhymes with 'stomach'." Two hours later the boy returned and said, "I can't find Mr. Kelly."

A Trip Around the World With Postage Stamps

By W. R. THARP.

How would you like to have an "Around the World" cover in your collection like the one shown above? Such a cover makes an interesting addition to your collection and you will be of especial interest because you yourself can route it and follow its progress from start to finish.

Here is how you may obtain an "Around the World" cover for your very own:

Use an envelope about ten inches long and place on it ten cents in postage and address it to yourself in care of the American Consul in Cairo, Egypt; then at the same time mail a letter to the consul telling him what you wish done with the letter which you have addressed to yourself in his care, and enclosing 10 cents in coin for the stamps of Egypt which he will purchase and place thereon to send it to Hongkong, China. Send the same kind of letter of instruction to the American consul at Hongkong with a dime enclosed, telling him what you wish done.

Enclose with each letter to the consul at Cairo, Egypt, the address to which you want your letter forwarded, written on a sticker, so that all he will have to do is stick it over the previous address. The sticker to the consul at Cairo, Egypt, will be as follows: (Your name) care of American Consul, Hongkong, China, and the sticker to the consul at Hongkong will be as follows: (Your name) and your home address, city and state in the U. S. A.

This picture shows what an "around the world" cover will look like when it gets back home.

If you want a speed test try this route at the same time: Send to Berlin, Germany, and have the consul forward to Tokyo, Japan, then to your home address and use the same procedure as in the first. There are any number of points that can be used and a very nice and interesting collection can be made of these covers. The cost is not great. On the two mentioned above the cost is just 50 cents each. The stamp editor will be glad to map other routes up request.

Below are given the answers to a group of questions received this week from members:

Q.—I read a book about pigeons carrying mail during the World War. How could a pigeon carry very many letters?

A.—During the siege of Paris the French found that by microscopic photography they could print hundreds of words on films of collodion. By this method a single pigeon once carried 40,000 letters.

Q.—When was the first mail carried across the Atlantic?

A.—In 1827, Commander Byrd carried the first bag of mail across the Atlantic.

Q.—What is the largest stamp in the world?

A.—Perhaps the largest stamp in the world is a Chinese special delivery stamp measuring 4 by 5 inches.

An Interview With Thurston. Like the poet, Thurston, the magician mourns the life he so briefly and that craft so long to learn.

"Just about the time a magician begins to realize the possibilities of his art," he says, "he begins to realize that time, like Mercury, is shod with winged shoes. I have been more than 35 years building up my show. I started with a pack of cards and now three baggage cars are required to transport my paraphernalia and baggage."

In these 35 odd years I have traveled to the far corners of the earth and visited every civilized country on the globe. And always in quest of the elusive something new for my show. On my program are oriental tricks, Hindu, Chinese, Japanese, Malay, and Egyptian. One or two items had their origin among the witch doctors of West African tribes. Colonel Youngblood has told me that he saw the original of my floating ball illusion—the palace of the Grand Llama of Tibet. The llamas, or priests, informed the explorer that so far as their own records proved, the effect dated back some 5,000 years.

Among our own Hopi Indians of the southwest I got the idea of the phantom princess, in which a woman floats out over the orchestra to disappear in mid-air with a touch of the spectators' fingertips. The Hopi, by the way, probably have the oldest magic in the world. Their priests were performing so-called miracles a thousand years before Columbus was born.

So you see a magician has to travel about a bit in order to get ideas for his show. But about all he can expect consideration from children who have been taught to hold their parents in servitude, all their lives? No mother means to teach her children to be selfish. It is difficult to distinguish between parental self-denial and parental selfishness. It is difficult to distinguish between parental self-denial and parental selfishness. It is difficult to distinguish between parental self-denial and parental selfishness.

It does no good to tell children that they must respect and honor their parents. They will learn respect in a thousand little ways, and not because they have been told must do it.

Children should be trained to be independent of their parents as soon as possible. American parents don't train their children to be independent. They train them to be dependent on their parents. They train them to be dependent on their parents. They train them to be dependent on their parents.

The parents whose children honor and respect them most seem to be the parents who do not show any self-denial, but encourage their children to think and act for themselves at an early age.

The Parents' Forum

By MARGARET MONTAGUE.

How many, many times we've heard parents say, "I've scolded him, but it doesn't seem to do a bit of good. I don't know what's going to become of that boy!" How many times do we succeed in mending a child's ways by blaming him? Blame is negative and it is totally lacking in character-building qualities. Why not use the constructive powers of praise instead of the destructive powers of blame? It seems so difficult to approve of our children; it is so much easier to disapprove of them. Perhaps we are over-sensitive to their faults and blind to their good traits. Perhaps the demands on our time are so great that we are fatigued mentally and physically during the short periods when we are with the children. Let us try to simplify the daily routine of our lives so that we may have more time for relaxation, more time which we can give wholeheartedly and unreservedly to the real enjoyment of our children.

With some parents scolding becomes such a fixed habit that it is a real effort for them to praise a child for a good deed.

But how quickly a child does respond to a sincere word of praise. Courage and faith in himself soon replace the sullenness and rebelliousness of a child who has been going from bad to worse when a cherry word of encouragement and praise are given him.

An intelligent boy of my acquaintance once had the fault of carelessness rather strongly developed in him. It had become a habit with him to be behind on school work, late for appointments, and forgetful of duties around the home. He had a wise father who praised him for his truthfulness, for his scholarly attainments, and for the logic of his reasoning when thinking through a given problem. By pointing out his strength rather than his weakness, this parent gradually fixed the boy with determination to accomplish that which had seemed impossible for him to do. In making the boy conscious of his strength, he gave him the courage and the will to do. To tell a child that he is wrong over and over, and to inform him that nothing good can be expected from him, is the surest way to bring about the very state of affairs we are trying to avoid. Such treatment stifles hope, initiative and self-respect. There is always something which a child can do better than he has been doing. Cultivate that pride and use it as a foundation upon which to build, for a pride which is justified by achievement can become the soil out of which spring the seeds of faith and hope, and above all, the will to do, and the determination to succeed.

Selfishness in Children. How long must a child be set the example of unselfishness before she begins to imitate it? My husband and I have practiced self-denial ever since the birth of our little daughter, so that she might have every possible advantage. She is fourteen years old now and seems to grow more selfish every day.

Most of the parents of the girls in her school are better off financially than we are, and of course I don't want her to be ashamed of her appearance, so I just make over my own clothes and buy her new ones. It seems to me that I am not unreasonable in expecting appreciation and gratitude from her, but instead she is disrespectful and dissatisfied and no matter how much I do for her, it never seems to be enough to please her.

In my own youth I was taught the importance of setting a good example, and as the eldest child my behavior was constantly held up as a model for my younger sisters and brothers to follow.

Perhaps the selfishness in my daughter is due to the fact that she has no brothers and sisters to look upon her. And maybe because she is our only child, she feels that she has a little too much! Yours truly, (Mrs.) M. H. H.

Mrs. M. H.'s experience is not unusual. Most parents don't train themselves for their children's greater selfishness becomes. A child actually expects his parents to give up to him, over a while.

Your own selfishness to a child does not make him unselfish. It would teach your daughter to be unselfish, let her see the pleasure that your self-denial gives to someone else. Encourage her to give up for others and for you, then help her to get some real satisfaction from giving up. Show her that truly "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Parents who make slaves of themselves for their children need not be surprised to find evidences of dishonor in their children. How can they expect consideration from children who have been taught to hold their parents in servitude, all their lives? No mother means to teach her children to be selfish. It is difficult to distinguish between parental self-denial and parental selfishness. It is difficult to distinguish between parental self-denial and parental selfishness.

THE MADONNA OF THE CHOIR, BY RAPHAEL.

In one of the beautiful valleys of sunny Italy there lived a hermit. A large oak tree grew near his tiny hut and he was very grateful for the shade during the long, hot summer and for the protection from the cold winds in winter which the big tree gave him. He loved to listen to the rustling leaves and as he lived all alone he came to think of the tree as a real companion and friend.

His little cottage was completely destroyed by the terrific winds and the poor hermit had nowhere to go. He lay in the oak tree as long as he could, but soon grew quite faint from hunger and weariness. Then his thoughtful friend Mary came to his rescue. She brought him food and then took him to her home for shelter.

The hermit was so grateful to his two friends that he prayed they might never be forgotten. But after a few years the hermit died and the oak tree was cut down to be made into wine barrels. The sweet girl Mary was married and it would seem that the old hermit's wish could never be fulfilled.

But many years later Mary was sitting outside in the warm sunshine with her two little boys playing around her. The artist Raphael happened to be passing by and saw the lonely group. His interest was aroused and he stayed in the oak tree as long as he could, but soon grew quite faint from hunger and weariness. Then his thoughtful friend Mary came to his rescue. She brought him food and then took him to her home for shelter.

What's in a Name?

By LEWIS H. CRISMAN

The study of place names is something more than a harmless hobby—it vitalizes much that one reads and experiences.

Illustrations of this can be found on any page of an atlas or of the United States official postal guide. Some names are descriptive of geographical conditions. In northern Ohio there are two adjoining villages, whose names, Big Prairie and Lakeville, would naturally prepare the traveler to find one village located on a level place and the other by the

'Naughty Marietta' Held Over For Another Week at Grand

Ranking with the best of recent screen musicals, and exploiting most effectively the lastingly popular melodies of Victor Herbert, "Naughty Marietta," with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy heading its impressive cast, is now in its second week at Loew's Grand theater. This film was directed by W. S. Van Dyke, who directed "The Thin Man," and "Trader Horn," and contains much of his characteristic swiftness, imagination and humor.

"Naughty Marietta's" plot failed to live as long as Herbert's melodies, and the original story is today outmoded. Instead of attempting to bolster it up, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wisely eliminated the simple tale and supplied one of more color, eventfulness and attraction to modern audiences. Such brilliant examples of Herbert's genius as "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "The Italian Street Song," and "I'm Falling in Love With Someone" are retained in the score.

As presented at Loew's Grand, "Naughty Marietta" opens during a richly picturesque period in the world's history, when dissolute Bourbon kings ruled their country extravagantly, living in greatest luxury while the French people groined beneath the weight of their taxes. Miss MacDonald is seen as a royal princess, who has found favor in her monarch's sight.

To escape his attentions, she disguises herself as a servant girl and joins a shipload of emigrants who are traveling across the Atlantic to the French colony of New Orleans, to become wives of the early settlers.

After an adventurous crossing, and an escape from pirates, the girls reach Louisiana, where the princess is immediately attracted to a debonair young woodsman (Nelson Eddy). Their romance is enacted against the backgrounds of eighteenth century French splendor, in striking contrast to the pioneer surroundings.

Nelson Eddy is seen here in his first important screen role, and he is obviously a singing actor of great promise. Miss MacDonald is an excellent "Marietta," while Frank Morgan supplies a memorable comedy role with his famous talents.

Joan Blondell at Paramount Starred in 'Traveling Saleslady'

Joan Blondell, the blond pepper box, returns to the screen after an interval of several months in the hilarious comedy romance, "Traveling Saleslady," now playing at the Paramount theater. The story by Frank Howard Clark, is a snappy comedy drama with surprising and stirring situations, sparkling dialogue and fast-moving action.

William Gargan has the role of Miss Blondell's rival salesman who hates her for getting the best of him and yet can't help loving her.

Glenda Farrell has the role of a drugstore proprietress in love with Gargan. Hugh Herbert is the inebriated inventor. Grant Mitchell plays the part of the conservative manufacturer and his rival's role is played by Al Shean, of the once famous team of Gallagher and Shean.

Others in the large and talented cast include Ruth Donnelly, Johnny Arthur, Bert Roach, Joseph Crehan, Mary Treen, James Donlan and Gordon Elliott.

Miss Blondell portrays the daughter of a tooth paste manufacturer who has monopolized the field so long that he had grown conservative in his methods and his rivals began cutting great inroads into his business.

'Menace' on Capitol Screen, 'Dancing Thru' Is Stage Show

"Menace" is the appropriate title of the new first-run picture, which opens a week's engagement at the Capitol, Atlanta's only vaudeville theater today, Sunday. Recounting a blood-chilling yarn of three people whose lives are threatened by a madman, it is stated to build its suspense with telling effect and to create a tense atmosphere of the sinister and the unusual. Gertrude Michael, Paul Cavanagh and John Lodge are the stars.

On the stage, also for the week, the Capitol offers eight new acts of vaudeville as presented by the revue unit, "Dancing Thru," which carries a cast of 20 stage stars.

Headlined with the stage show are Walter and Kuban, the nut and the girl; Darrow Sisters, four feet of rhythm; Henry Rich, dancing xylophonist; Jimmy Bettis, hillbilly music that's different; Ray Walker, master of ceremonies and novelties; Wilfred Mae troupe, famous hoop rolling act; and Al Nichols and his CBS orchestra of 14 musicians.

In the Capitol's screen feature, "Menace," three people, a charming young woman and two men, one a retired English colonel and the other an American adventurer, are threatened with death by an unknown madman who wrongly holds them responsible for his brother's mysterious death.

Followed by the madman from Africa to an isolated house in California, these three, with mingled fear and courage, await the promised attack.

Then, one night, while they are entertaining several unexpected guests, word is received that the killer is among them, prepared to carry out his dire revenge.

Although the police have been summoned, the intruder is so afraid that aid will come too late. In despair, they attempt to thwart the murderous attack. But even before they can carry out their plan of action the hand of the murderer strikes and one victim of his gleaming knife is accounted for.

From this point on, the action is swift, the drama exciting, and the concluding thrilling.

The Capitol theater opens on Sundays at 1:45 p. m. with the first film subject going on the screen at 2 o'clock. First stage show is at 2:15 p. m. Performances on Sunday and during the week, are continuous.

Shirley Temple in Third Week As 'Little Colonel' at the Georgia

Shirley Temple continued to prove her popularity and the Georgia theater has booked this little golden-haired lady for another week, with Lionel Barrymore and Evelyn Venable as a supporting cast.

As Shirley Temple again demonstrates her extraordinary versatility, "The Little Colonel" establishes itself as rare entertainment. Essentially the show is a comedy melodrama. Pitched to a popular key, it intelligently accentuates the characteristic humanness of the Annie Fellows Johnson story.

The Buckhead theater this week is showing splendid film fare to its patrons.

"Heldorado" with Richard Arlen, Madge Evans and Ralph Bellamy is the attraction for today, Sunday. It is a comedy melodrama, pitched to a popular key, it intelligently accentuates the characteristic humanness of the Annie Fellows Johnson story.

"The Mighty Barnum" will be seen on Monday and Tuesday. The story is comprised of a series of events in the life of Barnum. Much comedy is provided by the manner in which Wallace Beery, in the character of Barnum, fools his wife and goes ahead with his plans to open a freak museum. Virginia Bruce is charming and Jenny Lind and her voice are excellent. Adolph Menjou, Rochelle Hudson, Lucille LaVerne and others are in the cast.

"Enter Madame" with Elissa Landi and Cary Grant is the picture for Wednesday. Cary falls in love with the temperamental opera star, Elissa Landi. Married life providing not the glorious thing he had dreamed, result in a highly entertaining picture.

"Limehouse Blues" with George Raft and Jean Parker is the offering for Thursday. This is an exciting story dealing with smuggling and intrigue. Billy Bevan, John Rogers and others are in the cast.

"West of the Pecos," a story by Zane Grey will show Friday and Saturday. The story itself, the presence of Richard Dix, and the good direction have raised this picture to a high level.

Pauline Lord as "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," the attraction for Thursday and Friday, has attracted nationwide comment on her excellent performance. She is assisted in this classic piece of entertainment by W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Evelyn Venable and many other screen notables.

Saturday the Ponce de Leon will offer "The Dude Ranger" with George O'Brien and Irene Harvey. Written by Zane Grey, this ranch provides many unusual moments of exciting diversion.

'The Night Is Young' at Rialto Has Star Cast, Romberg Music

The music of Sigmund Romberg, combined with the clever work of a truly great cast—headed by Ramon Novarro and Evelyn Laye—and the magnificent production supplied by the producers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, make of "The Night Is Young," current feature at the Rialto theater, one of those pictures that prove utterly delightful to all audiences and which are remembered long after the average celluloid entertainment is forgotten.

Manager W. T. Murray undoubtedly scored a triumph of booking when he secured this film for the Rialto and there can be no doubt it will draw heavily at the boxoffice for the remainder of its week's engagement which runs through Thursday.

The remarkable cast includes, in addition to Novarro and Laye, Charles Butterworth, Una Merkel, Edward Everett Horton, Donald Cook, Henry Stephenson, Rosalind Russell, Herman Bing, Charles Adels and Albert Conti. The director was Dudley Murphy.

The story centers around the romantic episodes in the life of the prince and heir to the Austrian throne of the house of Hapsburg. His father, the emperor, wants him to marry for diplomatic reasons, an exceedingly homely princess and objects to an affair he is having with a countess.

In order to screen his carryings-on with the countess, the princess hires a beautiful young dancer of the royal ballet to live in his palace and pose in public as his mistress. Of course the girl is as virtuous as she is beautiful, and equally, of course, she and the prince fall deeply in love.

How they answer the problem of whether he shall renounce his title and marry a commoner, or continue to be the prince and carry on the royal line, provides a different and extremely effective finale to the picture.

Carefully selected short subjects, entirely in rapport with the feature attraction, are shown between the feature and the main picture. An interesting Fox News completes the bill.

Fox Has Barbara Stanwyck As Star of 'The Woman in Red'

Barbara Stanwyck has the most dynamic role of her career in her new First National production, "The Woman in Red," which was shown for the first time locally at the Fox theater Friday.

This talented star has an unusually strong vehicle in "The Woman in Red," and makes the most of every scene. The picture, based on the popular novel, "North Shore," by Wallace Irwin, is filled with thrills and intense dramatic action set in the luxurious atmosphere of Long Island country estates.

Miss Stanwyck appears in the character of a Kentucky girl thoroughly versed in horse lore who, when the family fortunes are reversed, becomes a professional rider for a wealthy New York society woman.

Through her skill as a rider she brings one blue ribbon after another to the owner, whose gratitude turns to hate when she wins the man they both love. Miss Stanwyck is charming in the lighter moments and the romantic situations, but she rises to new heights of emotional acting in the intense dramatic sequences.

Gene Raymond, in the role of an impoverished young aristocrat who sweeps the Kentucky beauty off her feet in a whirlwind courtship, proves himself a magnetic lover, as well as an accomplished horseman.

Genevieve Tobin, always the finished actress, gives an unusually fine portrayal of the wealthy society woman who employs Miss Stanwyck and does everything to break up her love match after she herself has lost out. She brings out the vicious characteristics of the woman of polished surface with great finesse.

The romantic mix-up really is a quadrangular affair, for John Eldredge plays the part of Raymond's rival for the love of Miss Stanwyck. He is excellent in his role of a wealthy man about town, who, when he gets into difficulty, would rather include "Ha-Cha-Cha" and "Wine Song."

An M-G-M picture, "The Women in His Life," with Otto Kruger, Ben Lyon, Una Merkel and Rooco Karns will be the offering for Wednesday only.

Pauline Lord as "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," the attraction for Thursday and Friday, has attracted nationwide comment on her excellent performance. She is assisted in this classic piece of entertainment by W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Evelyn Venable and many other screen notables.

Miss Malone Weds William H. Ballard

MONTICELLO, Ga., April 13.—A marriage of interest and beauty was that of Miss Anne Kingman Malone, of Monticello, and William Heard Ballard, of Atlanta, which was solemnized at the home of the bride last Thursday evening. Rev. J. T. Eakes, pastor of Monticello Methodist church, assisted by Rev. W. B. Underwood, pastor of the Baptist church of Monticello, performed the ceremony.

Prior to the ceremony a program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Ida Renfroe, of Midville, Miss Mary Brown Gunn, of Monticello, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Misses Margaret Munroe, of Quincy, Fla.; Miriam Copeland, of Atlanta; Aris Monte, of Devaux, Ga., and Sally Gillespie, of Jacksonville, Fla. They carried bouquets of blue delphinium and talliesman roses tied with bronze satin ribbon. Randolph A. Malone III was ring bearer.

Malone Jr., by whom she was given in marriage, the bride was met by the bridegroom and John Kell Martin, of Atlanta, who acted as best man. The bride's wedding gown of blue satin was made along princess lines with real lace yoke. A bit of sentiment attached to the bride's gown was that it belonged to her sister, Mrs. Charles L. Henderson Jr., and was worn at her wedding. Her tulle veil was fastened to her hair by orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony Mrs. R. A. Malone Sr., mother of the bride, entertained at a reception for the wedding guests. Miss Mabel Ellis kept the bride's book. The beautifully appointed table was decorated by Mrs. E. C. Kelly and Mrs. G. A. Tucker. Assisting Mrs. Malone were Mesdames W. E. Ballard, R. A. Malone Jr., Eugene Palmer, C. L. Henderson Jr., J. L. Mr. and Mrs. Rainwater Celebrate 60th Wedding Anniversary Today markable as well as interesting and historical will be the celebration by Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Rainwater, 80 and 78 years of age, respectively, of their sixtieth wedding anniversary on Sunday. Their fiftieth or golden wedding anniversary was celebrated ten years ago, and on this day, the sixtieth year of their wedded life, they are still active, in fair health and able to take care of themselves. Mr. and Mrs. Rainwater live about seven miles west of Fairburn near the old extinct town of Campbellton, on the Chattahoochee river.

Their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren include eight sons, six of whom are living, and four daughters. Their children were reared to be adults and given a fair education and all, except the oldest son, who died just as he was in his twentieth year, have families, and there are grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Ephraim Dawson Rainwater has lived all his life within three miles of his birthplace on the old plantation of his grandfather, Rev. James Rainwater, a large slave owner, three miles from Palmetto. Some of the remarkable facts and secrets of living to their remarkable age is the quiet, simple and moral lives they have lived. None of Mr. Rainwater's family can recall ever having seen him under the influence of liquor, use of an oath, tell a falsehood, refuse to pay an honest debt or work for wages.

Some unusual things concern Mrs. Rainwater, who is the eldest daughter of Lieutenant Washington and Martha Ellen Hammond, deceased officer of the Civil War, who built the Masonic lodge hall and furniture still in use at the old Campbellton Lodge No. 78, which, excepting the old residence, known as the Brock home, is the only building left standing of the old extinct town of Campbellton. On a wall have hung since 1884 the portrait of President Jackson who, during that year was president. Among some of the remarkable remembrances and relics of Mrs. Rainwater's past life are the unusual escapes during 30, 1865.

Mr. Rainwater belongs to the Masonic lodge and Baptist church. As a citizen he has lived and while not of robust health, having some physical handicaps, he has always kept busy employed. As a result he not only has supplied the needs of his own family but has paid during these past sixty years several hundred dollars, accrued mainly by indorsing papers during the World War that later proved worthless. Today he faces the world with a clear slate.

Miss Anais Cay Jones Becomes Bride of Mr. Ramey, of Virginia

Easter lilies adorned the altar when Miss Anais Cay Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Selden Bryan Jones, became the bride of John Mason Ramey, of Marshall, Va., at an impressive ceremony taking place on Saturday at high noon, at the Cathedral of St. Philip. Bishop H. J. Mikkil performed the marriage service in the presence of a representative assemblage of relatives, friends, and guests from a distance.

Stately palms adorned the chancel and were artistically arranged on either side of the altar, and Easter lilies filled the altar vases. Cathedral candelabra held white tapers, and pedestal baskets were filled with Easter lilies. Stately palms formed the effective background for the decorations, and Arthur Davis rendered an appropriate musical program preceding the entrance of the bridal party and during the ceremony. The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" heralded the entrance of the bride and groom, and Mendelssohn wedding march was played for the recessional.

Miss Henrietta Catherine Jones, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and was gowned in azure blue taffeta fashioned with a smart coat. Her hat was of azure blue straw in a matching shade and she wore blue accessories. Spring flowers in pastel shades formed her bouquet.

Edwin Noell, of New York city, was best man and the ushers were R. L. Gatewood, S. A. Black and D. D. McLamb, of Atlanta, and J. H. Cunningham, of Washington, D. C. Selden Bryan Jones gave his daughter in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man.

Lovely Brunet Bride.

Lustrous white satin formed the lovely bride's handsome gown, the bodice introducing a fragile lace top and the skirt achieving a graceful long train. Her filmy tulle veil was caught to a cap of real lace and tiny sprays of orange blossoms were arranged across the back of her shapely head. The gown was loaned the bride by Mrs. Tom Cassels, the former Miss Lena Knox, who wore it when she married, and the veil was worn by Mrs. Willis Wendt, of Los Angeles, Cal. Miss Charlotte Adams, of Atlanta, who wore it on her wedding day. The bride's beauty was enhanced by her bridal robes, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies, showered with valley lilies, and tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. Jones, the bride's mother, was gowned in black chiffon flowered in white figures, and her hat was of black straw. A bouquet of gardenias adorned her shoulder.

To Reside in Virginia.

Mr. Ramey and his bride departed after the ceremony for a wedding trip, and afterward they will take possession of their new home in Marshall, Va. The bride donned for traveling a becoming brown and white print crepe dress finished with a white collar. She wore a short jacket of similar material and her hat was an imported brown bako straw.

Listed among the prominent out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Ramey, parents of the bridegroom, of Marshall, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Cunningham, of Washington; J. E. Cay and Miss Armine Cay, of Savannah, and Edwin Noell, of New York.

Miss Janet Mann Will Wed E. V. Hungerford Jr. in June

MISS JANET MANN, OF MACON.

Macon, Ga., April 13.—Of cordial social interest is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Mann, of Macon, of the engagement of their eldest daughter, Miss Janet Mann, to E. V. Hungerford Jr., of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Atlanta. The bride-elect is the daughter of an outstanding family in the history of this country from early colonial days. Through her mother, the former Miss Floris Perkins, of South Carolina, whose home it was at that time, the attractive bride-elect is descended from the Perkins, Randolph, Stanley, Covington and Brown families of South Carolina, all of whom played an important part in the legislative and social development of those states. She traces descent in this country from Nicholas Perkins, who left the ancestral home, Upton Court, Lancashire, England, and came to America in 1646 and built the mansion Oakhurst in Pittsylvania county, Virginia, which was commandeered for a patriot hospital during the Revolutionary War, and is still in the possession of the descendants of Colonel Peter Perkins, whose home it was at that time. Stephen Decatur Miller, eminent jurist and statesman of South Carolina, is another ancestor. The late William J. Perkins and Ida Mulloy, of Chesterfield, S. C., were her maternal grandparents.

On her paternal side Miss Mann is descended from the Mann and Page families of Virginia, and the Sikes and McArthur families of North Carolina, who were leaders in those states' political and economic development. Thomas Mann, noted colonial legislator, being for a number of years a member of the house of burgesses. Charles McArthur, younger son of the Earl of Murray, of Scotland, played an important part in the struggle for North Carolina for American independence. The late Frank R. Mann, widely known legislator and financier, was her paternal grandfather.

Mrs. Brown Elected President At Meeting of Iris Garden Club

Other officers elected to serve with Mrs. Brown were: Mrs. William Wardlaw, vice president; Mrs. Lawrence Willett, recording secretary; Mrs. Murdock Eguen, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Albert S. Adams, treasurer.

Complying with the request of Mrs. Hubbard McHatton, president of the Garden Club of Georgia, and the executive board, the Iris Club elected its officers at the last meeting before the convention of the Garden Club of Georgia and install them into office at its annual meeting in May, just after the convention.

The year 1934-35 has been busy for the 30 members of the Iris Garden Club. Last April they were hostesses to 500 members of the Garden Club of Georgia in its sixth annual convention. Since then the club has developed "Woodland Glen" in its Iris Club garden, extending its beautification and conservation 1,110 feet farther in length into Courtland Winn park, and 620 feet in width. Eight hundred and eight native flowering trees and shrubs, of blooming size, have been planted in drifts of dogwood, hills of crabapple, banks of mountain laurel and wild azaleas, fringe trees, holly and red oaks. Miracles of drainage, trenching and grading have been accomplished. The steep clay banks have been planted so naturally they fit into their surroundings.

The loveliest spot of Woodland Glen will be the irregular shaped pool, 90x95 feet, now being constructed as a giant mirror reflecting venerable beeches, giant ironwoods and the green foliage of a great maple tree, turning a desolate and ugly spot a mosquito swamp into a thing of beauty.

In the absence of Mrs. Eugene Harrington, flower show chairman, her report on the Atlanta Flower Show, May 9-10, was read by Mrs. Alvin Cates, secretary. The Iris Club is one of the 10 clubs staging this show. Mrs. Lawrence Willett made the report on "Iris day" at Garden Center for March; Mrs. Mary Nelson Ream reported Iris day for April.

If spring house cleaning reveals the need of a new Chair, Sofa, Love Seat or Living Room Suite, now is the time and here is the place to buy, cheaply.

We have gone through our large stock and ear-marked the one-of-a-kind items as fit subjects for the price-cutter's axe. Little regard was paid to relative costs. Some pieces are reduced moderately, some drastically, others slashed unmercifully.

Seeing them in their regular places on the floor, one would never imagine, for example, that this piece is marked such and such a price, while the one next to it is just double.

But that is the way of orphans in a furniture stock.

First make a mental note of such pieces listed here as might be of interest to you, then come in and see ever so many more that are equally beautiful and as attractively priced.

Incidentally—
you will see several startling values in Dining Suites and individual pieces. Not enough of them to gloat over here, but while they last a few lucky people will get real bargains.

Glenridge Hall To Be Opened For 'Bundle Tea' on April 25

By Sally Forth.

MRS. THOMAS K. GLENN'S yearly contribution to the philanthropic activities of the relief service group is the opening of her handsome home for "bundle teas." The invitational affair takes place at Glenridge Hall on Thursday, April 25. If you do not know the meaning of a "bundle tea," Sally begs to say that admission to the social affair is gained by donating a bundle of discarded clothes or any other no-longer-desired article.

These articles are sold afterward at the Omnibus on West Peachtree street for the ultimate benefit of worthy and dependent people. The Omnibus is the name of the shop operated by the relief service group. No expense is attached to running the shop because feminine social leaders volunteer to stay on duty on certain days. There is no rent to pay. Mrs. Charles A. Coklin donates the use of her West Peachtree store for this philanthropic purpose.

The guiding spirit behind the undertaking is Mrs. James D. Robinson. She plans and directs the money-making projects as the highest officer of the relief service group. When Mrs. Robinson accepted the chairmanship it was something of an occasion—an occasion for both the charity and Mrs. Robinson. She is devoting her time to the work, and to her credit goes the staging of the successful movie ball several months ago.

Mrs. Glenn takes great pleasure in being hostess at these annual "bundle teas." She considers it a rare privilege to open wide the doors of Glenridge Hall on Dunwoody road and extend welcome to her bundle-laden guests. She is keenly alive to the charitable work done by the band of earnest women eager to help those less fortunate than themselves. Mrs. Glenn does much in sweet charity's name.

To offset the serious side of the purpose of the "bundle tea," Mrs. Glenn arranges an attractive musical program to charm and entertain her guests. The interior and exterior of the residence is ablaze with flowers to flaunt a colorful welcome. Glenridge Hall lies at the end of a picturesque motor ride along the Roswell road, with a turn to the right on the Dunwoody road.

The house is of a distinctive type of English architecture and lends itself admirably to any form of entertainment its lovely chateau decides to give. Sally hopes she will encounter at the tea hundreds of charitably inclined friends with neatly and gaily wrapped bundles tucked under their arms. They will be graciously received by petite and charming Mrs. Glenn.

REMEMBER the filmy tulle veil edged with real lace and fastened to Frances Boykin Barnett's brown hair when she trod the orange blossom trail? It has been unpacked and loaned to Frances Johnson. She will wear it when she weds that good-looking Kentuckian, Samuel Kirby Jr., on April 27 in St. Mark church. The former Frances Boykin bought the lace in Brussels when she toured Europe before she married Bill Barnett and moved to Jacksonville, Fla.

By coincidence, the lace that adorns the white satin wedding gown of Frances Johnson exactly matches the lace on the veil and cap. It trimmed the bridal robes of Mrs. James W. Johnson, whose daughter chose it to trim her wedding gown. The bride-elect's father, Dr. Johnson, pastor of St. Mark church, will perform the ceremony that transforms his daughter into Mrs. Samuel Kirby Jr.

Frances Boykin Barnett will spend the month of June with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. F.

Boykin. She will divide her time between their Springdale road residence in Atlanta and Wannah Lodge, their summer home at Lakemont. In the Indian language Wannah means "home." The Lakemont place derives its name from the boyhood home of Mr. Boykin in Camden, S. C.

DAN CUPID, that capricious young person, is running rampant through the corridors at Washington Seminary these days. His arrow has pierced the heart of one of the most popular members of the senior class. Sally hears that the youthful belle is having a hard time answering class bells when wedding bells are ringing.

She is a tall, slender, dark-haired and dark-eyed beauty, and the fact that the future bridegroom is also "dark" and handsome is rather contrary to the old adage that opposites attract. Here's another angle which may help you solve this one. At the recent exhibit of the sewing class at the seminary she had a number of exquisite pieces displayed. Could it have been part of her wedding finery? We forgot to tell you that the young man goes to our own Georgia Tech.

HARRIETT CALLAWAY is convinced that Nemesis follows in her wake. Not that she deserves any such pursuit, but witness the ill luck she has had, and you will agree with her.

Harriett is an inveterate movie-goer. For months she had not missed attending the theater in her community on Wednesday night, which you don't have to be told is always "bank night." Naturally, she expected that some day luck would come her way, or that the law of averages would cause her name to be drawn for the $25 given away each Wednesday.

Shortly after Christmas, Harriett went to Florida with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Callaway, for a visit. And the very first Wednesday night after she left, her name was drawn for the prize at the theater. Of course, you know that if you aren't in the audience to claim the prize the amount is added to next Wednesday's sum, and so on. And would you believe it? The amount had grown to $125 when Harriett's name was called.

"And no less than nine people wrote her in Miami to tell her of the incident," said her mother, Mrs. Callaway.

HERE is a story which has piqued our interest, which we herewith pass on to you.

Attractive Visitor From St. Louis, Mo.

Here is Miss Gertrude Grove, an attractive and socially prominent visitor from St. Louis, Mo., who is visiting Miss Ida Akers at her home on The Prado in Ansley Park. She is the daughter of Mrs. E. W. Grove and the granddaughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Grove. The lovely young visitor is named for her grandmother, who before her marriage to Dr. Grove was Miss Gertrude Mathewson. Miss Grove has been studying landscape architecture at the Lathrop school at Groton near Boston. With her mother, who is visiting Mrs. William Akers, Miss Grove will remain in Atlanta through the forthcoming week. A number of informal social gayeties will be given in her honor. Photograph by Kenneth Rogers.

There will soon be two marriages in one family. First the daughter will tread the orange blossom trail. A scant week later, Dame Rumor advises us, the mother will marry her suitor and leave immediately thereafter for an extended wedding trip. The latter has kept time to Lohengrin before, if that will be of any interest.

Wray-Boland. POWDER SPRINGS, Ga., April 13.—Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wray announce the marriage of their daughter, Catherine, to James Marvin Boland, of Atlanta, on Wednesday, April 18, at the Peachtree Road Methodist church. The Rev. A. Lee Hale performed the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives and friends. The bride is an accomplished musician. She is a descendant of the Wrays of Langston of middle Georgia on her paternal side, and of the Andersons and Bowdens, of Adairsville on her maternal side. Mr. Boland

Immense French Liner Normandie A Veritable Maze of Doors, Steps

When the new French line flagship Normandie, world's largest ship, reaches New York June 3, finishing the first half of her maiden voyage between France and the United States, she will have in store a few surprises for those who think they have seen about all there is to see in the way of doors and steps that go to make life aboard ship most practical, comfortable and convenient.

The doors installed in the new ship are of wrought-iron, steel, etched glass, ordinary and rare woods, etc., forming a part of the necessary equipment for rooms, closets, cupboards, lockers, elevators, wardrobes,

QUEBEC'S EASTER DRAWSTHOUSANDS

U. S. Pilgrims To Join in Church Pageantry Across Border.

MONTREAL, Que., April 13.—With old world ceremonials as venerable as Paris and the ancestral villages of Normandy and Brittany, Montreal and the province of Quebec, joined by thousands of worshippers from the United States, will commemorate the Easter holidays.

In Montreal, celebrants will gather for special services while the bell towers of the city's 200 churches thunder the Easter tidings. Honoring the day, the 24,780-pound "Gros Bourdon" in Montreal's great Notre Dame church, one of the mightiest bells in North America, will break the silence that it maintains for all but state occasions. And in the church, seating 10,000 worshippers, humble peasant folk will mingle with city worshippers in one of the richest religious pageants in North America.

Equally colorful will be services here at Notre Dame de Bonsecours, the city's oldest church, located on three-century-old Bonsecours street, center of the beau monde at the time of the old French regime. Adjoining the church is the famous Bonsecours market in Jacques Cartier square, where at Easter tide, close to the statue of the Virgin which was brought from Brittany generations ago, and which is said to be endowed with the power of working miracles, thousands of children and grown folk will be on hand for the traditional annual display of enormous beets, decorated with paper roses.

These services and celebrations will be rivaled in other cities and villages scattered from the Grapes peninsula to the gold-mining towns in the province's great northwest. In the shadow of such ancient shrines as the Notre Dame de Bonsecours, whose history began in 1650, and the chapel of the General hospital, which dates back to 1692, Quebec city, with all the dignity of the days of Samuel de Champlain and Cardinal Richelieu, will observe the Easter season. At the Ange-Gardien church, near Quebec city, ornaments that were the gifts to Quebec of Louis XIV and his court will be displayed during the services. Another observance that will be steeped in tradition will be that at the Tadoussac church, in the town of the same name at the mouth of the historic Saguenay river. The church dates its beginning from 1617, three

SEA ISLANDERS PLAN TURTLE HUNTING PARTY

SEA ISLAND, Ga., April 13.—Turtle eggs will be the object of a search to be made Tuesday night, April 16, by a group of Cloister guests and members of the cottage colony at Sea Island, who will compose a party for a moonlight sail to Cumberland island. Leaving the Sea Island Yacht Club on a seagoing cruiser, the group will make the trip through the winding inland water passage.

Adding novelty to the program of events will be the boxing matches to be held Thursday night at the Sea Island casino, when well-known boxers in several weight classes will come to Sea Island to participate. Climaxing the program will be a "bottle royal" between all of the negro contenders, who also will stage several matches.

Wednesday afternoon, April 17, a round robin tennis tournament will be held on the Cloister courts, assembling younger players on the island. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons, skeet shoots will be held at the Sea Island Gun Club, marking the final two weeks of the spring tournament for the semi-permanent skeet trophy.

York May 29 and arrive at Bermuda May 31. There the ship will remain almost two days before returning to New York, where she is due June 3, thus providing ample time for thoroughly enjoying the many attractions of the island.

On this cruise of the Resolute, she will be commanded by Commodore Fritz Kraus, veteran circumnavigator of the globe, and commodore of the Hamburg-American line fleet.

Tallahassee Falls Jubilee Chairman Issues Message to Clubwomen

Mrs. John Monaghan, of Pelham, Tallahassee Falls jubilee chairman for Georgia federation, issued a message to clubwomen: "Surely every Georgian club will follow the proclamation of our president, Mrs. Ritchie, and the state executive board and celebrate on April 20 the triumphant silver jubilee of our federation school at Tallahassee Falls.

"We shall be celebrating far more than 25 years of marvelous service in a unique school for our 'Light in the Mountains' was not the beginning but the flower of 35 years of struggle on the part of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to establish the importance of all-round development of each of our children by the uniform training of head and hand and heart.

"Not 25 but 35 years ago the pioneers of our federation had a vision of such a school and 25 years ago Tallahassee Falls school was begun as the realization of this vision. Other clubwomen through all these years have caught this vision and dreamed their own dreams, too. We have worked hard to realize these dreams and now comes the call to celebrate the beautiful fulfillment of these dreams and this happy effort. Rich success has crowned our common efforts.

Great School.

"Today our school is a great school, the pride of every clubwoman within our state, the envy of those without. With our inheritance of this wonderful institution, each year there comes the challenge to carry on; the women who have gone before us have never altered, each year the obligation has been greater, each year they have successfully administered this organization. As the needs of the school have grown, the efforts each year have been greater to meet the demands.

"For 25 years the clubwomen of Georgia have gladly accepted the challenge, and can we of today afford to let Tallahassee Falls school be the greatest possession of the Georgia federation, a living, breathing, tangible

Mrs. John Boston, of Marietta, called for reports from the club presidents and of the 18 federated clubs in the district were represented. Each club was urged to join in celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of Tallahassee Falls school on April 20. Many of the clubs reported money sent to Tallahassee Falls school.

Reports from officers and chairmen of standing committees showed splendid work and co-operation in all club activities. Mrs. Glauser urged the club presidents to attend the council meeting in Valdosta, on May 7 to 10. The yearly district convention will be held in Albany on May 14 to 17. The business session will be held on May 14. The program for the day will be "Immunize Now—Stamp Out Diphtheria." It can be done, let Georgia do it. The club groups are already active in organizing the summer round-up which begins on May Day. No community can afford to neglect preventive measures for protecting the children in its midst.

5th District Welcomes New Junior Club.

It is with particular pride and pleasure that the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and the Fifth District Federation welcome a new junior club, the Junior Atlanta Woman's Club, admitted upon application in March, 1935. The club has 20 members, daughters of members of the Atlanta Woman's Club. Miss Ellen Rhodes is president and other officers named on the application are Mrs. Carl Plunkett, recording secretary, and Miss Frances Norman, treasurer.

The object of the club as stated in the Constitution is to further the aims and purposes of the general and state federations along the lines prescribed by the Atlanta Woman's Club, and to advance the mutual interests of both clubs. The new club will be a junior group and cordial good wishes are extended the Junior Atlanta Woman's Club.

Washington Club.

Washington Woman's Club, under the leadership of Mrs. R. R. Johnson, the president, has been quite active during the year. The most outstanding project being the organization of the Washington Community Chest last fall. Several hundred dollars were raised and used in furnishing food, fuel and clothes for about 75 families. Medical attention was also given in many cases and much suffering in the county prevented.

Among other activities of the club was a series of benefit set-back parties for men sponsored by the ways and means committee to raise money for the purpose of enlarging the clubhouse. The beautification committee has planted over 700 dogwood trees, sent out over 600 pieces of literature on the preservation of wild flowers and native shrubs, landscaped and planted the hospital grounds. On April 4 the club sponsored a birthday party on the lawn of the Mary Willis library in celebration of the 47th anniversary of the opening of the library.

Grantville Club Holds Meeting.

Grantville Woman's Club members held the April meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Arnold, with Mesdames W. G. Sadler and Charles Cramer as hostesses. Mrs. E. R. Leigh, the president, explained that the purpose of the meeting was to acquaint the members with the constitution and by-laws of the newly organized club. Charles Cramer, superintendent of Grantville public schools, read and discussed the purposes, rules and activities of the club.

Plans are being made to keep grounds cleaned. The finance committee for first quarter, of which Mrs. Mel Blanchard is chairman, reported $15.25. Plans were discussed for putting on a flower show during April. Plans were made for typhoid and diphtheria clinics and the FERA nurse will assist with these clinics.

Echoes Gleaned From Gainesville Meeting.

Mrs. John O. Braselton, president of the ninth district federation of clubs, expresses herself as "pleased beyond her expectations" over the recent meeting in Gainesville. She is especially happy over the enthusiasm of the new club, Rabun Gap, Democrat, Martin and Helen. There were four from Rabun Gap who stated they had so many club interests they had to hold meetings twice monthly. Eight of the 12 members belonging to the Helen club attended and declared that they have a prospective Junior Club.

Demorest was represented by the president, Mrs. H. B. Mowbray, and others, who brought a splendid report of their activities. Clayton was well represented and has two good workers on the board including Mrs. E. R. Taylor, chairman of literacy, and Mrs. Clyde Holden, chairman of correction.

Dalhousie club is well organized and has federation under consideration. Mrs. Braselton attended the meeting of the seventh district in Marietta in appreciation of the presence of Mrs. W. A. Hill, the president, at the Gainesville meeting.

Pike County Clubs.

The Pike County Federation of Women's Clubs will meet at the call of the president, Mrs. W. D. Howell, of Zebulon, for its 21st convention, in Zebulon, on Saturday, April 20, at 10 o'clock. The presidents will report work done by clubs during the year and the chairmen of committees will make reports or offer suggestions and plans that will be suitable for clubs to adopt for the coming year. There will be an interesting program which will be announced later.

Valdosta Council Theme Is Built Around Famed Biblical Quotation

With the Biblical injunction "Whither have ye built a road to day?" the Georgia Federation of Women's Club council to be held in Valdosta, May 7-10, will conduct full and free discussions of present-day problems. Around this keynote will be built the entire program which concerns modern trends in education; social and family welfare; government and citizenship; and world membership. In presenting public issues at the crossroads, the past presidents will bring the blazing trails and the present administration surveying the big ways of tomorrow. Afters questions will be discussed pro and con by the district presidents.

A feature of particular interest will be a series of exhibits including paintings, bric-a-brac, a collection of Spode china, and a library exhibit. Efficient plans are being made for the comfort and entertainment of the visitors under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Oliver, hostess president, and Mrs. Paul Walker, chairman of general arrangements. A radical departure will be initiated on the opening night when the Wymondaus Club will be host to the council at a candle light banquet. This will be a tea at Emory Junior College, and Thursday evening following the fish fry, the visitors will be guests at a motion picture.

Opening on Tuesday evening with the candle light banquet at the Wymondaus Club, guests will be honored by the Wymondaus Club. On Wednesday afternoon there will be a tea at the Georgia State Woman's College. Luncheon complementing the visitors takes place Thursday, the council takes place at the Wymondaus Club. On Thursday afternoon there will be a tea at Emory Junior College, and Thursday evening following the fish fry, the visitors will be guests at a motion picture.

Third District Holds Meeting in Dawson Child Health Week Will Be Observed By Barnesville Club

At the call of the chairman of the American Home department of the third district of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. J. A. Brim, of Dawson, a group conference of the club presidents and chairmen will be held in Dawson on Thursday, April 25, at 10:30 a. m., at the Methodist church.

Chairmen of the American Home department and chairmen of the divisions, family finance, home economics, training, home extension service, gardens, insurance and safety in the home will be present. This conference for the purpose of inspiration and information to be gained from the plans and projects submitted for this group's discussion.

Mrs. J. A. Brim, president of third district G. F. W. C., joins Mrs. Brim in urging a full attendance from each club in the district.

Writers Club Plans Meeting for April 18.

Poetry and prose will feature the meeting of Atlanta Writers' Club to be held Thursday evening, April 18, at the Atlanta Woman's Club, Carnegie Library, 100 North Ave. NE. The club will read selections from her volume of verse entitled "Mist" recently published by the Oglethorpe Press. Miss Paul was winner last year of the collegiate prize offered annually through Bonart & Contemporary Verse by Mrs. Willafore Leach. The prose part of the program will be of unusual interest since it will be contributed by Mack Upshaw, blind student of Tech High school. His story, "Strangled," to be read during the evening, was a winner of a national prize in a contest sponsored by Searchlight, Braille magazine, several weeks ago. Mr. Upshaw has made a splendid record of school and has been named on journalism as his profession.

Musical selections will be rendered by Paris Lee, well-known baritone, who will sing a group of songs accompanied by Mrs. Lee. Mrs. Bonita Crowe is chairman of music. Dr. W. F. Melton, president of the club, announces that a nominating committee to select the new slate of officers will be appointed at this meeting. Dinner will be served in the ballroom at 7 o'clock. Reservations may be made through Mrs. Bacon at the clubhouse, Hemlock 4638.

Tennille Fine Arts Club Holds Meeting.

The program, in charge of the arts and crafts committee, Mrs. Peter Haden, chairman, will be featured by an exhibit of articles made by members of the club during the year. These will be arranged in three groups: (1) articles of thrift, (2) novelties, and (3) general exhibit. Ribbon was given for the three best in each group.

Why Super Suds, when all other soaps failed, could keep Mrs. Harvey's hands soft and young through more than 6000 dishwashings...

If you want your hands to keep young and smooth and soft in spite of three dishwashings a day... follow the example of Mrs. Harvey and the millions of other women who have used Super Suds for 4, 5 and 7 years.

For Super Suds is a new form of soap—created specially for dishwashing. Made in a tiny hollow bead it dissolves instantly, completely! Unlike the average soap-dissolving soap, it leaves no undissolved particles... so no impurities that irritate tender skin and give hands that red, ugly, "dishwashing" look!

And because Super Suds dissolves so quickly, so completely, it makes dishwashing far quicker and easier! Leaves no spongy, undissolved particles to streak or mar dishes or glasses. Just a quick rinse and they come sparkling clean in a jiffy—even without wiping.

How TRAGEDY WRECKED the PARADISE of the MODERN EDEN SEEKERS

By George Wieda

PARADISE FOR RENT!

That sign should be posted on Floreana Island in the glamorous Galapagos group, where days are languid and nights languorous, where there are no Ten Commandments—or landlords or neighbors.

Once again the iguanas and sea lions rule the rocky shores of the paradise of the Pacific, a tiny speck of lava rock set in the vast blue loneliness of the ocean. It is unoccupied since Frau Dora Koerwin, lone survivor of the catastrophes that overwhelmed her nudist Eden, donned the clumsy costume of civilization to conceal the buxom curves so long caressed by the tropical sun, and returned to her friends and family in Germany.

Her going brought to a close a strange interlude of weird and violent events; unconventional love affairs, hatred, jealousy and strife bordering on madness; a strange interlude that for five years intrigued the world, its curiosity tantalized by fragmentary reports of a rare bohemian drama being enacted by castaways.

Her going, too, restores to Floreana the lure of isolation that draws to it lovers seeking elbow room to work out marvelous designs for living, unfettered by the strictures of society and annoying attentions from inquisitive acquaintances.

It was the isolation that fascinated Dr. Friedrich Karl Ritter, well-to-do Berlin dentist. Nudist and health faddist, he had long planned to find peace far from the world that tried to fit everyone into a common mold of existence. He was dissatisfied with everything, including his wife, and undoubtedly would have gone to Floreana alone had not Frau Koerwin encouraged his extramarital attentions. She hastened his going by agreeing to join him in his search for paradise.

They made no secret of their going. Each reached such peace as was possible with his or her legal spouse. Then they were lost for nearly a year while they established on Floreana an Eden that won them world-wide fame as the first free-love Robinson Crusoes.

IRONICALLY, it was science that started the invasion of their paradise. Comm. Eugene F. McDonald, back from a zoological trip to the islands, brought the first news of the tropical nudist bower the Germans had established. The news was flashed to Europe and eventually brought to Floreana the characters who took such important roles in the tragedies.

The island's lava cliffs are uninviting to the lookout on passing ships. Ritter had discovered in the crater of an extinct volcano an oasis lush with luxuriant tropical fruits and vegetation, abounding in game and blessed with a spring of sweet water. There, far from the cares of civilization, Ritter and Frau Koerwin built their love nest. The climate was so benign that the castaways wore clothes only when interlopers appeared.

After that first year on their remote retreat, Ritter and his mate took stock of their situation. Life hadn't been all love and kisses. Nature was lavish in her fertility, but not always in a fashion to make existence one of continuous bliss. There had been the problem of how to keep their wild neighbors at a distance. Farm and domestic animals that were lineal descendants of a long-forgotten attempt to colonize the island refused to recognize the rights of the human civilization suddenly sprung up in their midst.

Ritter had tried to raise tomatoes, lettuce and other vegetables. Fowl and wild pigs trampled his plants into the ground. The donkeys that crashed through the jungle thickets didn't respect even a palisade that cost many blisters and callouses to erect.

But it was a plague of insects which devoured the few plants saved from the bigger pests that proved the last discouraging straw to those first agricultural pursuits. Some tomatoes, small and lacking flavor, were the only reward for many hours of gardening labor.

Even the nights, by tradition made for lovers, went awry. The silence that should have lulled them so sleep was raucous with the shrill calls of birds, the excited braying of donkeys and the yowling of wild dogs.

Here was another vexing example of the manner in which the best-laid plans of mice and men so often and unexpectedly go awry.

Before leaving Germany, Ritter, good dentist that he was, had fixed things so he never need worry about toothache; he extracted all his teeth, and designed artificial teeth of rust-proof die-tool steel that would last a life-time. He figured that he could fix Frau Koerwin's teeth, if they started aching, and with these new plates he would never need attention himself.

Yet somehow, on the island he dropped and broke his plates! For months he was not able to chew solid food, and had to live on mushy fruits and raw eggs.

It is no wonder then, after these experiences, that he admitted to Capt. Allan Hancock, the Los Angeles yachtsman who paid a visit to the island and gave them sorely-needed supplies:

"We haven't found paradise here. Paradise is what you make it."

Yet neither would listen to any suggestion that they turn back from this existence to the obligations they had been so unwilling to continue.

In their love they found a justification for enduring all their troubles.

The weird record of hatred, jealousy, strife---and death---which attended the group who counted the world well lost for love and sought a new design for living on a glamorous Pacific isle

The two who found disillusionment on their island Eden—Dr. Friedrich Karl Ritter, Berlin dentist, who died there, and Frau Dora Koerwin, who went back to civilization sobbing hysterically.

Meanwhile, on the other side of the world, in Paris, the temptuously beautiful—Viennese, Baroness Eloisa Bosquet de Wagner Wehrborn was also preparing to seek happiness in the island Eden. Her lover was the pallid, tubercular Alfred Lorenz.

Although she would gladly maroon herself on Floreana with Lorenz, the Baroness wasn't taking any chances on being left without a lover in case he failed to survive the rigors of paradise. She added to her retinue big, strapping Robert Phillipson, strong as Lorenz was weak.

Soon a young Dane named Arends joined the baroness' retinue. He was shot when he threatened to return to the mainland a few months later—shot in the abdomen, then nursed back to health.

Ill-feeling then developed between Lorenz and Phillipson. The latter had become the baroness' hunting companion, and then her favorite, and she showed her dissatisfaction with Lorenz by encouraging the bigger man as he beat and maltreated the invalid.

Then the inevitable happened. Phillipson succeeded to the servant's hut. Phillipson succeeded to the envied position of royal consort.

SHORTLY thereafter Eden's first great mystery developed. The baroness and Phillipson disappeared. Lorenz rushed to the Wittmers' hut in the morning to announce that his companions had abandoned him, leaving only money to comfort and succor him. They were going to the South Seas, Lorenz reported.

His romance shattered, Lorenz no longer was interested in Eden. So he accepted the offer of Nuggerud, a Norse sailor who owned one of the few boats in the Galapagos, to take him to Chatham Island, where he might get passage to America or Europe.

They never reached Chatham. A fishing boat noticing a distress signal on Marchenas Island, 100 miles away, landed a party that discovered two sun-parched bodies lying under a storm-battered sloop. It told the grim story of the fate that overtook the adventurers.

With these unruly interlopers gone from Eden, Ritter and Frau Koerwin might have been expected to have lived happily ever after. But that was not to be. The excitement and turmoil of the summer's events had taken their toll of Ritter's strength. Even as Captain Hancock was driving his yacht toward Floreana to visit him, Ritter died of heart disease.

When Captain Hancock arrived, Frau Koerwin was carried aboard his yacht, hysterically sobbing and begging that he take her back to civilization. And when Floreana passed beyond the horizon, it was truly a deserted island, for even the sedately married Wittmers had gone—where, no one knew.

That accounts for paradise being for rent. The climate is all you could expect in your fondest dreams. The heat of the equatorial sun is moderated by the cool Humboldt current coming up out of the Antarctic. The comfortable nights are accompanied by the lullaby of waves lapping on a tropic shore. It offers isolation and an easy life of sorts. Truly it is a haven for lovers who would escape from the conventional pattern of loving.

There's no denying the allure of the Galapagos Islands—but it is a fatal allure.

The Baroness Eloisa Bosquet de Wagner Wehrborn and Robert Phillipson, who displaced Lorenz in her affections and vanished from the island with her.

Ostensibly Phillipson was a servant. He remained to play a stellar role in the mystery that attended the dispersal of the Bohemian colony. This trio invaded Floreana and built a hut near the sea. They named it "Paradise," then enough to go into partnership with Cecil Rhodes in his British South African Company, the colonizing and exploration company that discovered fabulous gold and diamond mines in South Africa. As a young girl, Sybil had been in intimate contact with many of the most famous families in Europe, and as she grew into a slender, dazzling beauty, it was only natural that she should be courted by the flower of England.

Sybil Cawston Had Beauty, Riches, Kings and Princes For Her Friends—But Destiny Stripped Her of Them All

She was the darling of pre-war England, and it was an achievement for young Wilfrid Gough, officer of the Guards when he won her hand.

Sybil gave birth to two handsome sons. She gave parties that were the envy of every young hostess in England; kings, lords and world-famous diplomats and statesmen attended them. Her annual outlay for entertainment approximated $200,000. She dined King Leopold and played tennis with Prince "Eitel Fritz," the Kaiser's son. Monte Carlo, Deauville, Nice knew her. Suddenly this blooming young wife was discovered by the art world. Sargent painted her, and Orpen vied for the honor with Augustus John.

Soon Sybil's photos were displayed in stores and shops, in magazines and newspapers—everywhere. Her young

Then Sybil suddenly disappeared from England. She turned up in Amer-

But the young friends and relatives alike when, acting on a whim, she joined the chorus of the Broadway show, "The Right Girl."

Captain Gough sternly sent for her. She went back to London after a year in the chorus. The outraged husband served divorce papers on her, and named two famous men.

She returned to America and sought to go it on her own. Then her father died, a bankrupt.

Sybil carried on. She still had an income of $10,000 a year. And she met a brilliant young sculptor, Wheeler Williams, and married him.

But Sybil's bad luck continued. The world-wide depression cleaned out her stocks. Her husband found his business hit. Poverty split the couple.

When Williams, again married, heard a few weeks ago, that his former wife was destitute, he sighed:

"She is a beautiful and a fine woman—but some one else will have to take up the burden."

Sybil Cawston, the much-sought golden beauty, a burden? Assuredly, Time—and only a little of that—had wrought radical changes.

Again Time must be the arbiter—Time must tell.

A PREACHER'S AUDACIOUS LOVE TRIANGLE THAT FINALLY SQUARED ITSELF

THE good citizens of Cave Springs, Mo., shook their heads and said "no good" could come of it when the amazing affair of the Rev. Sharon C. Inman came to light. It was unholy and unnatural, this triangle revealed three years ago. "Something" would happen.

Something did happen. The "wronged" woman has found herself a fine husband. The unfrocked minister has landed a job as a salesman, and his hitch-hiking young bride loyally helps him. The parishioners of Cave Springs shake their heads and sigh, "All's well that ends well," but they still can't believe it.

It didn't seem that any good could come of it when a 43-year-old married minister confessed his love for a 20-year-old girl.

The Reverend Mr. Inman had been married for ten years. He had an attractive wife. He had met her when he was attending the Missouri Valley College in Marshall, Mo. He couldn't keep his mind on his academic studies, back in 1920, after he had spied pretty, young, red-headed Gladys Barker.

There was only one way he could finish his college work. He married the girl. They both left college shortly afterwards and Sharon Inman took to preaching.

Everything went well. The pretty, young, red-headed woman gave birth to two children. She was, the good citizens in Cave Springs said, a capital wife.

And the minister was such a handsome man. Too handsome, it proved, for his own good. Three years ago, he decided to return once more to the college where he had met his red-headed wife.

He received permission from his flock to take most of the week off to continue his studies. He commuted to college while his wife ran the many church affairs, cared for the two children and kept the home fires burning.

But history repeated itself. Once more the Reverend Mr. Inman discovered that a pretty face was interfering with his studies. This time it was a blonde—a minister's lovely daughter twenty years younger than himself.

He knew it was wrong. You don't have to be a minister to know that. And he knew the pretty Miss Holdridge would be terrified if he told her that ever the ridge he had a wife and two children.

So for weeks the reverend doctor played a desperate game. Week days he squirmed the bashful young student around while her fellow students jibed the girl with cracks about her "old man." He forewarned the doe-eyed girl, with vague remarks about an unfortunate "engagement" he had with a vague heiress somewhere.

Week-ends he mounted the pulpit in Cave Springs and solemnly exhorted his little flock to follow in the path of righteousness—and then for the rest of his short hours at home he moped around the house, scaring the children and worrying his wife with his lovesickness.

Finally he came home for Thanksgiving vacation time, this 43-year-old undergraduate. And the strain of the enforced absence from his little student sweetheart drove him to desperation.

So he wrote her a passionate poem: "I have wept; I have sighed, I have even cried."

As a babe in a mother's arms, As you pulled yourself away from me, Refusing to accept my charms...

It was too much for the preaching Romeo to stand. He went to his wife and told her of his love; he demanded that she set him free.

The level-headed Mrs. Inman thought twice before she gave way to grief. She had two children to think of, and perhaps her husband was merely infatuated. Meantime she herself would make sure of her own future. She would get her teaching credits. She, too, would go to school!

Of course, now there was no way the reverend doctor could avoid breaking the terrifying news to Miss Holdridge that he was a married man. She was naturally shocked. But Mrs. Inman said:

"Tut-tut—you come right on home and board with us while we talk it over." Later, Mrs. Inman confessed the real reason for her audacity in inviting her rival to share the family roof.

SHE WON THE PREACHER
Rev. S. C. Inman and Miss Holdridge. Shortly After They Announced Their Marriage.

"It was the only thing I could think of doing at the time," she said; "you will do almost anything when you love a man and his children."

So the religious love triangle was set up and managed to stay intact for weeks. Mrs. Inman and Miss Holdridge took the double bed and the preaching charmer found himself shunted to a separate room.

The married woman and the young girl compared notes. They chattered gaily about their rivalry; spoke jocularly of "poisoning" one another, and even criticized dispassionately the faults and virtues of the man for whom they really were battling grimly!

It was a good idea, but it didn't work. Inman did not lose interest in the little blonde; and on the contrary, he became even more infatuated, seeing her day by day at his own table.

But before Mrs. Inman would admit defeat, the church people took a hand. There had been rumors, and gossip spread rapidly. The churchmen held a meeting and demanded that the Reverend Mr. Inman appear before them and explain his polygamous carryings-on.

Still the scoffers scoffed. Mrs. Inman had been a sucker; here she was with no husband, two children and a blameless life—and nothing more.

But Mrs. Inman fooled them. She finished her college course while teaching school, and then, in good time, found a husband. He is Clifford Farmer, 35-year-old newspaper and magazine writer and farmer.

Thus, despite dire warnings, the amazing Inman love triangle did square itself—and everybody is happy.

Revealed:—The Real Mystery of Broadway's Bogus Prince

Everybody Knew This Fake Romanoff Was a Chattering Cheat and Chiseler, But His Genius Is Such—

—No One Suspected Mike Was a Sherlock Holmes, Too, Till Pretty Wilma's Sizzling Suit!

MAN OF MANY MOODS
The Photos at Right Disclose "Prince" Mike in a Variety of Characteristic Attitudes—Peering Coyly From Showerbath; Lacing Shoes; Brushing Hair; in Dentist's Chair; in Court, and—(Center) Just Harry Gerguson.

"HAVE you ever been in a bare room, in a new house, with a view overlooking the park? You look at the park, and it is marvelous. You look at the bare walls and find them absolutely repulsive! They cry for adornment. That is I!"

"I do not lie because I desire to be a thief and a crook, but because I wish to be associated with persons whose lives I believe to be adorned. If I told the truth, I would be like a bare wall." Prince "Mike" Romanoff, in an interview at Ellis Island.

SINCE the early 1920's the figure of the under-sized, homely Harry Gerguson has been a world wonder, a phenomenon more startling than the Einstein theory, the Colossus of Rhodes or Jack the Ripper.

Squat, swarthy, mildly myopic and more than mildly crinuous, Harry strolled the face of the globe, applauded by women, befriended by men, a great favorite with little children, dogs and imbeciles.

The world has looked upon Gerguson and found him not wanting. His home is everywhere that the softer refinements, the most palatial luxuries are to be found.

You and you and YOU have met Harry at this cocktail party or that banquet or in art gallery or on racetrack. You know him well; that is, as well as you can ever know him. But you wouldn't recognize Harry Gerguson by that patronymic. To you he's Prince Michael Alexandrovitch Dimitri Obolenski Romanoff. Mike, in short.

This singular person, whose pretensions to Muscovite nobility have, time and again, been proved bogus, has been applauded by the rich, the intellectual and those of blue blood.

He has borrowed seeds of money left and right and never repaid it; has cashed worthless checks, and bilked hotels and steamship lines; has swindled tourists on the Continent and made himself a positive pest to the immigration authorities of the United States.

A police record as long as your arm proclaims that Harry is a fraud, a confidence man and a thief.

Yet he continues to be treated with actual love and veneration, often on the part of people he has duped, who have seen him exposed, yet for whom he has such penetrating charm that they'd almost rather go to jail themselves than see the Prince there.

Charm, just charm; that's what's responsible for Gerguson's deathless success.

Yet through the tangled, colorful skein of his life there has always run one enigmatic thread. Even after he had been revealed as a fake, Prince Mike seemed to have one unsolved mystery about him.

But it wasn't until the recent amazing case of Gould versus Gould that the single item in Harry's repertory that has been an unknown quantity came to blinding light.

Prince Michael, etc., it appeared from the court testimony, for years, off and on, had been a private detective, a satiny sleuth with an overwhelming sympathy for the matrimonially distressed!

When pretty, vivacious Mrs. Edward Gould—Harry called her Wilma—was introduced to Prince Gerguson, she thought he was just too, too amusing and divine. He regaled her with highly tinted tales of his defunct cousin, the Czarvitch, murdered with his father, mother and sisters in the first Red uprising; described his European rambles, and touched ever so lightly on his vast Russian estates (now regrettably in the hands of those Soviet bounders).

Wilma didn't realize, then, that Harry's latest job had been with a speak-easy. Nor did she absorb the disputed theory that her pal, the Prince, was a Jewish boy, born in Kansas, but bearing the imprimatur of Brooklyn strong upon him.

Paraphrasing, commenting on the Romanoff-Gould case, Professor William Moulton Marston, America's most eminent "practical psychologist," remarked:

"Mike used to rush in on her—so Mrs. Gould testified—fresh from the polo field, dressed in a turtle-neck sweater instead of evening clothes. He would tear himself away from dinner to pay the expenses of various titled relative who were 'just sailing for abroad.' "Mike's custom was to drink quarts of champagne, Wilma testified. This seems to have impressed her as a social phenomenon. Poor, Wilma!"

Whatever Wilma's and Mike's amenities may have been, there came the day when Mrs. Gould discovered, to her chagrin and dismay, that she had awakened in a totally strange bed. Her clothing was of the scantiest, and how she got that way she hadn't the vaguest notion.

True, she had a dim recollection that she and Prince Harry-Mike, who by the way owned the bed or had got it on credit, had dined together at a "fashionable club"; that the coffee had tasted kind of peculiar, and that the next thing she knew her husband's detectives were hammering on the door, loudly insisting that they wanted in.

Edward Gould, Wilma's mate, had little difficulty identifying her. This was terrible, for Wilma as well as the rest. Indeed, so humiliated and outraged did Wilma Gould feel that she promptly retaliated by suing all and sundry on a charge of conspiring to "frame" her as a modern Hester Prynne.

The outcome of the trial is too well known to call for recapitulation. But had the custodians of the law been history-minded, they might have dug up a somewhat similar episode in magniloquent Mike's recent career.

"Once, at least, in Mike's past, he had acted as a trapper for a detective agency," commented his enthusiastic biographer, Alva Johnston, writing in the sophisticated New Yorker. "Once, at least, he stopped the prosecution by hinting that he had been his wealthy benefactor's sweetheart."

A "customer's man" for a bond house, it appears that this regal Romanoff, in 1929, had been hired to create statutory grounds for a divorce. All the classic ingredients were present: the bored wife of the awfully rich industrialist; the cozy little dinner, tete-a-tete; the curiously flavored coffee; the awakening in an alien bedroom, and—the police.

On this occasion, however, according to the sedulous Mr. Johnston, Mike varied the proceedings by screaming out, in a mellow bellow: "Who dares enter the bedchamber of a Romanoff?" when the inhuman detectives began battering at his door.

The learned Professor Marston has an ample footnote to the Gould case. Says he:

"Really, the good lady shouldn't take all this too seriously. The easy gullibility which led her to complete befuddlement by the phony Prince is not a private sin; it's a characteristic of her sex. Mike deserves a university degree, for he has publicly established a Great Truth."

"It isn't the man a woman falls for. It's his 'line.' Clothes may make the man, but it doesn't take much of a man to make the average woman. After the Gould adventure, men hereafter will have sense enough to disguise themselves when paying court to the ladies of their fancy, and males who once were uncertain how to classify themselves socially will let the women do it for them."

Mrs. Gould, before embarking on that coffee spree with Mike, ought to have scanned the official records of his career. She would have found that he had the following debit entries chalked up to him:

Deported from America. Jailed in France. Exposed as a bum in Newport, Boston, Hollywood, Manhattan and Long Island. A prodigious writer of bad checks.

It is energetically contended that Mike was born in Vilna, Russia, in 1890 and that he came to the United States when he was six. Whatever the facts, it is beyond dispute that his aliases are legion. He has been the Honorable Arthur Wellesley; Sir Willoughby de Burke; William A. Wellington (the "orphan paper," to the baffled bank authorities). An orphan and problem child. According to Scotland Yard, with whom he had several little brushes, "a rogue of uncertain nationality." A buttonhole maker. A cattle boat stow-away. And lots of other things.

It is energetically contended that Mike was born in Vilna, Russia, in 1890 and that he came to the United States when he was six. Whatever the facts, it is beyond dispute that his aliases are legion. He has been the Honorable Arthur Wellesley; Sir Willoughby de Burke; William A. Wellington (the Duke of?); and Count Gladstone. In fact, the only labels he seems to have overlooked were the Tichborne Claimant and the Grand Chan of Tartary. Biographer Johnston has a word on Mike that touches off the match of Mike's whole psychic arsenal:

"The soul of a grand seigneur found lodgement in a regrettable exterior."

Although his case-history bristles with glittering achievements, four years of Mike's life are shrouded in impenetrable mystery. From 1914, first year of the World War, to 1918, when the Armistice was signed, the Prince was—where? Nobody really knows. If you listen to Mike—as who doesn't—you will learn that he spent that passionate period behind the bars for killing a German baron. Another fragment of Gergusoniana is that he is a brother of the late czar. Or maybe his half-brother. Or even (one can't recall all these trivial details) his nephew.

Before he became somewhat haggard and weather-beaten from life's vicissitudes, Le Gerguson-Romanoff was wont to get himself adopted or befriended by millionaires—and millionairesses—who insisted that he acquire even richer polish at the loftier and more expensive seats of culture.

He most certainly was a student at Harvard, where his dormitory parties, at which caviar was served by the bucketful and champagne via vat, became proverbial. Presented somewhat brusquely with a bill for these revels, this astonishing man coolly remarked:

One color indicates one direction; the other another. The legend on the sign, "Zum Bahnhof," means "This way to the railway station."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO JUSTICE?

Erland's Point Massacre Still a Mystery One Year After Finding of 6 Bodies

By PETER LEVINS.

ONE year ago this afternoon, shortly before 5 o'clock, a resident of Erland's Point, near Bremerton, Wash., peered through a window of a neighbor's home and beheld two battered and bloodstained bodies lying face down on the living room floor.

The house was that of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flieder, situated in an isolated spot about 300 feet from the nearest neighbor. Thomas Sanborn had heard dogs barking frantically in a sedan which had been standing in front of the Flieder dwelling for two days. The dogs, three French poodles, were locked in the car, and they appeared weak from hunger and thirst.

Sanborn rang the bell and pounded on the front of the house. But there was no answer. And then he looked through the window.

Sanborn dashed to the nearest telephone, called the sheriff's office, then hastened back with K. Erland, after whose favor the small residential community and summer resort had been named. They entered the house and came upon a scene of carnage that will haunt their dreams until they die.

The two men lying on the living room floor had been beaten beyond recognition, and they lay in a welter of coagulated blood. Their hands had been tied at the wrists. One of them, whom Sanborn and Erland decided must be Flieder, had been slashed in the throat. Later examination showed that Flieder had been beaten nine times over the head with a hammer and twice in the face, breaking the jawbone.

The other man had been struck over the head 21 times. One of his bloodstained hands clasped the leg of an upturned stool, as though he had made a last convulsive effort to get to his feet.

They Discover Two More Bodies.

Sanborn and Erland stepped carefully around the bodies, then halted with frightened gasps.

Two other bodies lay in an adjoining room, a man and a woman. The man, whom the visitors immediately recognized as Magnus Jordan, elderly next-door neighbor of the Flieders, was slumped down in a chair beside a card table, with a bullet through the eye. The woman, a stranger to them, rested near-by on the floor under the table. She had been shot twice in the neck.

Jordan, the woman and a third person had probably been playing pinochle, for there were cards and chips scattered about the table. The queen of hearts lay in a pool of blood on the floor, but the face of the card was perfectly clean, indicating that it had been pushed off the table some time after the killings. Neither of these two victims had apparently made any struggle.

Sanborn and Erland continued their horrifying journey. In a bedroom they found Mrs. Flieder, whose head had been battered, her throat cut, and her breast slashed. And in a closet they came upon the sixth and last body, another stranger to Sanborn and Erland. He had sustained five hammer blows, his throat had been cut, his jaw broken. His false teeth had been knocked out of his mouth and lay on the floor near the body.

All of the bodies except that of Jordan had been bound with improvised thongs, or shoe-laces.

The house was in considerable disorder, and appeared to have been ransacked. Bloodstains covered the floors and walls.

It was apparent that the Flieders and their guests had been having a congenial party when the killer or killers entered, for there were 18 empty beer bottles on the back porch, six empties were in the kitchen, and an unopened carton of 12 bottles on the kitchen table.

Presently Sheriff D. L. Blankenship arrived. Later there were other officers at the scene, Chief of Police J. W. Tribble of Bremerton, Under Sheriff Rush Blankenship, brother of the sheriff, and Luke S. May, noted criminal investigator of Seattle, who had figured in many important cases throughout the northwest.

The county medical officers said that the murders had been committed about 48 hours before their discovery.

All agreed that the motive appeared to have been robbery. The hammer and the knife had been part of the household equipment. The pistol used in the murders was never found. Investigators believed it to have been an old-style single action .32 caliber revolver, judging from the bullets. Jordan was said to have owned such a weapon but this was never established.

2 Diamond Rings Missing From House.

The robbery theory gained strength when it developed that two diamond rings belonging to Mrs. Flieder had disappeared. One was a dinner ring valued at $1,500, and the other was worth about $600.

Meanwhile the authorities were checking on the identities of the victims unknown at Erland's Point. Within a few hours they learned that—

The man whose body lay near Flieder on the living floor was Eugene A. Chenevert, about 45, one-time pugilist, known in vaudeville as Bert Vincent. His home was in Pendleton, Ore. The woman found near the card table was Mrs. Chenevert, about 40, who had appeared in vaudeville with her husband as a singer and dancer, using the stage name of Peggy Vincent.

Bodies of Magnus Jordan and Mrs. Chenevert as they were found by card table. Both had been shot. They had apparently been taken unawares, for there was no sign of struggle.

The man found in the closet was Ezra M. Balcom, about 50, known as a bartender during prohibition days, and well-known in speakeasies in Seattle and Bremerton. The police could discover little about his early life.

The sedan parked in front of the house had belonged to the Cheneverts.

As for the other three victims—Frank Flieder, 45, had been a resident of Bremerton for many years. He was a retired grocer. Mrs. Anne Flieder, 52, had married Flieder after the death of her previous husband, Clifford Taylor, Bremerton druggist, who died in 1931, leaving her a life income and this house in which the murders had been committed.

Magnus Jordan, 62, was a bachelor, a retired navy man, who had served 30 years and was living on his pension. An expert bridge player, he was frequently invited to parties because of his skill.

Erland's Point is located on a point of land jutting into Puget Sound, six miles northwest of the navy yard, where between 4,000 and 5,000 workmen have been employed since the World War. In the summer there are ordinarily about 100 families living at Erland's Point, but at the time of the murders there were about a dozen families. The nearest community of any size is Bremerton, seat of the navy yard, 16 miles by ferry from Seattle.

The house of death stood on a knoll, thickly surrounded by second growth fir, overlooking Washington Narrows, an arm of Puget Sound. The side of the house faced the beach, about 50 feet distant. The scene could easily be reached either by automobile or by boat, but the investigators found no evidence whatever as to what means of transportation the killers used.

No resident of the community could recall having heard any untoward sounds—screams of pistol shots—on the night of the massacre, Thursday, March 29. No one had passed the Flieder residence that evening.

Naturally other theories than that of robbery occurred to the authorities. Had there been an argument of some kind, and had some guest, still living, lost his head? But this seemed far-fetched. Would it have been possible for one person to cow the other six, bind the wrists of five of them and then effect a wholesale slaughter with hammer, knife and gun?

Yet somehow simple robbery did not seem a sufficient motive for such a thorough wiping out of the revelers.

Could it have been the deed of a madman? This certainly seemed worthy of consideration, for the house, with six bodies scattered over the place, looked as though a demon had been loose there, that type of demon who wallows in blood and death. But if it was a madman, then he must have been rather a clever fellow, for he left no trace of his presence of identity. The officers found no automobile tracks, and no sign of a boat having been beached in the sand.

Apparently Killer Escaped Unharmed.

Detectives asserted that the killer or killers must have been injured, and physicians and hospitals throughout the northwest were warned to be on the lookout for suspicious patients. But apparently the officers were mistaken. The killer or killers must have been covered with blood in the course of the massacre, he or they appeared to have escaped unscathed.

One detail that came out during the investigation was that both Chenevert and his wife had at least in one period of their lives, if not recently—used narcotics, and that Mrs. Chenevert had once taken a drug cure.

Whether this might have any connection with the crime no one could say. Bremerton police had recently been waging a campaign against narcotics, prepared in tablet-form for sailors and their women friends. The racket, it was said, had been broken up. Was it possible that there might have been a quantity of drugs in the Flieder home?

But that seemed like another far-fetched speculation.

The investigators thought they had a possible lead when they learned that Chenevert had been arrested in Stockton, Cal., in 1929 on a charge of manslaughter. It was charged that in a street fight he struck one Hiram Rupp a fatal blow on the head. The charge had been reduced to assault, Chenevert serving 30 days in jail.

But this, too, led nowhere.

County Offers Reward of $500.

Chief Tribble, as soon as the crime was discovered, ordered his men—the Bremerton department consists of Tribble and eight patrolemen—to round up all suspicious characters. It was known that a number of questionable persons had come to town on the occasion of the opening of a beer garden. Various suspects were questioned but without result.

On April 3 the Board of County Commissioners offered a reward of $500 and appropriated $1,500 to pay the cost of the search. Two days later Sheriff Blankenship called on Governor Martin for aid by the state patrol. Later the county asked the federal government for officers but was told that the federal men could not participate in a purely local affair.

Meanwhile a great many fingerprints had been found in the house, and the task of checking on these got under way.

"We have a means of making a positive identification of our killer," stated one of the investigators. "All we have to do is find him."

Law on Inquests In Washington.

There was no inquest. The law of the state of Washington reads as follows:

"When information is given to any coroner that the body of any person, the cause of whose death is unknown and there shall exist reasonable ground for the belief that such death has been caused by unlawful means at the hands of another, he shall go to the place where the body is and forthwith summon six good and lawful persons qualified by law to serve as jurors, to appear before him forthwith at the place where the body of the deceased is, to inquire into the cause of the death."

Another paragraph provides: "After inspecting the body and hearing the testimony, the jury shall render their verdict and certify the same in writing, signed by them and setting forth who the person killed is, if known, and when, where, and by what means he came to his death; and if he was killed or his death occasioned by the act of another by criminal means, who is guilty thereof, if known."

But no inquest was held. Neither Blankenship nor County Prosecutor R. W. Miller would give any explanation beyond the statement by the sheriff that he was too busy to bother, adding, "We know how the killings were committed. What's the use of holding an inquest?"

The months passed, and there was no solution. Not a single clue had been unearthed.

Sheriff Blankenship was killed in an automobile accident on November 4, a few days before the citizens of Kitsap county were to vote for his re-election. His brother Rush became the party nominee and won. However, his republican opponents contested on the ground that Rush Blankenship had been a convict in a Kansas penitentiary.

This disclosure had come to the knowledge of the sheriff's political enemies in a rather curious manner. Within a week or so of the Erland's Point massacre, all the fingerprints gathered in the house had been sent to the central bureau in Washington, D. C. Presumably the bureau reported that some of the fingerprints found in the house were those of a former inmate of the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan.

They had been Rush Blankenship's prints, which he had left at the scene while he was investigating the case with his brother and other officers.

Blankenship won his fight, for he had been pardoned and his citizenship restored.

And now a year has passed, and there is no solution in the massacre at Erland's Point.

Ladies at the Race Track-- Or the New Freedom

By FRANK CONDON.

FOR a long, long time, you were forbidden to do almost anything in this precious country of ours, the spirit of reason was in the saddle, the blue of the steering wheel and the children listened respectfully or winked at each other with liberal views. Now everything is changed and you can do as you please and are the released and pampered citizens having fun! They are indeed. Take horse racing.

Not long ago, horse racing was scowled at and looked upon pretty generally as a cardinal sin. You were forbidden to make wagers on the horses as they loped around the track, but recently the law-givers switched over. State after state has legalized horse racing and what is more important, wagering on the galloping beasts.

Instantly new vistas opened up to the long-starved Americans, who love to gamble, the same as the British, the French and the Dutch, and the opening tracks brought forth a brand-new class, an unsuspected group of speculators, that you might call the quite women folk, or the ladies who used to stay at home. It turns out they are hearty gamblers and nobody knew it.

Now then, in those days before horse racing came back so joyously, the ordinary American housewife didn't do much betting, as there was no place for her to gamble respectfully. The big cities had their racing ladies and feminine gamblers, to be sure, but they belonged to a different social layer and the home-staying women used to read of them in amazement. So far as they were concerned themselves, they didn't ever know they too, were gamblers at heart. They thought they were mothers or housewives, or whatever it said in the city directory.

With the spreading advent of horse racing, these same women are cheerfully taking father's money out to the local track and trustfully trying to run two dollars up to a small fortune. And it may be a good thing that so many new tracks are flourishing in so many states, for the jaded housewives have at length found a happy and exciting way of spending the afternoon. If examined, it will be seen that there is no sense whatever in the methods or systems by which these inexperienced dames bet on the horses.

They are not the hard-faced veterans of the track. They are Phils of the betting ring. They know nothing at all about records or information sheets, but are rapidly learning. Up to now, they are a pop-eyed crowd of gulleys and enthusiastic imbeciles, betting small sums on the running horses, and astonishing as it may seem, they often win, to their own delight and the boredom of others in the family, who now must listen to the tales of triumph and disaster.

In the old days, it was father and his golf. He came home evenings from the golf course, and even the cook could tell how he had fared in his joustings with the boys by merely looking at him. If he had shot a brisk 88 and won seven dollars, dinner was a success and the family received all the details, over and over, down to the last infinitesimal snack. "And so I sank the putt," father used to say, while mama and the children listened respectfully, or winked at each other with liberal views. Now everything is changed and you can do as you please and are the released and pampered citizens having fun! They are indeed. Take horse racing.

about a thousand pounds. So what are you talking about?

She made indignant answer, showed me her program for the day, with the weights in plain figures, and when I explained that those weights referred to the half of the jockies, she didn't even blush. She is now about a hundred ahead, betting on 80 pound horses.

New England is historically supposed to be the stern and rock-bound part of the nation, with all the sturdy virtues, right as the Scotch. Independent, wary about money matters, steady going and thrifty, the residents going in strong for saving banks and the quiet life. Well, they opened up a new track near Boston last summer, and the hard-headed Puritans almost trampled each other to death, trying to get in. The daily attendance looked like the first German army. The daily take was something preposterous and dumfounded the owners. The daily betting looked like what France owes and won't pay.

Answer? Well, the people of New England haven't had an opportunity to bet on anything but crack-spitting for the last 90 years, and the old libido rushed to the surface, causing the money to flow like water. Even grandmothers, whose last bet was a box of candy on the Confederate army is removing currency from the kitchen jar and hot-footing out to the banglows.

There is an ancient race track saying, but the housewives of today never heard of it—a horse player always dies broke. That is as sound and true a statement as the other wise crack about death and taxes, but it gives no pause in these light-hearted times, for here you have a generation that was almost verbatim clear off the merry-go-round and can now do anything it pleases, up to standing on the head.

To return to horse racing and its astounding effect upon our home-loving womenfolk, the ladies have always adored roulette, craps, black-jack and chuck-a-luck, all games wherein the customer has no more chance than butter in the oven. The trouble was, they never had opportunities, for a real lady cannot walk into a men's gambling joint with rough men everywhere. So the dames were forced to be content with their inhibitions, submerged desires, frozen appetites and such, until horse racing loomed, and suddenly became as respectable and widespread as influenza.

Thus it is that father cannot get hold of the morning paper any more, as mother is engrossed in today's entries, trying to figure out whether Leaping Lipstick will have a chance to show in the third race. Downtown in the business offices, the stenographers chip into a pool 25 cents a race. In the suburbs, the bridge-playing dames have set aside their cards and are out at the track, and so there is a genuine problem facing the fathers, bread-winners and heads of families in this broad nation—how far to let the women go with this new freedom—and no doubt the family heads will solve it as skillfully and thoroughly as they have solved all the other serious financial problems of the last six years.

The Planets--Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenient to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

APRIL 14--SUNDAY: The hours previous to 11:23 a. m. will be favorable for affairs that require peace and conservatism, but do not promise the quick consummation of affairs started at this time. Delays seem to be the main feature of these hours. The afternoon and evening hours suggests that you look before you leap, for affairs may appear to be more pleasant on the surface than they will be when you are involved in them. If discretion is used and impulse is not followed, you will save yourself quite a lot of trouble.

APRIL 15--MONDAY: Peace and calmness will still be necessary through 12:20 noon in all dealings. Between 12:20 noon and 3:42 p. m. favors dealings with those in high positions, those who are at the head of affairs, dealings in finance, and important business affairs. You will probably feel inclined towards a waste of talents during the remainder of the day, which suggests the use of moderation in all things.

APRIL 16--TUESDAY: Before 9:50 a. m. favors matters that have to do with women's apparel, written matters, communications, publishing and matters of amusement and adornment. These hours favor dealings in a calm way, so if there has been friction in the past in such matters, these hours favor the adjustment of them. Between 9:50 a. m. and 9:13 p. m. favors matters of a mechanical nature, liquids, and affairs that deal with the sea. This period is also somewhat favorable for communication and consultations. The evening hours will be fairly favorable for sociable and entertainment features.

APRIL 17--WEDNESDAY: The combined influences today are inauspicious, making it difficult to think right, act right or say the right thing. They bring an unsettled feeling, with perplexity, and it would therefore be a good idea to curtail activities.

APRIL 18--THURSDAY: The combined influences today through 9:31 p. m. suggest caution in all matters, especially in dealings with partners of any kind. (Marriage is also considered a partnership.) Exercise self-control and diplomacy, or you may be too impatient and heedless of the feelings of others. Conditions improve materially after 9:31 p. m., favoring new opportunities, health, and social matters.

APRIL 19--FRIDAY: The entire day through 6 p. m. favors dealings in property, building, mechanical affairs, friendships with older people, and matters dealing with liquids and the water. Details may be overlooked in haste, so give closer attention to the fine points of what you are undertaking.

APRIL 20--SATURDAY: The influence prevailing previous to 11:37 a. m. are the most favorable of the day, for affairs will tend to go right with less effort. Financial gains, promotions, preferment of some sort accompany these influences. The remainder of the day tends towards the sudden breaking up of affairs, and matters started at this time will have a tendency to dissolve suddenly, and in some unusual manner. People born between April 21 and May 1, of any year, are likely to have peculiar and unexpected events take place in their lives around this time. They should look closely at everything, business, personal affairs, new friendships and all new propositions. They should not take anything for granted, as some upset in their affairs will probably be felt.

HOW TO USE THESE INDICATIONS TO BEST ADVANTAGE.

Should you receive an important telephone call, giving you the first news you have of a certain thing, look and see if the influences at that particular time are friendly or unfriendly. The outcome of that call will be colored by the influence prevailing then.

If you wish an astrological chart covering your sign of the Zodiac, Bernice Denton Pierson will be glad to send it to you. State your birth month and date (year unnecessary). Write your name and address plainly. Accompany this with 10 cents in stamps or currency to cover clerical expenses, together with self-addressed, stamped envelope. "The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures"

From "Icones Biblicae," Swiss Etcher Matthew Merian's Chronological Story of the Bible, Published in 1625, in Germany

No. 182—"The Adulteress."—When Jesus, and the three disciples who had witnessed the Transfiguration, came down from the mountain to the multitude, He continued His works of healing, immediately restoring a lunatic child whose father appealed to Him. In Luke ix it is recorded that Jesus began another journey to Jerusalem, again passing through Samaria, and John vii says that the purpose of His journey was to attend the Jews' Feast of Tabernacles. "But when His brethren were gone up, then went He also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret." John vii, 10. The Jews sought for Him but failed to find Him, and no man spoke openly for Him for fear of the Jews. Jesus went up into the temple openly, however, and taught, and many marvelled at His learning. The Jews sought to take Him, "but no man laid hands on Him, because His hour was not yet come." The scribes and Pharisees brought a woman taken in adultery, and asked Jesus concerning her punishment, saying, "Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou? This they said, tempting Him, that they might have to accuse Him. But Jesus stooped down, and with His finger wrote on the ground, as though He heard them not. So when they continued asking Him, He lifted up Himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her. And again He stooped down and wrote on the ground: and they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst. When Jesus had lifted up Himself, and saw none but the woman, He said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? Hath no man condemned thee? She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more." John viii, 5-11.

No. 183—"The Parable of the Good Samaritan."—Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." John viii, 12. "And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted Him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou? And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself. And He said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live. But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour? And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. And by chance there came down a certain priest that way; and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side. And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was; and when he saw him, he had compassion on him, and went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn and took care of him. And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him: and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves? And he said, He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise." Luke x, 25-37.

No. 184—"Christ Visits Martha and Mary."—"Now it came to pass, as they went, that He entered into a certain village; and a certain woman named Martha received Him into her house. And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus's feet, and heard His word. But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to Him, and said, Lord, dost Thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me. And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." Luke x, 38-42. "And it came to pass, that, as He was praying in a certain place, when He ceased, one of His disciples said unto Him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught His disciples. And He said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us day by day our daily bread. And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. For a friend of mine in his journey has come to me, and I have nothing to set before him? And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee. I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give me, because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth. And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." Luke xi, 1-10.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle

:-: Culbertson on Contract :-:

THE DISTRIBUTIONAL NO-TRUMP.

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

EVER since the introduction of contract bridge, one certain bid has been the football of the system experimenters; a bid which has had requirements varying from pitiful weakness to gargantuan strength; a bid which, because of its lack of specific meaning has almost inevitably stymied the proper future development of the bidding. This troublesome bid was the original one no-trump.

When, finally I evolved the theory of the new distributional no-trump I shouted "Eureka"—but not loudly. Inwardly, I was sure that the solution had been found—but actually it was still only a theory and not until it had been complete and thorough testing in the hands of experts using it in actual play, could it become an accepted principle of the new 1935 Culbertson System.

An opening bid of one no-trump is made only on hands of 4-3-3-3 distribution and containing vulnerable or not vulnerable, about four to five honor-tricks in at least three suits. On hands fulfilling these requirements one no-trump should be bid despite the possession of a biddable suit.

There are two striking points in these new requirements which will instantly occur to all students of the game. First, the requirements in honor-tricks are considerably higher when not vulnerable than they have been before. Second, no attempt is made to show the biddable suits immediately. Yet these facts do not in any way violate any accepted principle of the Culbertson System.

Space precludes the chance to go into details at this time but readers and students of the Culbertson System will find from time to time further developments of this bid in these columns.

SQUEEZE AND END-PLAY.

An ambitious game contract was fulfilled by South on the hand below. He maneuvered a very beautiful squeeze and end-play against his right hand opponent. He lost only three tricks despite the opponents holding three aces, two queens and a jack against him, in addition to four trumps to the jack-nine in one hand.

South, Dealer.

North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♥	2♠	3♥
3♠	Pass	3NT	Pass (1)
4♠ (2)	Dbl. (3)	Pass	Pass

1—East deliberately does not double, feeling reasonably certain he can defeat a three no-trump contract, but not feeling so sure about four spades.

2—South, with his 4-4-4-1 distribution cannot stand no-trump and returns to four spades despite the fact he only has four cards of the suit in his hand.

3—West's double is certainly excusable. He does not expect to find two honors in spades behind him.

West laid down the heart ace since his partner had supported the suit. This card held the trick, East signaling with the eight-spot. A heart was continued, dummy's jack was topped by East's queen, and South trumped. He then laid down the ace and king of spades and followed with a small spade, finessing the ten in dummy, because East had shown out and had discarded a heart. The nine of clubs was led and passed around to West's ace. The West player had no good lead available. Considering the diamond lead too dangerous, he led another heart. The king in dummy won the trick, and South discarded a diamond. The queen of spades was led from dummy, dropping West's jack, and South discarding another diamond from his own hand. It is very unusual indeed when the declarer discards on a lead of his own trump suit.

A club was led from dummy, and another finesse taken against the queen, South's ten holding the trick. Declarer this time had a pretty good count on the opposing hands and knew he would drop the club queen by laying down the king. Consequently he led the queen of diamonds from his own hand, playing a low card from dummy.

East in the meantime was having his troubles. He knew he had to keep his club queen guarded as long as possible, and therefore was forced to bare down on the ace-jack of diamonds alone. He won the diamond lead with his ace, and was helpless. He either had to lead another club, which would have given South a third finesse in his suit or lead the jack of diamonds which would give the declarer two tricks in that suit. His lead was immaterial and the declarer made the rest of the tricks, losing only the three ace and fulfilling the double game contract for a top-score on the board.

One line of defense could have defeated the contract. Had East tenaciously held on to all his hearts and discarded diamonds, he would have been able to cash the setting trick with his remaining heart after winning the diamond ace.

Paris Presents—The Spring Collection

Radical Changes in the Silhouette Are Achieved in New Versions of Jackets, Capes and Skirts

By
Corson

Berets Continue in Popularity. This One, a Tiny Black Affair, With a Sharp White Quill, Is Worn Puffed Smartly Forward and Down, With a Veil of Wide Mesh Horse-hair Edged With Black and White Chenille.

CAPIES—are here in force—from CHANEL'S tiny ruffled shoulder capes of lace and tulle for evening to the hip-length tailored masterpieces presented by MARCEL ROCHAS, CREED, HEIM and many others.

BELL-HOP JACKETS—and military top-coats—as tightly fitted as is humanly possible, with narrow belts accenting the normal waistline (and heaven help you if you haven't a thin one!). Brief tails flaring on some hip-length suit jackets—and moulded bodices on everything.

SKIRTS—for evening, are voluminous, spreading all over the place. Day skirts are almost invariably trim and narrow with 12-inch slashes or hidden pleats giving the necessary fullness for freedom of movement.

SLEEVES—are draped, puffed, slashed, and even made to do double duty as capes—trimmed with narrow strips of flat fur or cuffed and bordered with silver fox. MARCEL ROCHAS goes in heavily for the balloon sleeve, MAGGY ROUFF uses long tight sleeves, LUCILLE PARAY adores the bouffant elbow length, etc.

PLAIDS—are everywhere in evidence from the silky whispering taffetas used in the sweeping full-skirted evening models, to the gay lapels and blouses—skirts, capes, et cetera, in linen, wool, cellophane, etc., of the tailleurs.

HATS—are of two types. They either snap down in elongated brims over the eyes—upturned in back, or are blown straight off the forehead in a turned-back arrangement. Jockey caps, children's sailors, Chinese umbrellas, and halo hats—are other versions to be seen.

The Windblown Type of Hat Is Executed by Talbot in "Coup de Vent." Above, A Turned-Up Brim in Back, Flat Shallow Crown and Snap Brim in Front, It Is the Last Word in Chic. At the Right, a Black Straw With Grosgrain Bow, Reverses in Style, Being an Off-the-Forehead Type.

The Cape Ensemble at the Left (Below) Is of Gray Ribbed Jersey With White Pique Bands Trimming the Loops of the Scarf Collar and the Bodice. At the Right, a Brown Wool Frock With the New Blouse Silhouette of Stitched Straps Tied in a Bow at the Throat and Running Under the Arms.

Flowerlike in Motif and Color Is This Exquisite Robe de Style of Pink Tulle With Petals Laid in Rows on the Extremely Full Skirt. A Satin Moire Girdle and a Garland of Tulle and Satin Blossoms About the Neck Finish the Bodice, While Brief Little Satin Gloves of Cyclamen Add a Charming Touch.

Plaids Are Being Featured This Season. On the Left, a Suit Featuring a Plaid Wool Skirt and Revers, With a Black Fitted Jacket and Blouse With White Organza Cravat. At the Right, a Tailored Navy Shantung Frock With White Pique Plastron and Collar. The Hats Are White Pique.

Matching Gloves and Bags Provide a Smart Touch to New Spring Ensembles. At the Left, a Set in "Havana Brown" Calf Velvet, Trimmed With Gold Eyelets. At the Right, an Evening Set of Threaded Black Silk Faille. Black Chiffon Is Used for the Palms and Fingers.

I NEVER INTENDED TO MARRY YOUR DAUGHTER AT ANY TIME. THAT WAS JUST A GAG. I ONLY WANTED YOU UP HERE SO MY SISTER AND I WOULD HAVE A MEANS OF SMUGGLING OURSELVES DOWN IN THE OZARK REGION WHERE WE CAN HIDE FROM THE COPS.

FROM THE COPS, HUH?

YEAH... THE COPS - UNDERSTAND?

AT THE MENTION OF THE WORD, "COPS" - YELLOWPONY IMMEDIATELY RECALLS THE UNIFORMED POLICEMAN WHO HELPED HIM OUT OF THE JAM WHEN HE RAMMED ANOTHER CAR ON HIS WAY INTO THE CITY ABOUT TWO WEEKS AGO...

YELLOWPONY NEVER FORGET TRAILS - INDIAN INSTINCT ALWAYS TELLS HIM RIGHT ROAD.

CLEVERLY REROUTING THE PARTY - YELLOWPONY DIRECTS THE BIG CAR TO THE DISTRICT WHERE DICK TRACY IS POUNDING HIS BEAT...

BORIS! LOOK! COPS! THE SQUAD CAR - THIS IS A TRAP!

HEY - COPS.. POLICE! ME YELLOWPONY! HELP!

WHY YOU DOUBLE-CROSSIN' RED SKIN... YOU DIRTY... THERE! STEP ON IT, ZORA!

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS, YELLOWPONY SLUMPS FORWARD... HIS SHOULDER STRIKES THE HANDLE OF THE CAR DOOR... THE DOOR UNLOCKS AND IS HURLED OPEN BY THE PRESSURE OF THE WIND....

AND THEN BEFORE ANYTHING CAN BE DONE TO PREVENT IT - THE LIMP FORM OF THE INDIAN ROLLS OUT ONTO THE HIGHWAY!

TRACY! DID YOU SEE THAT? A RIDE VICTIM - I SAW THE BODY THROWN OUT OF THE CAR.

Tarzan

THWARTED
RESCUE

TO TARZAN'S GREAT SURPRISE, THE BULLET FIRED BY SYBIL CLIPPED THE ROPE THAT BOUND HIM.

"RUN!" CRIED SYBIL. BUT INSTEAD, THE FEARLESS JUNGLE LORD RUSHED SWIFTLY TO HER AID.

"TAKE THEM ALIVE!" SHOUTED GARU THE WITCH-DOCTOR, WHO WISHED TO SEE THEM DIE BY SLOW TORTURE.

THE MIGHTY APE-MAN ACCOUNTED FOR FIVE MORE WITH A SPEAR HE HAD TAKEN FROM A WARRIOR.

TARZAN KNEW THEY MUST SOON BE OVERCOME. HE CRIED THE APE-CALL OF DISTRESS, HOPING THAT BOGHDU WOULD HEAR.

BUT THE POWERFUL APE SLEPT PEACEFULLY IN THE DEEP FOREST, UNAWARE OF HIS MASTER'S PERIL.

NOW TARZAN GRASPED THE GIRL AND LEAPED TOWARD A BRANCH OF THE TREE, BUT AN ALERT WARRIOR SEIZED HIS ANKLE.

TARZAN AND THE GIRL TOPPLED BACK INTO THE MIDST OF THE FOE; AND PRESENTLY THEY WERE OVERWHELMED AND BOUND TO THE TREE.

"I AM GRATEFUL FOR YOUR ATTEMPT TO SAVE ME," THE JUNGLE LORD SAID TO SYBIL.

"I DID NOT DO IT FOR YOU," SHE REPLIED, BUT TO SOOTHE MY PRIDE. I WANTED TO PROVE MYSELF EQUAL TO THE EMERGENCY" SOON IT WILL NOT MATTER," TARZAN SMILED. AND EVEN AS HE SPOKE GARU KINDLED THE FIRE THAT WAS MEANT TO CONSUME THEM!

NEXT WEEK: AMIDST THE FLAMES

The newest story in the TARZAN series—"Tarzan and the Fire Gods," is being published in strip form in The Daily Constitution.
